English Structure

Preface

English Grammar is a module which contains a description of the rules of the English Language. English Language teaching and learning has always been interesting and challenging. It is for this reason that this module has been developed and published in order to directly benefit the learners and enhance best results. This module will be of great help to the learners and teachers of the English Language for effective teaching and effective learning.

The junior Secondary School Syllabus English grammar is presented in the form of outcomes and stated in result terms. Outcomes are precise statements which state what learners have to do in order to show that they have learnt what is being taught. The specific outcomes are followed by the content in the form of knowledge, skills and values which learners must master in order to achieve the desired outcomes. The teacher's task is to provide effective learning experiences and activities that will enable the learners achieve the planned results.

The best way to prepare for English Language Examination is to read as much as possible and to read every day. This will help you develop your vocabulary and help you to become familiar with the language structure.

Remember that although your parents, guardians and teachers are all spurring you on, you are the one writing the exams and how well you perform ultimately depends on you and the effort you put in. Adopt a positive attitude towards learning as this will influence how you approach the exams. Remember your attitude determines your altitude.

o UNIT4: Question tags

A question tag is a short question that comes at the end of a statement. We use it to turn a statement into a question. There are two types of question tags. When the statement is affirmative or positive, the question tag is in negative

Example:

He is sick, isn't he?

They are early, aren't they?

He didn't eat the food, did he?

When the statement is negative, the question tag is affirmative or positive.

Example:

They don't eat pork, do they?

She doesn't write well, does she?

He doesn't know how to read, does he?

A question tag consists of a helping verb. Such verbs include can, do, have, must, and so on and a preposition such as I, he, she, they, we, it, will and so on and a pronoun such as I, he, she, they, we and it.

Example:

He can drive me, can't he?

You don't have money, do you?

The helping verb in the first part of the sentence is the same as the one in the question tag. This is the case even if the helping verb has been left out in the first statement.

Example:

He does play football, doesn't he?

He plays football, doesn't he?

There are some special forms of helping verbs. These include I am, used to, shall/will, need and needn't.

Example:

I am going with you, aren't I?

I am not going with you, am I?

Shall/will

Example:

Let us sit down, shall we?

Get me that chair, will you?

Whenever question and answer tag are used, the tenses used must be closely as shown in the following examples

You write neatly, don't you?

They are writing English, aren't they?

They have helped him before, haven't they?

UNIT 8: Conditional Sentences

A conditional sentence (clause) is a sentence that expresses a wish, a desire or a possibility. Conditional sentences (clauses) contain the word 'if' or 'unless'. They are called conditional sentences because a certain condition is supposed to be fulfilled in order for an action to take place. For example, Tom will go to the university if he passes well. This sentence means that Tom will only go to the university on condition that he passes well.

Conditional sentences consist of two parts:

- The main clause that tell us about the action of the sentence.
- The subordinate clause (if – clause) that depend on the main clause.

There are three types of conditional sentences namely; Type1, Type2, and Type3.

- Likely conditionals
- Unlikely conditionals
- Impossible conditionals

For example:

Type 1: If A happens, B will happen.

Type 2: If A happened, B would happened.

Type 3: If A had happened, B would have happened

In if (1) We use present simple tense in the if clause and the future simple tense in the main clause. (If + present simple tense + future simple tense)

Examples:

- a) If Peter comes, I will tell him a story.
- b) If we do not complete the work, mother will punish us.
- c) If Joseph comes, we shall go together.
- d) If I go to London, I will study law.

Join the following sentences using if (1)

- a) I will not pay you. First show me the book.
- b) He will not survive. He misbehaves.
- c) My friend will visit me. Her parents will allow her.
- d) He will learn. He listens to his teachers.
- e) My father will buy a radio. We shall be happy.

- f) I shall work hard. My teacher will buy me a present.
- g) If I were God. All the sinners will be punished.
- h) The farmers will plant their crops. It rains.
- i) You are lazy. You will die a poor person.
- j) You are a thief. You will be arrested one day.

In if (2) the condition cannot be fulfilled at all. It is just day dreaming. We use the past simple tense in the if clause and the condition in the main clause. (If + past simple tense + condition.

Examples:

- a) If I were you, I wouldn't eat snakes
- b) If I went to London, I would study law.
- c) If I were a rich, I would marry a queen.
- d) If I were a teacher, I would not beat the pupils.

Change the following sentences into If (2)

- a) If she writes to me, I will be very happy.
- b) The girls will sweep the class if the teacher tells them.
- c) If she does not come, we shall go there.
- d) Patience will bring me some mangoes if I sent her.
- e) David will ring me if he gets a mobile phone.
- f) If it rained today, my mother will sow her beans.
- g) If my problem is solved, I will grow fat.
- h) They will not go to school if we don't pay their school fees.
- i) Those boys will fetch water if they came back early.
- j) If the bank is open, I will withdraw some money.

In if (3) the condition cannot be fulfilled. One is just imagining what would have happen if a certain condition had not been fulfilled. We use the 'past perfect' in the if clause and 'would have' + a past participle in the main clause. (If + past perfect) + (would have), should have, could have, might have.

Examples:

- a) If I had eaten, I wouldn't have felt hungry.
- b) If she had seen me, she would have reported.
- c) If the thief had seen the policeman, he would have run away.
- d) If I had sat for the final examination, I would have passed.

Task 1

- h) They would not attend the burial if they were not informed.
- i) I would not go with them if they did not pay for my transport.
- j) If I died, I would resurrect.

UNITY 9: Direct and Indirect Speech

Direct Speech

This is the speech which gives the actual words of the speaker.

Guide lines on the use of direct speech.

- a) Only the exact words of a speaker are enclosed in the quotation marks

(" ") For example: "Are you going with me?" asked Sarah.

- b) When the sentence begins with the speech tag, a comma is placed before the actual words of the speaker so as to separate them. For example: Susan said, "My mother went to town."
- c) When the sentence begins with the very words of the speaker and the speech tag comes after, a full stop is put at the end. For example:
"My mother went to town," said Susan.
- d) After the quotation marks, the first letter should be capital. For example:
"Run to school," said the mother.

Examples:

- a) Moses said, "I am very hungry."
- b) "We are coming" said Juliet.
- c) "Why are you crying? The teacher asked me.
- d) "I will report the matter to the police" said the driver.

Indirect Speech

This speech just reports what the speaker says or said. It does not show the actual words of a speaker but only the information said. This speech is also referred to as the "reported speech"

Guide lines on the use of the indirect speech.

- a) Quotation marks are not used, for example

Direct: "I want food" said Peter.

Indirect: Peter said that he wanted food.

- b) We always use the word 'that' after the speech tag though it can be left out.

e.g. Jane said that she was bathing. Or Jane said she was bathing.

- c) If the speech tag is in the present simple tense, the tense does not change, for examples,

Direct: Allan says, "I must pass my exams."

Indirect: Allan says that he has to pass his exams.

Direct: "I don't eat beans," he says.

Indirect: He says that he doesn't eat beans.
