U-turn on B'klyn road bid

City returns to bike-lane plan that chops McGuinness Blvd.

BY EVAN SIMKO-BEDNARSKI
NEW YORK DAILY NEWS

The city is making an about-face on Brooklyn's McGuinness Blvd., returning to a plan to reduce traffic lanes on the southern section of the deadly road and install protected bike lanes.

The plan, announced by the Department of Transportation on Wednesday, will reduce the southern section of the four-lane, north-south thoroughfare to two lanes of motor vehicle traffic, replacing one lane in each direction with parking.

Those parked cars will then serve as a protective barrier for bike lanes in both directions running between the parking lane and the sidewalk.

The changes will go into effect from Calyer St. to Meeker Ave.

"This administration is committed to making our streets safer for all New Yorkers, no matter how they travel around our city – by car, by bike, or on foot," Meera Joshi, the city's deputy mayor for operations, said in a statement.

"I am grateful to DOT for its commitment to McGuinness Blvd. and willingness to adapt to community and elected officials' feedback, and of course to New Yorkers for their candor," she added.

The design comes a little more than a month after the DOT announced it was going ahead with a reduced version of the plan that would have installed unprotected bike lanes and left all four lanes of traffic. A similar set-up was installed earlier this year for the section of McGuinness Blvd. north of Calyer St.

Bike lanes on northern section of McGuinness Blvd. in Greenpoint (above) will be added to with southern section of street getting lanes in an extension from Calyer St. (top) to Meeker Ave.

The two-lane reduction announced Wednesday for the southern section had initially been part of a more comprehensive redesign, drawn up after the 2021 hit-and-run killing of beloved Brooklyn teacher Matthew Jensen.

That plan got axed by Mayor Adams' administration in 2023, making McGuinness one of several bike-lane, traffic-calming flash points between the administration, street safety advocates and local elected officials.

A consortium of local Brooklyn elected officials slammed the scaled-back August proposal in an open letter at the time, saying it "fail[ed] Greenpoint by preserving the most dangerous elements of this roadway that runs through the middle of our community."

Brooklyn Borough President Antonio Reynoso, who was among those who signed onto the letter, said Wednesday that he was grateful to Adams and Joshi for agreeing to the compromise.

"When this goes through, the community will be deeply grateful to the administration for taking a step back [and reassessing]," he said.

Charge B'klyn candidate's aide in donor scheme

BY JOHN ANNESE
NEW YORK DAILY NEWS

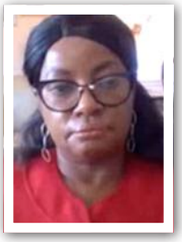

The treasurer for an unsuccessful Brooklyn borough president candidate faces federal charges for a failed straw donor scheme to trick the city Campaign Finance Board out of hundreds of thousands of dollars in public matching funds.

Erlene King, 71, who worked on the 2021 primary campaign of Democrat Anthony Jones, is in plea negotiations after she was charged with wire fraud Wednesday in Brooklyn Federal Court.

King (photo) is accused of trying to take advantage of the city's 8-to-1 matching campaign funds program by submitting to Jones' campaign $25,000 in straw donations, along with five corresponding "fictitious records," in the hopes of getting $400,000 in matching funds. The Campaign Finance Board noticed something fishy and denied the matching funds.

On Wednesday, King pleaded not guilty to a "criminal information" finding after waiving an indictment. That typically signals a defendant's willingness to plead guilty on the spot, though Assistant U.S. Attorney Eric Silverberg said at the hearing that plea negotiations would likely continue for 30 to 60 days.

King used money-transfer apps like Cash App to send money to the supposed donors, then asked them, in turn, to make $175 donations to the campaign, the feds allege.

The feds laid out several of these transactions in a court filing Wednesday. On May 11, 2021, she sent one person $1,100 and a second person $540, telling that second person in a message, "Contribute … for me 175×3 ppl 180 each," according to the feds.

She paid another would-be contributor $1,700 on June 26, 2021, the feds allege. Three days later, that contributor wrote in an Instagram message to yet another prospective donor, "I need to contribute to this guy's election but since [I] don't live in [Brooklyn] I can't directly contribute. So I'm giving my [Brooklyn] friend the money to donate for me. If [I] can give you 175 to donate to his campaign that would help me out a lot[.]"

King, who was released on her own recognizance, returns to court Oct. 30.

She declined comment Wednesday.

Her lawyer John Wallenstein called the allegations "old news" from the 2021 Brooklyn borough president campaign, but declined to comment further.

Jones came in eighth in a field of 12 primary candidates, getting just 3% of the vote and losing to Antonio Reynoso, who won the general election that November. Jones ran on the Rent is 2 Damn High line in the general election, and got 2.7% of the vote.

His campaign still owes more than $720,000 in debt, public records show. He raised about $83,000 in donations, but spent more than $810,000, Campaign Finance Board filings show.

Jones, who is not charged with a crime, could not immediately be reached for comment Wednesday.

In a November 2021 hearing, Jones tried to challenge that denial, telling the Campaign Finance Board, "I'm concerned. I'm a little confused … I believe that everything that we were asked to do about the campaign, we did it … I believe that my treasurer did follow the rules."

The CFB's counsel, Joseph Gallagher, said that the board denied the matching funds after finding "28 noncredible signatures on affirmation statements."

King said she sent field staff out to gather signatures affirming donations, and blamed problems with those signatures on COVID-19, suggesting that donors' signatures might have changed as a result of the pandemic's effects.

"I would never have submitted a signature I knew was not correct," she said. "I would never have done that."

Att'y raps NYPD for allowing 'ticking time bomb' alcoholic officer

SHAWN INGLIMA FOR NYDN; WILLIAM FARRINGTON/POOL; COURTESY OF ATTORNEY

BY SHEETAL BANCHARIYA, THOMAS TRACY AND ELLEN MOYNIHAN
NEW YORK DAILY NEWS

The family of a man left a quadriplegic when he was shot in a New Jersey road rage clash is suing the NYPD for allowing the alcoholic cop accused of the crime to keep his service weapon while in a violent "downward spiral."

