How to apply for Tech companies

Here's a step-by-step guide on how to apply for roles in these companies if you have a career gap:

1. Google

- Visit the Careers Page: Go to Google Careers.
- Search for "Return to Work" Programs: Type "Return to Work" or "Returnship" in the search bar, or filter by location.
- Submit Your Application: Create a profile and upload your resume.
- Customize Your Resume: Emphasize your past experiences, transferable skills, and any relevant upskilling or certifications done during your break.

2. Amazon

- Visit Amazon Jobs: Head to Amazon's Returnship Program page.
- Search for Relevant Positions: Look for openings under the "Returnship" program.
- Prepare Your Application: Ensure your resume reflects your previous experience and the reason for your career break, and mention any learning or volunteer work done during the gap.
- Submit: Create a profile and apply through the platform.

3. Deloitte

- Deloitte's Encore Program: Visit Deloitte's Careers Page.
- Search for "Encore Program": Use the search function and type in "Encore Program" or "Career Reentry" to find opportunities.
- Apply: Follow the instructions to submit your resume and cover letter. Tailor your application to highlight your relevant skills and explain your career break.

4. IBM

- IBM Tech Re-Entry Program: Visit the IBM Careers Page.
- Search for "Tech Re-Entry": Look for IBM's re-entry program through their search bar or filter.
- Prepare a Strong Application: IBM is focused on technical roles, so include any recent certifications or self-learning activities in areas like data science, AI, or cloud computing.
- Apply: Submit through the IBM job portal by creating a profile.

5. Schneider Electric

- Visit Schneider Electric's Careers Page: Go to Schneider Electric Careers.
- Search for Opportunities: Look for career restart programs or general listings that support flexible hiring.
- Use the Open Talent Market: If applicable, join the "Open Talent Market" platform, which can help match you with job opportunities.
- Apply: Submit your resume and fill out an application tailored to the position you're interested in.

General Tips for Applying:

- Networking: Many career re-entry programs are also promoted through networking platforms like LinkedIn. Consider joining returnship-focused groups or following company pages to stay updated.
- Upskill: If you've upskilled through online courses or projects during your career gap, highlight this prominently in your resume.
- Tailor Your Cover Letter: Acknowledge your career break and explain why you are returning, focusing on the skills and experience that you bring to the table.
- Use LinkedIn: Search for specific company programs on LinkedIn Jobs, where many companies also promote their returnship programs.
