

Eshú, the Cosmic Gatekeeper

Imagine that your house is a small universe. To enter and exit, you need to go through a door. Well, Eshú is like the gatekeeper of that universe. But he's not just any gatekeeper—he's a very special one, a little mischievous yet extremely wise.

A long time ago, when the world was newly created, the gods needed someone to watch over the gateways between different worlds. Eshú, with his curious nature and deep knowledge of the roads, was chosen for this important task.

At first, some of the gods thought Eshú was too unpredictable for such a great responsibility. But they soon realized that no one else could do the job as well as he could. Eshú knew all the secrets of the roads. He could open doors no one else could open—and close those no one else could close.

That's why, when you build your home, it's important to give Eshú a special place. By placing his image or symbol at your entrance, you are saying: "Eshú, I welcome you into my home. Watch over me and my family." And Eshú, happy to have a new place to guard, takes care of protecting your home from negative energies and attracting good fortune.

Why is it so important to have Eshú at the entrance?

- Eshú acts like a shield, protecting you from bad vibes and people with harmful intentions.
- By honoring Eshú, you attract good luck and prosperity to your home.
- Eshú helps you communicate with the spirits and the gods, making it easier to resolve problems and achieve your goals.

In summary:

Eshú is like a loyal friend who is always there to protect you. By giving him a special place in your home, you ensure that a powerful and wise guardian is always by your side.