Kishan Patel, 30, was driving home on May 17 when he was idling next to "ticking time bomb" NYPD Officer Hieu Tran at a light near Route 73 and Cooper Road in Camden County, according to the suit filed on Monday. Tran was arrested on June 6 for attempted murder, aggravated assault and weapon possession and is awaiting trial in Camden Criminal Court.

New Jersey police say Tran, 27, pulled his service weapon and opened fire on Patel's pickup truck in a fit of road rage. Surveillance footage shows Patel speeding away in a panic, his truck riddled with bullets, before crashing into another vehicle while the shooter drives off.

Patel, who had recently gotten engaged, was just minutes from home when he was targeted, relatives said at a press conference outside Manhattan Federal Court Wednesday.

"Kishan is full of life. He really enjoyed his life. He worked really hard. He worked every day, seven days a week. He has passion for cars. He loves music," said the victim's mother Manjina Patel, who added that her son ran three businesses, including a liquor store.

"Why did he do this?" said Manjina Patel. "He just pulled up next to him and randomly shot at him. Why? I want to know why he did that. I need to know that. It just doesn't make sense."

Tran was returning from a wedding and later claimed he didn't remember what happened with Patel because he had too much to drink.

"After leaving Patel to bleed uncontrollably in the cab of his pickup truck, Officer Tran calmly drove north, stopped for gas, went home to New York, reloaded his weapon and went to work the next day like nothing had happened," the lawsuit filed by Patel's family charges. "Officer Tran was also found to have been conducting internet searches to learn about the shooting."

Defendants in the federal lawsuit, filed in the Southern District of New York, include New York City, Tran, Mayor Adams, several unnamed NYPD officers and former NYPD Commissioner Edward Caban, who resigned last month amid an FBI probe into allegations that his twin brother was selling security favors to nightclubs.

Patel suffered massive brain and spinal cord injuries from both the shooting and the crash, Patel's lawyer Joseph Marrone wrote in court papers. Since the shooting, he's been left a quadriplegic and will require "24/7 skilled nursing care for the rest of his life." Besides Patel, a woman in another car struck by his pickup truck was injured, officials said.

Marrone said Patel's care will cost $1 million per year. His family says they will be bringing Patel to a facility in Texas Thursday for neurotherapy.

"We don't care where we have to travel, how far we have to go, that doesn't matter," said Patel's mother. "It's so hard for us every day, juggling work. we're never home. We don't eat properly, you don't sleep. Your life is just turned upside down."

Patel's brother-in-law Dan Gaughan said the Texas facility will try to determine why Patel isn't fully regaining consciousness.

"Our goal was to get him to wake up, be nonverbal but communicative and aware of his surroundings. They told us they can't guarantee anything since every case is different, but they think that's a realistic goal for now. After that, we'll aim for more, like verbal communication, but it's a step-by-step process."

During his June 25 detention hearing in Camden County Criminal Court, prosecutors said Tran suffers from PTSD and alcoholism. A psychologist examined Tran, who determined the young cop was on a "downward spiral," prosecutor Peter Gallagher said, according to court transcripts attached to the lawsuit.

"The doctor goes on [to] opine that, 'It seems inevitable that something tragic was impending in his life based upon his physical, psychological and emotional deterioration,'" Gallagher said in court. "So if I read this correctly, the doctor's essentially opining that this was almost inevitable that this defendant was going to do something awful."

"[Tran] was a powder keg or a time bomb waiting to go off," Gallagher added. "Chillingly, Judge, a man – this victim, Kishan Patel – by all appearances this defendant had never even met before the crime – before this occurred. This victim just had the misfortune to be driving down the same road as the defendant while the defendant was driving home armed."

Tran was arrested more than two weeks after the incident at his job. After being extradited to New Jersey, he was ordered held without bail during his arraignment proceeding in June and has been in custody in Camden County since, according to the suit.

Despite the cop's problems, neither the NYPD nor the city took any steps to disarm Tran or force him to get help, the suit says. Instead he was just "advised" to get treatment, the lawsuit claims.

"The NYPD did nothing to prevent Officer Tran from taking his NYPD issued weapon and using it to commit acts of violence and mayhem," the suit says.

Judge Michael Joyce noted during the arraignment proceeding that Tran's "commanding officer in New York PD told him to get treatment for [his alcoholism] and [he] didn't do it," according to the transcript.

"[They] knew that Tran had significant mental health challenges with longstanding alcoholism, despite his being only 27 years old," the lawsuit states. "Somehow, he was accepted into the NYPD and armed with a service pistol, but soon became a 'problem officer' who needed to be taken 'off the street.'"

After three years with the department, Tran was moved from a Harlem precinct to the social media team of the NYPD's press office but was still allowed to be armed. He was suspended without pay after his arrest.

The suit gave 18 examples of other officers over the years who have demonstrated problems with substance abuse and said the department has failed to address its "accepted alcohol culture," showing "deliberate indifference" that led to Patel's encounter.

An email to the city's corporation counsel was not immediately returned.

Patel's mother says she is still in disbelief that a cop is allegedly responsible for her son's condition.

"First of all, I was shocked when I found out that he was an NYPD officer. I had to ask the police, 'Are you sure? It can't be. Are you sure you got the right person?'" said Manjina Patel.

"I was in shock. I still can't believe it."

MORE RAPS 'LIKELY' IN ADAMS PROBE

Mayor makes fed court appearance in corruption case; prosecutors say additional charges, defendants loom

BY MOLLY CRANE-NEWMAN, JOSEPHINE STRATMAN AND CHRIS SOMMERFELDT
NEW YORK DAILY NEWS

Mayor Adams may face more charges in his historic federal corruption case for allegedly selling his political influence to Turkish powerbrokers in a years-long conspiracy – along with several others in his orbit "likely" to be indicted, prosecutors divulged in court Wednesday.

