SECTION THREE: Reading Comprehension (11-25)

Directions: Read the following passages carefully and answer the questions that follow. Each question has four choices. Choose the best alternative and blacken the letter of your choice in the answer sheet provided.

Passage I

1. You often hear people talking about preserving our country's traditions, about how the new generation is losing track of its heritage. The topic is heard everywhere and has become rather tiresome. It is a recurring phenomenon on the media that takes on many shapes and forms, be it an interview, a panel discussion, a documentary, or just a public opinion phone-in broadcast. It is, therefore, natural for us to try and consider whether there is any truth to the contents of all these media and public discussions and debates that seem to have no end.

2. Looking closely at the hot discussion topic areas of the subject, we find the debate of the generations that, at its core, contains the battles of blame. The older generation blames the new for having no self-esteem – for falling victim to the trivial and superfluous 'style' of the West. Some people prefer to see the source of this evil as the failure of the older generation to properly educate and bring up its youths in a way they can appreciate and be proud of their own culture. Still others, 'the conspiracy theoreticians,' try to have us believe that all this is a result of a carefully planned and orchestrated invasion of the mind by the west in an attempt to control and enslave the third world. Everybody, it seems, is so immersed in the 'who' that they have lost track of the real question, which I believe is the why.

3. Why do young Ethiopians prefer to wear western clothes? Why do they enjoy listening to Western music, watch Western films? Why do a lot of teenagers find it easy to speak in English than Amharic? But, most of all, why do so many Ethiopians want to live and work in Western countries rather than staying here with their families and friends? The answer, for me, lies in the basic psychology of humans. We are wired by nature to admire winners. We worship victory and do all we can to share in on the celebration of a triumph even when the victor has nothing to do with us. How many times have we heard an Ethiopian soccer fan saying, "We won!" of course referring to some European football team? We look out for front-runners everywhere we go. We sniff them out in any way we can. So, would it be so amazing if we fancy the military, economic, and political champions of the world, and try to assimilate their everything into our lives?

4. It may seem that a lot of Ethiopians migrate to western countries like the US motivated mostly by money. Although this cannot be denied, it does not answer the question why these people did not want to go to other prosperous countries. The westerns, especially the US, lead the financial, economic, military, scientific, entertainment, and political world. Kids in countries that trail behind these western nations grow up admiring the achievements of these 'wondrous people' and desperately envying them. The result of this is of course an unhealthy personal development in which these kids develop a misguided sense of attraction to the subjects of their childhood fancy. And then, imagine this going on for generations!

5. Do not assume I am implying that the situation is hopeless. I do believe that we can find our way back to gaining our sense of pride and cultural awareness. If we take notice of the things going on in world and take actions, we can certainly achieve what may seem an impossible task. People are generally attracted to things that 'work' and stand for something; stylish – even better. The Asians are great models in this regard. The Sushi and other Chinese food items, the Japanese 'Samurai Sword', the martial arts, and many others have been assimilated even in the day to day activities of the Western people. These people achieved this by coming up with things that attract the attention of people not because they are fancy, but they stand for something and are very practical. The Asians are not fearful of change as we are. They embrace it and try to contribute to it. Unlike us, they actively modify their heritage to fit a new day. All we have been able to do so far is fashion few of our traditional clothes into different styles.

6. In times of extreme competition and globalization, it is certain that we are about to be overrun by a variety of cultural, economic, and even lingual domination from which there appears to be no escape. The situation, therefore, begs the question, "Are we really ready to take action?" Even if the answer was yes, it is essential that we be on the right track first. We cannot solve anything if we do not understand the problem, and the circle of blame is not where we need to be. It may not be clear who is at fault for this problem, but it is crystal clear that knowing whom to blame is not going to take us anywhere, and pursuing this line of thought would, in fact, be counterproductive.

Passage II

When a swarm of these buzzing bloodsuckers enter the car, it was by no means easy to deal with them for they are swift and persistent as well as tough. If they are merely swatted, like house-flies, they may momentarily give up the fight because of broken legs or bent wings, but they will soon pull themselves together and start biting again. They must be properly caught and squashed between forefinger and thumb till they crack. Magbo, our driver, always insisted that they are not really dead until you have pulled their heads off. Tsetse flies are not only more bloodthirsty than lions and wild dogs, they are also more successful. Wild animals have to give way to men whenever settlers want to evict them from their homeland. It is easy enough to exterminate leopards, elephants, buffaloes and antelopes. But the Tsetse fly does not surrender so easily. To wipe out this insect, it takes a great deal of intelligence and money.

With mosquitoes and most other flies, only the females drink blood. The males live on fruit juice and other innocuous liquids. Both male and female Tsetse flies drink blood, however, and have never been observed feeding on anything else. Small cutting teeth on the proboscis quickly penetrate the skin and soon pierce a minute blood vessel. This causes a small lake of blood to form just below the skin. The fly squirts saliva into it to prevent the blood from clotting. Then it begins to suck up the blood, and its shrunken stomach becomes visibly fuller and redder.

21. From the facts given in the passage, one can be sure of getting rid of the Tsetse fly once and for all by:
    A. Breaking its legs C. Bending its wings
    B. Pulling its head off D. Swatting it with flat objects
22. According to the passage, the Tsetse fly differs from other flies in that it;
    A. Has more wings C. Has thicker skin
    B. Lays more eggs D. Cannot be eliminated very easily
23. The main reason why the Tsetse fly squirts its saliva into the blood of its victim is to;
    A. Solidify the blood. C. Keep the blood from clotting
    B. Make the blood more tasty D. Lay eggs in the blood
24. The males live on fruit juice and other innocuous liquids. The underlined word means;
    A. Dangerous B. Mild C. Vegetarian D. Poisonous
25. Small cutting teeth on the proboscis quickly penetrate the skin and soon pierce a minute blood vessel. The underlined word means;
