DIALOGUE COMPLETION

1 – 20: For these questions, choose the best option to complete the dialogue.

1. Bill: – Have you read this article? It says the world's birth rate is lowering.
Tom: – Yes, I have. Also, it says that even though this is the case, the world population isn't lowering.
Bill: – ----
Tom: – It would, but it seems that because of medical advances and improved living conditions, life expectancy has increased, so the world population reflects this.

   A) Do you think there is any hope for the elderly to have a better life in the future?
   B) Is it possible to reduce the world population by 50%?
   C) It was expected that the world's population would reach 16 billion by 2050.
   D) That's strange, I would think that the opposite would be the case.
   E) I don't think the senior citizens are appreciated the way they should be.

2. George: – I've been having stomach problems and my doctor told me I should avoid acidic food.
Bethany: – It's really important to have a balanced diet.
George: – I'm not sure what kind of foods I should be eating though.
Bethany: – ----

   A) By keeping a food diary, you can identify which foods trigger your symptoms.
   B) You might think it is harmless enough, but cheese is actually a very acidic food.
   C) Too much acidic food can cause gastritis which results in acid reflux.
   D) Some foods like broccoli are very alkaline, which is the opposite of acidic foods, so you should try and eat those foods.
   E) Finding out that coffee was bad for me was really difficult, but since I stopped, I've felt much better.

3. Philip: – I know you've been following the debate on growing human organ in animals. What do you think of it?
Karolyn: – I'm all for it, but I know some people aren't.
Philip: – ----
Karolyn: – That is the main reason. Throughout history and mythology, people have feared human and animal hybrids.

   A) Do you think it's because some people find it unnatural?
   B) Could there be another way in which we grow the organs?
   C) Plenty of people are against it though.
   D) I'm not sure that most people can see the benefits of this.
   E) Maybe in the future people will be more accepting these ideas.

4. Sylvia: – 1 in 3 worldwide deaths in 2012 were caused by cardiovascular diseases.
Neil: – That's interesting. Do you know the demographic features of those who died?
Sylvia: – ----
Neil: – I think it has to do with the genders, genetic makeup and not any particular lifestyle choices.

   A) No, but I know that women are more likely to suffer from heart disease than men are.
   B) That can't be right. I thought that many precautions were available to prevent such diseases.
   C) No, but I always thought that cancer was the leading cause of deaths worldwide.
   D) Actually, lifestyle is the main factor that influences the chance of heart problems.
   E) I need to exercise more so that I can build up my own cardio to prevent these problems.

5. Jenny: – Are you going to allow your child to catch the chickenpox?
Gerald: – Of course I am. People who have had the chickenpox as a child are much less likely to catch shingles, which is much more dangerous.
Jenny: – ----
Gerald: – Yes, I am aware of that and am ready to manage it when it occurs.

   A) I don't think it will do any good for your child.
   B) Doesn't your husband have the chickenpox currently?
   C) I don't want my child to get the chickenpox, you know this, right?
   D) Do you know that the chickenpox causes dangerously high fever?
   E) Rarely, serious side effects after chickenpox vaccination were reported.

6. Kristine: – I saw a documentary on the increasing negative effects of fast foods in the world.
Sam: – ----
Kristine: – That's right. Some nations have gone to a third of its population being obese within a decade.
Sam: – We really need to think of solutions to this problem.

   A) So did I. Some countries are reaching obesity levels at staggeringly high rates.
   B) Yes, I did. But long term effects are still a long way off.
   C) Commercial fast food franchises may start appearing more and more in the future.
   D) Do you think educating children in schools about a healthy diet is a good solution to this problem?
   E) I'll never understand why obesity affects the poor more than the rich in first world countries.

7. Celia: – The springs in Pamukkale were thought to have healing properties.
Danny: – ----
Celia: – That's correct, but although the springs provide refreshment and relief, it is unclear whether they actually possess healing properties.
Danny: – Maybe, they possess physiological rather than physical healing properties.

   A) While being a famous tourist destination, the city of Pamukkale is quite small.
   B) So I guess people would bathe in them in order to cure illnesses.
   C) People prefer to come to the springs through the upper road.
   D) Pamukkale is recognized as UNESCO World Heritage Sites since 1988.
   E) I've never heard of such a superstitious belief.

8. Max: – Apollo astronauts trained in Iceland because scientists thought that the terrain would most resemble the surface of the moon.
Xavier: – What parts of Iceland's landscape would most resemble the moon?
Max: – ----
Xavier: – I wonder if other nearby countries have similar terrains.

   A) There is nothing there, except for glacial rivers providing most of the country's electricity.
   B) They found the volcanic geology with practically no vegetation cover.
   C) Its climate is distinctly similar to the moon.
   D) I'm not sure, but I think it's because Iceland is filled with the icy mountain ranges.
   E) Astronauts train vigorously for years before they take part in any space expedition.

9. Jordan: – Using clean energy vehicles may present new problems.
Chuck: – It could, but at least it would mean we are moving towards a clearer and healthier environment through our lifestyle choices.
Jordan: – ----
Chuck: – It did use to be. However, now there are several affordable options that are becoming popular.

   A) What's the biggest problem from gas emissions?
   B) Renewable energy vehicles are generally one of two types.
   C) But isn't purchasing a renewable energy vehicle extremely expensive?
   D) Natural resources that would have been used for gasoline can be used for other purposes.
   E) Is it really possible to drive with renewable energy?

10. Dan: – Scientific evidence suggests an ice age covered North America and Europe for many years.
John: – Is that during the time when dinosaurs became extinct?
Dan: – ----
John: – Of course, that explains the lack of dinosaur fossils found in ice."