Hagan Scotten, a prosecutor for Manhattan U.S. Attorney Damian Williams' office, made the stunning revelation during the mayor's first appearance before Manhattan Federal Judge Dale Ho, who is overseeing the case.

Scotten said it was "possible" that Adams – the first sitting mayor in modern New York history to be criminally indicted – would face additional charges.

"We think that is quite likely," Scotten said when asked by Ho if a superseding indictment was forthcoming, noting the feds were moving "quickly" and conducting several related investigations. "And likely additional defendants will be charged in this scheme."

Scotten didn't elaborate on who the additional defendants may be or what charges they could face. Adams' indictment alleges the mayor had multiple "co-conspirators" in his bribery scheme, many of whom Scotten said would testify at the trial.

Contemporaneous reports as well as sources who know the unnamed co-conspirators listed in Adams' indictment have made clear they include Brianna Suggs, his longtime political fundraiser, Rana Abbasova, his local Turkish community liaison, as well as a high-ranking diplomat in the Turkish Consulate in Manhattan.

None of those individuals have to date been publicly accused of wrongdoing by the feds.

Hagan revealed the likelihood of additional charges shortly after Adams took his seat in Ho's courtroom for the first time. Later in the hearing, he accused the mayor of meddling in the feds' criminal probe by telling a witness not to talk to the FBI.

Adams' legal team pushed the judge to put the case on trial by March and before ballots are certified in the Democratic mayoral primary, which is set to take place in June.

Spiro said Adams' reelection campaign will play out differently depending on whether he's headed into it "an acquitted innocent man rather than a man under the weight of this case."

"They indicted the sitting mayor of New York. There is a primary election," the mayor's lead attorney, Alex Spiro, said. "We're asking the court to set it today; there's no reason not to."

Ho declined to set a trial date immediately, though he told Spiro he'd take his request under advisement. He gave the feds two weeks to respond to a set of motions Spiro filed this week asking Ho to dismiss a bribery count in the indictment and sanction prosecutors for allegedly leaking confidential grand jury information to the press.

Ho acknowledged that the public "and Mayor Adams have an interest in a speedy trial here, and I agree that interest is heightened."

Earlier in the hearing, Hagan revealed that the investigation into Adams' campaign was launched in the summer of 2021 – "before the defendant had even become mayor" – and said that the evidence prosecutors had gotten their hands on was "extensive."

The mayor, who has defiantly rebuffed calls to resign, has pleaded not guilty to conspiracy, bribery, wire fraud and two counts of soliciting campaign donations from foreign nationals. Together, those charges carry a maximum penalty of 45 years in prison. His bond package bars him from communicating with witnesses in the case, whose names prosecutors have provided his defense.

The charges stem from allegations that Adams, starting in 2014, solicited and accepted from Turkish nationals more than $100,000 in business class airplane tickets, hotel stays, meals and other perks during lavish trips to Turkey, Ghana, France, China, India and other countries.

The feds allege that in addition to the lavish gifts, Adams solicited and accepted tens of thousands of dollars in campaign contributions from Turkish nationals that were illegally funneled via U.S. donors and maximized by the city's public matching funds program. They say the inclusion of the illegal donations in the $10 million Adams reported in campaign contributions in 2021 tainted the whole pot.

Important categories of evidence they'll furnish the defense with during the discovery process include written communications, texts, voice memos, Signal messages, airline records, emails and calendar entries – some of which "will be from the defendant himself" – regarding campaign contributions and travel, Hagan said.

