{A slight but entertaining study in which first Black and then White sacrifice minor pieces. The zugzwangs are reciprocal, but lack a thematic try leading to the position with the wrong player to move. Still, a neat study which was a pleasure to solve. Basically the same final position has been seen before in Kalashnikov and Selivanov (#7555) and Kakovin and Motor (#28022), but curiously both these precursor studies are unsound (the first is cooked by 3 Kd4 and the second is bust by 4...Nf5!).} 1... {Despite the limited material, a very complex study - in fact, I was unable to solve it. When I saw the solution, I didn't believe that the study could be correct. After considerable manual analysis I concluded that it is sound (thanks to Marc Bourzutschky, this was later confirmed by using a database). It's really a remarkable position and a contribution to endagme theory. The study is based on a set of reciprocal zugzwangs (in all cases the pawns are on their current squares): Z1: Kc3 v Kc5, Bd1. It is obvious that this is a draw with Black to play, as if he moves his bishop White plays b4+ followed by a4. With White to play it is not so clear after 1 b4+, but Black wins by outflanking; for example, 1...Kd5 2 Kd2 Ba4 3 Kd3 Ke5 4 Ke3 Bb3 5 Kd3 Kf4 6 Kd4 Kf3 7 Kc3 Ba4 8 Kd3 Kf2 9 Kd2 Kf1 and now his king penetrates towards the white pawns. Z2: Kc3 v Ka5, Bd1. With White to play 1 Kb2 Kb6 2 Kc3 Kc5 is Z1. Black to play has nothing better than 1...Bh5, but after 2 Kd2 it's a draw. As soon as Black moves his king away from a5 White plays b4 and then a4. As we can see, occupation of d1 by Black's bishop is an important factor. Z3: Kd4 v Ka5, Be2. White to play can only continue 1 Kc3, but after 1...Bd1 we have Z2. If Black to play continues 1...Bh5, say, then 2 Kd3 (not 2 Kc3? Bd1) 2...Bd1 (or else Kd2 prevents ...Bd1) 3 Kc3 is Z2 with Black to play. If 1...Bf1, then 2 Kc3 and 3 Kc2 (or d2). Now it is possible to understand the solution.} 1. Kc7! ({Not} 1. Kd7? Kb7 2. {Another judge might well have rated this study lower, but I feel it has several merits. The play soon leads to a position in which one might well resign in an over-the-board game, but White pulls off a remarkable save based on a mid-board stalemate. The position is natural and there are no complicated sidelines (in fact, no sidelines at all!) to distract from the main point of the study. The only real defects are the perfunctory introductory play and the fact that Black's h5-rook doesn't move during the solution. I would also have preferred to have Black to play in the initial position rather than White's king in check. A somewhat similar idea has been shown by this composer (#20388) but the current setting is considerably superior to the earlier one in that the pieces move into place in a more natural way and White's king performs a switchback.} 1. {In this complex study the white king is totally immobilised on the square h1 and the first part of the

{The organizers and IGM Nona Gaprindashvili herself express gratitude to all participants of the tournament. 35 studies were received from these 19 composers: M.Minski (Germany), J.Kratz (Germany), G.Josten (Germany), S. Hornecker (Germany), R.Martsvalashvili (Georgia), S.Tsurtsumia (Georgia), R. Tsurtsumia (Georgia), I.Akobia (Georgia), D.Makhatadze (Georgia), V.Kalandadze (Georgia), J.Mikitovics (Hungary), A.Pallier (France), R.Becker (USA), C. Poisson (France), L.Gonzales (Spain), O.Pervakov (Russia), A.Skripnik (Russia), Y.Bazlov (Russia), A.Sochnev (Russia). As known, the theme of the given tournament was - realization of echo mates, or an echo stalemates in the main line (lines). Unexpectedly, given task has appeared difficult enough for some participants. Many very interesting original works, which we have received, mismatched a theme of tournament (they have not clear identical positions of final mates or stalemates). Also, it is necessary to note, that some of works had very close anticipations. Because of these reasons, only 6 studies have been noted. The winner of tournament became work of Georgian - USA duet.} 1. Rh6+! ({try} 1. Rxe3!? fxe3 2. Rh6+ Kg7! (2... Kg8? 3. Rh2! { and the play leads to main thematic line}) 3. Rh2 Qf4! 4. {As is known KBBN against of KR wins without problems. However, here White have "indemnification" - three pawns. But, except one they are not protected and besides, the white king has not so good position. Also turn of a move of the black. It gives them the initiative. The thematic tries (except for the one on the first move, which is only a try in this particular tourney) are really excellent because the pinning/unpinning moves are a real festival including halfpins both as "pinning" and unpinning moves. Also in the main line 7.d6 is an unpinning move, but also a halfpin, and 8.d7 is a selfpin, with 8...Ke6 as an unpinning move. All of it is crowned by a very natural excelsior. It must be said, however, that this study lacks surprise, a prerequisite of studies in non-thematic tourneys. But here I do not care. HvH}) 1-0

