Word number one to confront when you are confronting somebody you're asking them something face to face and when you're using the word confront it actually has some negative meaning so for example when we say this politician has been confronted by a journalist that means that a journalist was kind of angry with this politician he was probably mentioning something but politician wouldn't be happy about well for example you can confront your enemy so this means asking something interacting face-to-face but with this negative attitude we will confront the the next word is coherent coherent means logical and strategical so for example I really want to be big in

Chinese social media and I have a coherent strategy I'm starting with Billy Billy first then I'm going to Chinese tick-tock and then I'm doing another platform but I'm doing the step by step it's a strategical and logical path to becoming big on Chinese social media coherent will be to make our money-raising activities more coherent logical empathy that is a feeling when you understand somebody's feelings and you take them into account when you're acting so for example when people hate you on youtube there isn't much empathy in their actions there isn't much empathy on Instagram when people are just hating each other so whenever people are hating you there is no empathy empathy is when you're trying to help empathy is when you understand that a person is doing a lot and he's doing a lot for free and you want to support them and you're showing your empathy control freak with no empathy witty and please pay attention to the way I say this word it's written with tea and if I taught you British British English I would say with tea because this is the way they say it in American we replaced EU with an R and the way we say this witty witty he's really witty I have a lot of videos about American pronunciation but I just want you to pay attention to the worst pronunciation the first time you encounter it so it's witty witty means smart with a good sense of humor for example you met somebody at a party and they're really witty because they are making the smart jokes and they're really funny you must be witty fabricate instead of saying make up I made this up this is not true you can say fabricate again fabricated evidence is something you will see in an article about a crime or whatever that means that this evidence was made up it was fake it was fabricated so when you make something up in order to protect yourself in order to confuse somebody you fabricate something and I hope you don't do that we don't fabricate anything that happens downstream inhabitant a person or an animal who lives in a place and occupies it so for example we're in Topanga and it has a lot of inhabitants we've already seen Paris we've already seen a lot of different birds we've seen rabbits we've seen here so seen so many living creatures and they are inhabitants of Topanga perhaps the native inhabitants can help us to reckon is a synonym to to believe to suppose to expect and British people love to use it I reckon you're coming with us which means I believe you're coming with us I reckon that it's gonna rain tomorrow I think it's gonna rain tomorrow too reckon just sounds more advanced new you're totally free to use it when you're talking to your friends for example what do you reckon to rifle to go through something in search for something here rifle through his stuff when he was looking for his sock rifle can you actually show it this is rifle rifling through things and I also wanted to give you some phrasal verbs because phrasal verbs I used all the time you cannot translate them verbatim which means you can't just understand their meaning by translating the first and second part you just need to learn what they mean and the first phrasal verb is to ask out he asked me out on a date to ask out means to invite on a date and you can just say he asked me out that means you're having the first date you are entering a romantic relationship you called ask out Monica to back down to withdraw from a position there was a Board of Directors and the CEO backed down which means that the CEO decided to leave the board you can't just back down instead of saying cancel the event you can say call off the event a lot of in-person events have been called off in the past months because of kovat because of shelter-in-place but a lot of them are actually coming back but still a lot of things that canceled a lot of things are called off call off the wedding to get away with something means to not be punished for doing something wrong my dog has eaten my dinner and she got away with it because I just love my dog so much they get away with it to pass out means to become unconscious and this phrasal verb is widely used in the u.s. So for example he was hanging out by the pool in the heat for so long that he passed out and we rushed him to the emergency room another word you can say is faint fainted yeah he needed to be rushed to the emergency room be careful the summer don't overheat don't pass out and the last but not the least turn down to refuse so for example somebody asks you out remember what it means and you turn them down because you don't want to enter any new romantic relationships this summer.