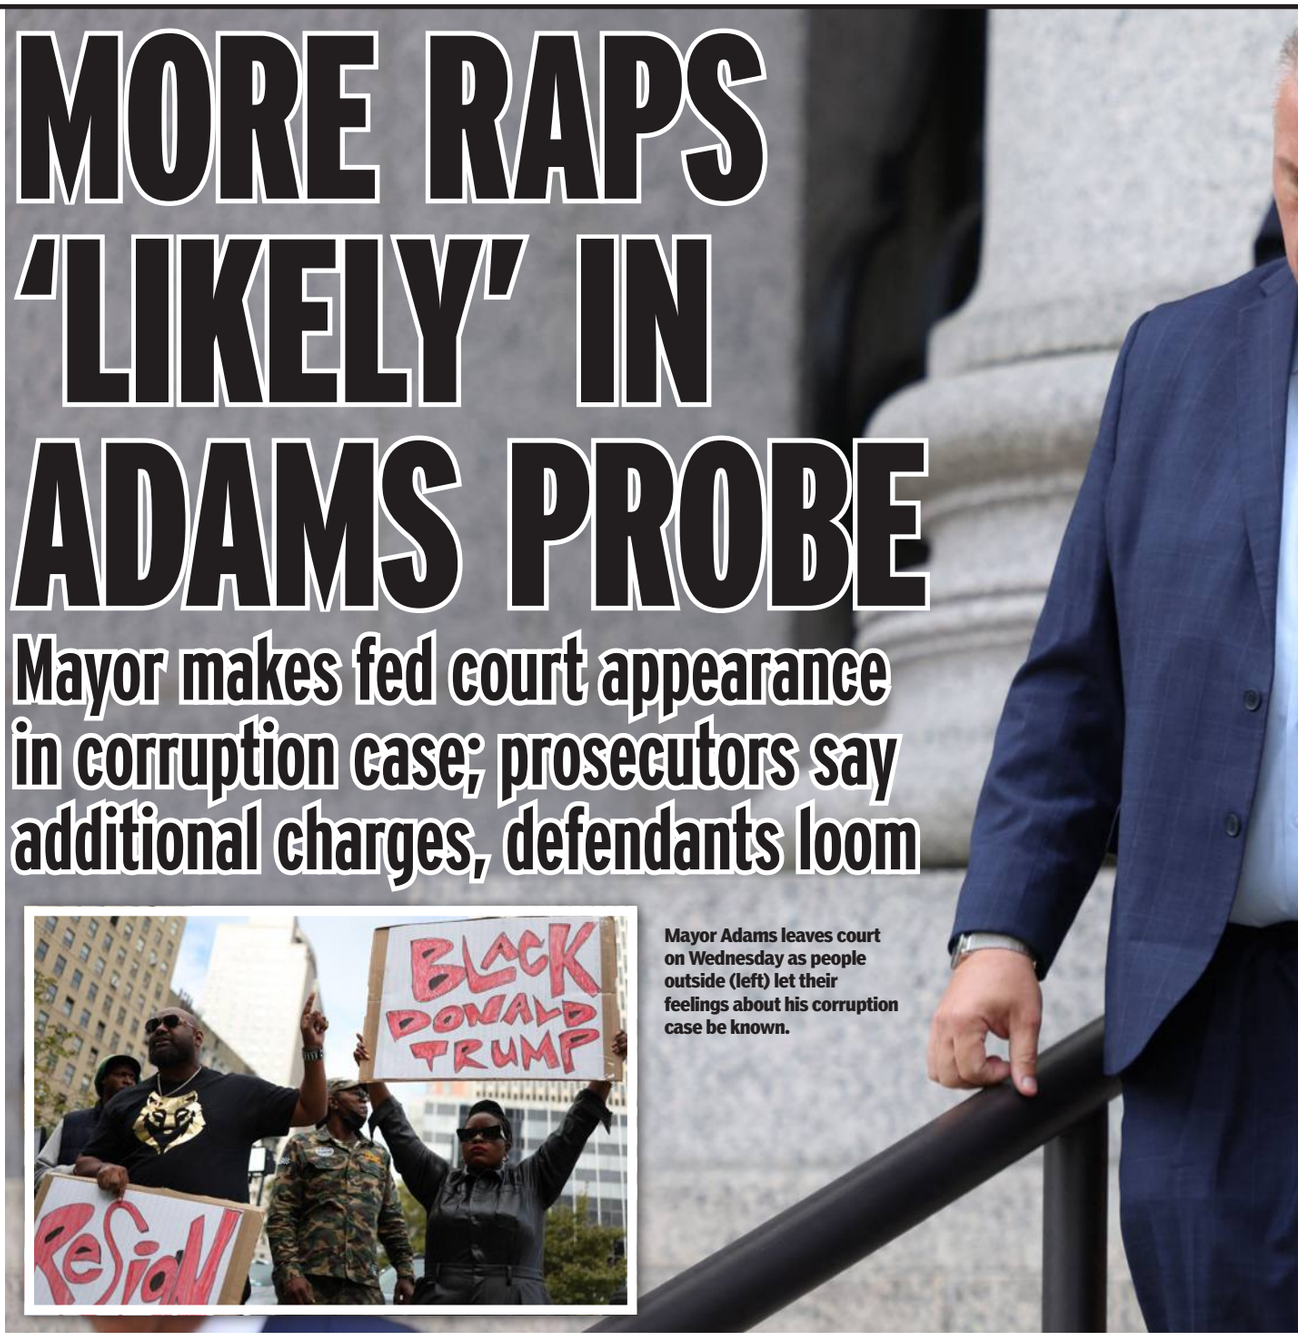

According to the feds, other records will show coordination between Adams' co-conspirators. Hagan said the feds were still awaiting information from Adams and his campaign requested via a subpoena in July.

One source of evidence the feds still haven't gained access to is the mayor's personal cellphone, according to Hagan. The mayor handed the phone over to the feds last November after FBI agents stopped him in the street. But the indictment says he claimed he couldn't remember the password to open the device because he had recently changed it. Spiro said the defense would provide prosecutors with its contents.

Prosecutors say Adams took significant steps to cover up his misdeeds, like trying to make it look like he paid for luxury trips out of pocket. At Wednesday's hearing, Scotten accused the mayor of trying to interfere with a witness during the investigation who illegally donated money to his campaign, who received a "clear message" from Adams that "they should not tell the truth to the FBI."

In exchange for the alleged bribes and illicit campaign cash, Adams is accused of having expedited the opening of the Turkish consulate in Manhattan in time for a 2021 visit by Turkish President Recep Tayyip Erdogan by leaning on FDNY officials to resolve safety violations at the building. He's also accused of doing other political favors for the Turkish government, like avoiding issuing a mayoral statement in 2022 commemorating the Armenian Genocide.

Adams and his attorney have maintained that what the feds call

Mayor Adams leaves court on Wednesday as people outside (left) let their feelings about his corruption case be known.

GETTY

bribes were just "gratuities" and that the mayor had no knowledge about illegal campaign donations.

Adams, who wore a navy suit and a light blue tie to court, kept his head down in court and jotted a few notes down on a legal pad. He left without taking questions from reporters.

Later, in a statement to the Daily News, Spiro said, "The prosecution is desperately now saying they 'could' bring a new case because they are suddenly facing dismissal of their actual, flawed case and sanctions for misconduct. This is the sort of nonsense that prosecutors say when they don't have a real case. If they had a real case, they would have brought it."

A group of protesters chanting "resign now" were gathered outside the courthouse as Adams ducked into an awaiting SUV. Donald Curtis, executive director of the Unified Black Caucus who participated in the demonstration, said Gov. Hochul should use her power to remove Adams from office if he doesn't leave voluntarily.

"We, the taxpayers, demand that he be forcefully removed by the governor today, not tomorrow," Curtis said. "He can't run City Hall and appear in court every day to defend these charges."

In his bid to toss the bribery count, Adams' lawyer cited a recent Supreme Court decision that loosened up public corruption laws by finding it illegal for officials to accept bribes before taking action but OK to accept "gratuities" after the fact.

Spiro said the luxury travel benefits the mayor received were equivalent to innocuous business perks politicians receive regularly and described his involvement in the consulate's opening as "normal and perfectly lawful."

He has repeatedly thrown former top aide-turned-cooperator Abbasova, who worked for Adams for over a decade, under the bus in filings and public statements, claiming the case against the mayor is based on her lies.

Abbasova is among at least a dozen senior Adams staffers, past and current, ensnared in swirling corruption investigations into his administration and campaign by state and federal prosecutors, leading to a steady drumbeat of high-profile resignations in recent weeks.

