muchGst104...9/10

1. An Academic library is:

Ans: Library of academic institutions such as universities, polytechnics and colleges of education

2. What type of classification scheme is commonly used in academic library?

Ans: Library of Congress Classification Scheme (LC)

3. Identity the kind of library that usually engages in repackaging of information using audio-visual materials and indigenous languages to render information services to the illiterate class.

Ans: public library

4. Current Awareness Services can be differentiated from selective dissemination of information in that:

Ans: Current Awareness Services is when there is an established system for reviewing publications immediately at receipt, selecting information pertinent to the programme of the organization served, and recording individual items to be brought to the attention of these, persons to whose work are related while selective dissemination of information is when users are provided with relevant information that will promote their research and other day – to – day activities

5. Which section of the library is responsible for charging and discharging of library resources?

Ans: circulation section

6. Journal articles of original contents are examples of:

Ans: primary sources info

7. Literature identification is a step in literature review when:

Ans: The researcher get familiarized with resources (print or electronic, primary, secondary or tertiary resources) that will be relevant to the research topic

8. Analyzing the literature is a step in literature review when:

Ans: The researcher skims each article to enable him group articles into topics and subtopics; then reading to critically analyze each article

9. Academic Search Premier, JSTOR, PubMed/Medline, and ScienceDirect are suitable database(s) for:

Ans: Students in the faculty of sciences

10. One major disadvantage of microform catalogue is that of

Ans: Flexibility and currency