An excellent study involving three stalemates (and another one in a sub-subline) and a positional draw based on a systematic manoeuvre involving pinning and unpinning, although the line ends abruptly. Also, the pinning/unpinning moves feel a bit coincidental. The composer compensated for this by adding an introduction also involving the thematic pinning and a B-sac. An almost perfect achievement. Well, maybe only for the same reason why the famous masterpiece by Gurgenidze and Kalandadze of Shakhmaty v SSSR 1975 won only the second prize: Bad luck that there was a study of equally high quality in the tourney and the judge liked it more. At first I was not very impressed by the content, but then I never could have forgiven myself to rate this lower than it deserves to be. In a world where Oleg Pervakov/^s idea in 64 Shakhmatnoe Obozrenye 2000 wins a first prize only for one surprise move - in a regular tourney - there is no reason to give a similarly surprising move, with some not too bad foreplay, not a prize.} 1/2-1/2

The author wrote - and I did therefore not look for anticipations for this study - the following lines: 1974 I published the following study in the Polish monthly "Szachy" [Position without Pb3] The study won initially the first prize and later was disqualified due to a non original stalemate position!! At the time it was a blow for a young composer to see a famous composer sending a false appeal in an attempt to improve his position in the final award. Some famous composers are still doing it but I care a bit less. Recently I discovered that I can improve on that youth effort by adding just one pawn. The result: All four underpromotios are now displayed in a King and pawns ending. Moreover the 2 underpromoted pieces continue their accurate fight for another (record?) 8 more moves. The study might be found suitable for both tourney sections and I leave it to Siegfried to decide. (See below). He should therefore kindly be aware of all these details of the story. While I have to agree with the author that - let me say it in my own words - the judge must have been not very competent for excluding the study from the award due to an anticipated stalemate position (a claim that indeed is correct, by the way) there of course is no way to revise that judgment after such a long time. However, there is a way to do justice to the work, a stunt that however makes it unable to give out any reward, that would have been promised for an usual placement, for its entrance into the award. The study, in full knowledge of the above story as submitted by the author, is awarded for its construction as a whole, and not only of the final eight moves, a special prize. Yes, this is an unjustified distinction, but it is necessary to counter the unjustified removal of a distinction! If the study would have to be judged normally, it could never have received a prize again in view of the predecessor. I hope for the author/^s understanding that I can/^t award a monetary prize for this improvement. However, as a consolation I can offer him a book prize. Do two injustices balance each other out? I hope so. There must be a human view towards art and its creators, one that in rare cases like these must outlaw the usually applied technical view. I know my judgment of this study is wrong on the technical view, but on the human view it could not be correct to refuse this study the justice it deserves.} 1-0

These difficulties are especially felt in the first several moves. But, we should expect some complexity is in a tourney with the theme "rook studies with some quiet moves". In the solution, we can see there are many moves marked with exclamation points ("!"). The precision of this study is astounding, both of White's play in the main variations and Black's play in the tries. Possibly the difficulty of the study is exaggerated by the inability of chess engines to quickly provide an evaluation of certain lines. This is caused by the "horizon effect". The critical points in some lines occur after many pawn moves by both sides, pushing the analysis beyond easy calculation by chess engines. These lines are not so incomprehensible to human players. Indeed, the principles involved are quite standard for endings with R+2 connected pawns versus R + pawn on opposite wing. See "Rook Endings" by Levenfish and Smyslov, pages 104-106. I'm sure that this work provides some important answers to chess practitioners and researchers of a rook endings} 1/2-1/2