Besides the Turkey probe, federal investigators are looking into whether the mayor's inner circle of advisers were engaged in schemes involving kickbacks on city contracts and influence peddling.

On Monday, Adams' embattled senior public safety adviser, Tim Pearson, became the latest to hand in his resignation letter after getting his home raided and phones seized as part of the probes.

Eric's attorney Spiro opts not to defend him in sex-assault lawsuit

BY CHRIS SOMMERFELDT
NEW YORK DAILY NEWS

Alex Spiro, a high-powered celebrity attorney representing Mayor Adams in separate ongoing criminal and civil cases, withdrew Wednesday from defending the mayor in a lawsuit accusing him of sexually assaulting a police colleague over three decades ago.

In a motion filed in Manhattan Supreme Court, Spiro said he's withdrawing from the civil sexual assault case because the city Conflicts of Interest Board raised concerns about him simultaneously representing the mayor in that matter and the corruption indictment that federal prosecutors have brought against him.

Spiro didn't elaborate in the filing on what the board's concerns were, but wrote the board expressed the reservations after he became the mayor's attorney in the federal criminal case on Sept. 25.

Spiro, who's known as a hard-charging celebrity lawyer who has represented the likes of Elon Musk, Jay-Z and Alec Baldwin, wrote Adams and the NYPD, which is also a defendant in the case, have agreed to let him withdraw.

Representatives for Adams' office didn't return requests for comment. The city Law Department, which has represented the mayor alongside Spiro in the sexual assault case, confirmed it'll continue to serve as his counsel in the matter. It wasn't immediately clear if another private practice attorney will be brought on to replace Spiro.

Conflicts of Interest Board Executive Director Carolyn Miller said she's prohibited by confidentiality rules from disclosing any communications her agency "may have had or advice that may have been given to a public servant."

Spiro's legal fees in the two matters were coming from separate sources.

In the sexual assault case, Spiro was being paid by city taxpayers at a steeply discounted rate compared with what he usually charges.

His fees in the federal corruption case are being paid by the legal defense trust the mayor launched last year, according to Vito Pitto, the trust's compliance attorney. A spokesman for Spiro declined to say how much Spiro is charging the defense trust. He's known to bill some clients as much as $2,000 per hour.

The sexual assault case is being brought by Lorna Beach-Mathura (photo), who worked with Adams in the Transit Police Department and alleges he tried to force her to perform oral sex on him in a car in 1993 after she approached him for help with an employment issue. After she rebuffed his proposition, Adams ejaculated on her leg and dropped her off at a subway station, the lawsuit claims.

Adams has vehemently denied Beach-Mathura's allegations.

Spiro's withdrawal filing was submitted shortly after he appeared with Adams in Manhattan Federal Court Wednesday for the mayor's first appearance before the judge handling his corruption case.

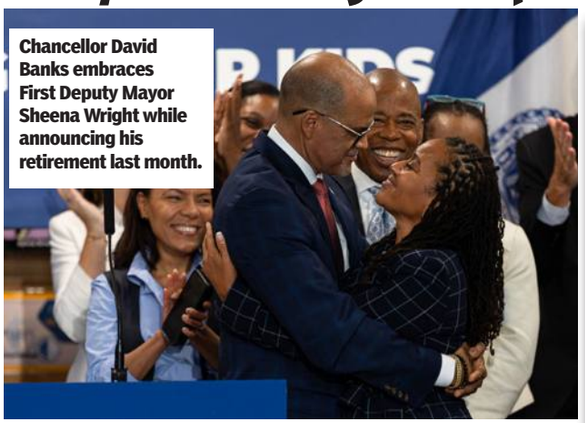

The feds have indicted Adams on charges that he solicited and accepted bribes and illegal campaign contributions from Turkish nationals in exchange for doing political favors for the Turkish government. Adams has pleaded not guilty to all charges.

In Wednesday's hearing, federal prosecutors revealed they are "quite likely" to bring a superseding indictment in Adams' corruption case that would include more charges being brought against the mayor and several unnamed "co-conspirators" mentioned in court papers.

Schools chief says wedding to deputy isn't tied to fed probe

Chancellor David Banks embraces First Deputy Mayor Sheena Wright while announcing his retirement last month.

SHAWN INGLIMA FOR NEW YORK DAILY NEWS

Outgoing Schools Chancellor David Banks on Wednesday shut down rumors he wed his decade-plus partner First Deputy Mayor Sheena Wright for spousal privilege as Mayor Adams' top aides are ensnared in a federal corruption investigation.

"I think anybody that would criticize me has probably never been in love," Banks told Fox 5's "Good Day New York." "The reality is that Sheena and I have been together for quite some time. We've been planning our marriage for a while."

"Both of our parents are really getting older and having some health issues, and we made the right decision to do it when we did. And any suggestion otherwise to me is just ridiculous on his face," the chancellor said, one day after a New York Post reporter confronted the newlyweds outside their Harlem townhouse about the privilege.

Their union gives them the right to decline to testify against each other, legal experts said, but it does not extend to their communications from before their weekend wedding on Martha's Vineyard, and there is no evidence the couple, who got engaged in fall 2022, tied the knot for legal protection.

The nuptials, Banks said, were limited to immediate family and "just a couple of friends." Photos shared with Fox 5 showed the pair – Wright in a lace mid-length dress, Banks in a linen suit – wed in a casual ceremony at a lush garden without an altar.

With investigations swirling City Hall and Adams back in court Wednesday on federal bribery and campaign finance charges, Banks said he remains focused and school continues to open "every day." Sources told the Daily News investigators are looking into the chancellor's consultant brother Terence Banks' business interests before the city – including with the agencies of David and Phil Banks, the deputy mayor of public safety.

"I think parents all across New York City would tell you, in no way do they see any level of distraction," Banks said. "They see a level of stability and focus, and we continue to move the work forward."

While the newlyweds were back in the city this week, Banks said he was hopeful for a honeymoon after his retirement, which was to have been on Dec. 31, but now, City Hall announced Wednesday, has been moved up to mid-October.