   A) North America was full of dinosaurs at that time.
   B) Yes, in fact that is probably what one expects, or at least hopes for.
   C) Exactly, so it seems that they have finally come up with a reasonable theory.
   D) No, I think they died out much earlier by other means.
   E) Well, if you think of it like that, no species would be alive today.

11. Molly: – A new research indicates that the earth's water is 1.7 percent ice and snow.
Buse: – Most of the visible water is liquid then?
Molly: – ----
Buse: – That's interesting. I would have thought that most of the water would have been in the oceans.

A) No, the deepest part of the ocean is located in the western Pacific Ocean.
B) Liquid water changes to a solid when temperature drops below freezing.
C) No, only a thousandth of 1% of the earth's water exists as water vapour in the atmosphere.
D) Not exactly, almost 70 percent of the earth's water is held inside ice caps and glaciers.
E) Yes, the earth is primarily covered by water, not land.

12. Jean: – Every year, thousands of acres are converted into desert through deforestation and desertification; do think people should be concerned about this?
Esra: – Absolutely, mankind must figure out a way to slow this environmental erosion.
Jean: – ----
Esra: – Easy; wood-based products should be taxed so that demand will decline; once this occurs the logging industry will have to slow production.

A) Do you think that the problem is solvable?
B) What should be done about it?
C) What can we do as citizens to provide information of practical steps?
D) How can we make the government notice these changes?
E) Is it possible to stop climate change with an extreme amount of new forest?

13. Jim: – Are there any differences in how employees are hired between Asian and Western countries?
Frank: – Yes, some things are entirely different.
Jim: – ----
Frank: – In the West, employers focus on the performance and punctuality, whereas in Asian, relationships are of much more importance.

A) Could you give me an example?
B) How does a person get hired in Asian countries?
C) What are the positive aspects of both?
D) What are the advantages of hiring a Western employee?
E) Which type of workers bring in more profits?

14. Filiz: – ----
Buse: – Most snakes have an excellent sense of smell, in part to make up for their poor eyesight and limited hearing.
Filiz: – So a dangerous snake might still be able to sense you, even if they can't see you?
Buse: – That's right. Don't worry though. Most snakes are more scared of you than you are of them, so just back away slowly.

A) Did snakes evolve from aquatic animals?
B) Do snakes have a good sense of smell?
C) Have you ever encountered a dangerous snake before?
D) How many senses do snakes have?
E) Does the smelling have anything to do with how snakes eat?

15. Theo: – Do you know if sign language is the same in every language?
Luke: – ----
Theo: – I guess there isn't a universal language in sign language then.
Luke: – Correct, maybe one day there will be; but for now, there are too many differences.

A) I do. I learned it while studying my master degree in linguistics.
B) While there may be many similarities, many of the signs differ from language to language.
C) Interpreters often fail to understand each other if the sign languages are from different countries.
D) English has become the universal language in this day and age, but that could change in the future.
E) You can still communicate with a deaf person by speaking if they know how to read your lips.

16. John: – Did Vikings actually have horns on their helmets during battle?
Kandis: – Historical sources suggest that priests among the Celtic and Norse peoples did wear helmets equipped with horns.
John: – I see, then why are they always depicted as warriors wearing horned helmets?
Kandis: – ----

A) The Vikings are infamous for their plundering ways.
B) The horns would be extremely difficult to fight with.
C) Surely it's quite obvious: they could help intimidate enemies.
D) They used them frequently in religious ceremonies.
E) It is placed between the temple and the forehead.

17. Paul: – A recent study has found that refugees that resettle in many countries are earning less than $2 per day.
Xavier: – Really? Even if they have full time jobs?
Paul: – ----
Xavier: – Clearly, certain employees are taking advantage of the plight refugees find themselves in.

A) No, it has nothing to do with the fact they are refugees.
B) Unfortunately, refugees are more likely to work in lower status.
C) Yes. Some are working over twelve hours a day for little to no pay.
D) Finding a job must be a difficult period as a refugee.
E) If more and more refugees migrate into countries, economies may have difficulty in providing them jobs.

18. John: – Do we need to give pedestrians the right of way when they cross the street?
Kyle: – ----
John: – Why is that?
Kyle: – Drivers are in a hurry, and when they are driving they often forget about the rights of pedestrians.

A) They usually respect the pedestrians' rights.
B) No. But we should try and help them in other ways.
C) I think it's of vital importance, but pedestrians may disagree.
D) Of course, but reckless drivers are often impatient in traffic.
E) It's essential, but cars often do not let them cross.

19. Deniz: – How is your archaeological dig going?
John: – It's going really well. We have been at it for about a month and have discovered some really interesting things.
Deniz: – ----
John: – Thanks, we just discovered a tomb that might help show us how the Egyptians practised medicine.

A) If I can be of assistance, please do not hesitate to contact me.
B) I'm glad you've had success; I know you were hoping to find something new.
C) Well done, how much does it cost to go on a project?
D) I'm sorry, it is not uncommon for archaeologists to work many more hours than is required.
E) It was about time; you had been at it for so long.

20. Enes: – Did you know that map making was invented by the Greeks.
Bill: – ----
Enes: – No, although the Romans are responsible for spreading the practice across the world.
Bill: – I guess we have to thank both societies for modern maps.

A) But the earliest discovered map was in Arabic.
B) Really? I always thought that it was the Romans.
C) Wouldn't it be hard to trade goods in far away places?
D) No, but navigation in ancient Rome did not rely on sophisticated instruments.
E) The compass and sextant made map making much easier.