Banks, who said he'd leave by Jan., now quitting in two weeks

Schools Chancellor David Banks is stepping down 2½ months earlier than his planned retirement, as federal investigations continue to ensnare the Adams administration, City Hall announced in a late Wednesday statement.

"It became clear that our students will be best served by having the same leadership through as much of the school year as possible, rather than changing chancellors halfway through," said Amaris Cockfield, a spokeswoman for Mayor Adams.

Deputy Chancellor Melissa Aviles-Ramos – Banks' former chief of staff who currently oversees family and community engagement – will take over the nation's largest school system on Oct. 16, Cockfield added.

Two sources familiar with the matter suggested Banks was pushed out by Adams. The mayor was conspicuously absent from Banks' weekend wedding to First Deputy Mayor Sheena Wright; she is also expected to resign.

The Department of Education referred requests for comment to City Hall. Banks, 62, was planning to leave his post by the end of this year.

"I can't worry about what the questions are," Banks said on Fox 5's "Good Morning New York" earlier Wednesday. "When it's time, it's time. Had a 40-year career, had a lot of impact on the lives of lots of parents and families and our kids. But it was time for me to go, and I can't be concerned about all those other kinds of questions."

Banks had his phones seized and Harlem townhouse raided Sept. 4 as part of a federal investigation. Sources said the probe is related to his government consultant brother Terence Banks' business before the city agencies of his siblings, including Phil Banks, deputy mayor of public safety.

City paying legal fees for 3 staffers under fire

BY CHRIS SOMMERFELDT AND JOSEPHINE STRATMAN
NEW YORK DAILY NEWS

The city's Law Department is bankrolling legal fees for three city employees ensnared in criminal investigations – including Molly Schaeffer, Mayor Adams' Asylum Seeker Operations director who was recently subpoenaed in a federal corruption probe, the Daily News has learned.

Schaeffer was served with the subpoena last week by federal investigators from the Manhattan U.S. attorney's office. Sources have confirmed the subpoena is requiring Schaeffer to deliver grand jury testimony as part of an investigation looking into kickbacks on city contracts that has also ensnared multiple other top aides to the mayor, including Tim Pearson, a senior adviser who announced his resignation this week.

In a letter to Manhattan Councilwoman Gale Brewer on Wednesday, the Law Department confirmed it's currently representing three city employees in connection with criminal matters. The letter, which was obtained by The News, did not name the three employees or the investigations they're facing but sources familiar with the matter confirmed one of them is Schaeffer and that she's receiving free legal representation in connection with the contracts probe.

The letter specifies it's the Law Department's understanding that the three city employees it's providing free representation for "are neither targets nor subjects of the investigations." That means they aren't expected to face criminal repercussions and the Law Department referred to the trio in the letter as "witnesses" and current municipal employees.

The identities of the other two city employees receiving free legal representation were not immediately clear but all three are being represented by Yankwitt LLP, a White Plains-based firm, with the Law Department picking up the cost, the letter says.

Schaeffer is specifically being represented by Benjamin Allee, a partner at the firm. He did not reply to a request for comment.

The Law Department letter says law firm partners representing the three city employees are being paid $600 per hour.

Schaeffer did not return a request for comment.

The investigation she was subpoenaed in is separate from the corruption probe that resulted in Adams being indicted last week on criminal charges alleging he solicited and accepted bribes and illegal campaign donations from Turkish government operatives in exchange for political favors. Adams is not receiving city-funded legal representation in that case, but paying for it with money from his legal defense trust.

Schaeffer has played a leading role in overseeing billions of dollars in contracts with private companies to provide services like food, shelter, security and case management to thousands of migrants coming through New York City. She has worked closely with Pearson, a former NYPD inspector who was given sweeping powers by the mayor to award migrant contracts.

Pearson's detailed daily schedules, obtained by The News via a Freedom of Information Law request, show he sat down with Schaeffer four times in April 2023, her first month in her current job, for meetings labeled "asylum seeker updates," and then met daily to discuss the migrant crisis starting in May 2023.

The feds investigating Pearson, who has known the mayor for decades, seized his phones and raided his home last month. His attorney has denied Pearson engaged in any wrongdoing, but he announced his resignation from the administration Monday after the mayor for months rebuffed demands to fire him.

Besides the federal scrutiny, Pearson is facing four civil lawsuits from former and current NYPD employees accusing him of sexual harassment and professional retaliation. He has enjoyed Law Department-funded legal representation in those four lawsuits, though it remains unclear whether he'll continue to receive that now that he's out of the administration.

Scathing new court filing after Supremes' immunity ruling

BY DAVE GOLDINER
NEW YORK DAILY NEWS

Former President Donald Trump "resorted to crimes" and bullied Mike Pence in the plot to overturn his loss in the 2020 election, special counsel Jack Smith charged in a new filing unsealed Wednesday in the federal Jan. 6 election interference case.

In never-before-seen evidence, prosecutors detailed Trump's effort to cajole Pence into joining the illegal scheme to stay in power and his effort to incite his followers to attack the Capitol and block the certifications of President Biden's election when Pence refused.

"When the defendant lost the 2020 presidential election, he resorted to crimes to try to stay in office," the prosecution wrote in the filing.

The 165-page document amounts to Smith's argument that Trump's alleged misdeeds are not covered by the substantial presidential immunity granted by the Supreme Court. It was ordered unsealed Wednesday by District Court Judge Tanya Chutkan.

Prosecutors said Trump acted in his private capacity as a presidential candidate, not in his official capacity as president, for which the top court said he could not be held criminally accountable.

"[Trump's] scheme was fundamentally a private one," Smith's team said. "He pursued multiple criminal means to disrupt, through fraud and deceit, the government function by which votes are collected and counted – a function in which the defendant, as president, had no official role."

Some of the most evocative new evidence bared in the filing concerns Trump's effort to browbeat Pence.

At a private lunch the two had on Nov. 12, 2020, Pence "reiterated a face-saving option" for Trump, telling him, "don't concede but recognize the process is over," according to prosecutors.

In another private lunch days later, Pence urged Trump to accept the results of the election and run again in 2024.

"I don't know, 2024 is so far off," Trump told him, according to the filing.

WHITE HOUSE 2024

TO 'CRIME' JAN. 6

details Trump's bid to bully Pence, flip election

pro-Trump slates of electoral votes from some battleground states, a plot designed to throw Biden's election into doubt.

On Jan. 6, Trump threatened to call out Pence to his violent extremist supporters if he did not cave.

"I'm going to have to say you did a great disservice," Trump told Pence, according to the filing.

After delivering a fiery speech to supporters, Trump returned to the White House where he watched the violence at the Capitol unfold on TV.

He alone wrote and sent a tweet deriding Pence as supporters hunted down his vice president, chanting "Hang Mike Pence," the filing charges.

The filing quotes Trump as telling an aide "So what?" when he was told Pence could be in danger after violent supporters stormed the Capitol on Jan. 6, 2021.

A Trump spokesman derided the filing as part of a liberal witch hunt to tarnish Trump and prevent him from beating Democrat Kamala Harris and winning a return to the White House.

The filing almost surely marks the last chance for the public to assess and discover previously unknown actions carried out by Trump before he faces the verdict of voters in the 2024 election.

Trump was hit with a new streamlined superseding indictment in the case after the Supreme Court ruling last summer.

But any potential trial is many months away. Chutkan still needs to rule if the new charges meet the criteria laid down for determining presidential immunity. Her ruling would then likely be appealed back to the Supreme Court.

The new documents also includes voluminous details of Trump's involvement in the state-by-state effort to convince Republican officials to create the bogus slates of alternate electors.

It details the efforts of lieutenants believed to be Rudy Giuliani and ex-chief of staff Mark Meadows, although their names are blacked out in the filing.

Trump already faces sentencing after Election Day for his criminal conviction in the Manhattan hush money case in which he was convicted.

Dems winning on abortion, so says JD Vance

BY DAVE GOLDINER
NEW YORK DAILY NEWS

Democrats pressed their advantage on the issue of abortion rights Wednesday after Republican JD Vance admitted the GOP has lost the trust of voters on the issue at the vice presidential debate and former President Donald Trump shifted his stance on a national abortion ban.

The Republican vice presidential nominee surprised many on both sides of the reproductive rights debate by effectively conceding Democrats have the upper hand on the issue in an answer during the debate with Democratic rival Tim Walz.

"We've got to do much better of a job at earning the American people's trust back on this issue where they frankly, just don't trust us," Vance said.

Vance recounted a story of a female childhood friend who believed that having an abortion to end an unwanted pregnancy "saved her life."

Democrats angrily pointed out that Vance supports abortion bans that would take that choice away from the woman he mentioned.

"That was clever to use that personal connection, but it isn't right to have politicians make their decisions instead of women," Rep. Nancy Pelosi (D-Calif.) said on CNN.

Walz, who registered what many analysts felt was an otherwise uneven debate performance, name-checked several women impacted by Republican abortion bans, including Amber Thurman, a Georgia mom who died in 2022 after doctors delayed treating her for complications from a medication abortion.

A CBS News poll confirmed that debate viewers considered abortion to be Vance's worst issue, with Walz polling 62% with viewers on the question of which candidate handled the topic best.

As the debate unfolded, Trump tweeted an all-caps statement promising he would veto a national abortion ban. He previously dodged questions about a potential veto at his own debate with Democrat Kamala Harris.

Trump also recently flip-flopped on Florida's abortion rights amendment, saying he would vote to uphold the state's draconian six-week ban on the practice.

"The GOP ticket's views on abortion are at best malleable and at worst extreme," said Basil Smikle, a Columbia professor and Democratic strategist.

Israel fights on 2 fronts

Ground troops battle in Lebanon & stay after Hamas in Gaza

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BEIRUT – Israel battled militants on two fronts Wednesday, pursuing a ground incursion into Lebanon against Hezbollah that left eight Israeli soldiers dead and conducting strikes in Gaza that killed dozens, including children. As Israel vowed to retaliate for Iran's ballistic missile attack a day earlier, the region braced for further escalation.

Iran, which backs both Hezbollah and the Hamas militants who run the Palestinian enclave of the Gaza Strip, launched dozens of missiles into Israel on Tuesday night, a sharp escalation that pushed the Middle East closer toward a regional war.

Israel warned that the attack would have "repercussions."

The Israeli military said seven soldiers were killed in two separate attacks in southern Lebanon, without elaborating. Those deaths followed an earlier announcement of the first Israeli combat death in Lebanon since the start of the incursion – a 22-year-old captain in a commando brigade. Another seven troops were wounded.

Together, the assaults announced on the eve of Rosh Hashana, the Jewish new year, were some of the deadliest against Israeli forces in months.

In Gaza, where the nearly yearlong war that triggered the widening conflict rages with no end in sight, Israeli ground and air operations in a hard-hit city killed at least 51 people, including women and children, Palestinian medical officials said.

Israel has continued to strike what it says are militant targets across Gaza nearly a year after Hamas' Oct. 7 attack ignited the war.

The escalation on multiple fronts has raised fears of a wider war in the Middle East that could further draw in Iran as well as the United States, which has rushed military assets to the region in support of Israel.

Syria's state-run SANA news agency said an Israeli airstrike hit a residential building in Damascus on Wednesday evening, killing three people and wounding at least three others.

There was no immediate comment from Israel, which frequently hits targets linked to Iran or allied groups in Syria, but rarely claims the strikes.

Hezbollah, widely seen as the most powerful armed group in the region, said its fighters clashed with Israeli troops in two places inside Lebanon near the border. The Israeli military said ground forces backed by airstrikes killed militants in "close-range engagements," without saying where.

Israeli media reported infantry and tank units operating in southern Lebanon after the military sent thousands of additional troops and artillery to the border.

The two attacks announced Wednesday followed other assaults on Israeli forces earlier in the year.

In June, an explosion in southern Gaza killed eight Israeli soldiers. In January, 21 Israeli troops were killed in a single attack by Palestinian militants in central Gaza, the deadliest single attack on Israeli forces since the Israel-Hamas war erupted.

The Lebanese army said Israeli forces advanced some 400 yards across the border and withdrew "after a short period," its first confirmation of the incursion.

The Israeli military has warned people in and around 50 villages and towns to evacuate north of the Awali River, 37 miles from the border and much farther than the northern edge of a UN-declared zone intended to serve as a buffer between Israel and Hezbollah after their 2006 war. Hundreds of thousands have already fled their homes.

Israel has said it will continue striking Hezbollah until it is safe for tens of thousands of its citizens displaced from homes near the Lebanon border to return.

Hezbollah has vowed to keep firing rockets into Israel until there is a cease-fire in Gaza.

Israeli strikes have killed more than 1,000 people in Lebanon over the past two weeks, nearly a quarter of them women and children, according to the Health Ministry.

Meanwhile, Israel lashed out at the United Nations, declaring Secretary-General António Guterres persona non grata, or banned from entering the country. Israeli Foreign Minister Israel Katz accused him of failing to unequivocally condemn Tuesday night's Iranian missile attack.

Guterres released a brief statement after the barrage saying: "I condemn the broadening of the Middle East conflict, with escalation after escalation. This must stop. We absolutely need a cease-fire."

The Health Ministry in Gaza said at least 51 people were killed and 82 wounded in the operation in Khan Younis that began early Wednesday. Records at the European Hospital showed seven women and 12 children, as young as 22 months old, were among those killed.

Another 23 people, including two children, were killed in separate strikes across Gaza, according to local hospitals.

Iran launched at least 180 missiles into Israel on Tuesday in what it said was retaliation for a series of devastating blows Israel landed recently against Hezbollah, which has been firing rockets into Israel since the war in Gaza began in solidarity with Hamas.

Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu vowed to retaliate, saying Iran "made a big mistake tonight and it will pay for it."

President Biden said his administration is "fully supportive" of Israel and that he's discussing with aides what the appropriate response should be.

Biden said Wednesday he will not support an Israeli strike on sites related to Tehran's nuclear program in response to Iran's missile attack on Israel.

"The answer is no," Biden told reporters.

SHAWN INGLIMA FOR NEW YORK DAILY NEWS

Interim Police Commissioner Thomas Donlon tells reporters Wednesday the NYPD is taking extra precautions near Jewish sites.

NYPD keeps watch on Jewish sites as Mideast turmoil grows

BY THOMAS TRACY
NEW YORK DAILY NEWS

The NYPD is pulling out all the stops to protect city residents as they face a perfect storm of antisemitic strife felt across the globe, Mayor Adams vowed Wednesday.

"This city is under watch," Adams assured alongside NYPD Interim Commissioner Thomas Donlon at NYPD Headquarters under a row of gigantic video screens showing real-time feeds of sensitive locations throughout the city. "Your city will protect you. No matter what is going on around the globe, here in New York City you will be safe."

Police will be out in droves over the next few days as they protect Jewish residents during the beginning of Rosh Hashanah, as well as prepare for any blowback from Tuesday's Iranian missile attack against Israel and Israel's ground invasion of Lebanon.

Cops are also preparing for this coming Monday, when Adams said a "significant" number of protests are being planned to mark the first anniversary of Hamas' bloody attack on Israel.

"It will mark one of the worst terror attacks against the Jewish people since the Holocaust," Adams said.

More than 4,000 protests over the Israel-Hamas conflict have occurred across the city since Oct. 7, police said. While the city will defend everyone's right to protest, the NYPD will not tolerate any violence or disruptions, the likes of which have happened at some past protests, Adams warned.

"There will be a zero tolerance for those who violate the law, impede traffic and damage property while doing so," Adams said. "People will not be threatened."

Although he is currently under federal indictment for allegedly receiving bribes, Adams said he expects his federal partners will come through for the city.

"This organization is a professional one," Adams said. "No matter what happens in this city at any particular time to any individuals, the operation continues."

Besides an influx of police officers – both in uniform and in plainclothes – and heavy-weapons teams, cops will be adding additional cameras at key locations and activate 21 recently graduated K-9 dogs, who will be "checking sensitive locations each day," NYPD Deputy Commissioner of Intelligence and Counterterrorism Rebecca Weiner said.

There have been no specific threats against New York City so far in light to the Oct. 7 anniversary, according to police. But last month a 20-year-old man was stopped at the Canadian border and accused of planning to carry out a mass shooting at a Brooklyn Jewish Center.

"One of our biggest fears is the lone wolf," Adams said, encouraging New Yorkers who see something suspicious or out of the ordinary in the next few days to call police.

Antisemitic hate crimes have jumped by 75% so far this year, from 157 this time last year to 275, NYPD Chief of Detectives Joseph Kenny said. The lion's share of the crimes have been nonviolent graffiti or "swastika motivated" attacks, said Kenny, who said he has added detectives to the department's Hate Crimes Task Force to investigate the additional incidents.

Weiner described the last year as "incredibly challenging" as police continue to brace against ripples of hatred sparked by Oct. 7.

"Blood has been shed all over the [Mideast] region and the already heightened pressures we have been talking about over the last year [have] ratcheted up even further," Weiner said. "At a time of violence and turmoil around the world, we are here to assure you that New York City is an extremely safe place for all. We have kept this city safe and will continue to do so."

Over the next few weeks, city residents are expected to see more heavily armed "Hercules" teams of the NYPD Emergency Service Unit and uniformed officers in marked police vehicles at Jewish institutions, synagogues, foreign consulates and public places, like Times Square and Central Park, NYPD officials said.

The visible surge in police patrols in the city is intended to be an added protection, as well as a deterrent to anyone thinking of committing a bias crime during these turbulent times, police said.

At the same time, the NYPD Intelligence Bureau is also in constant contact with its overseas liaisons, getting real-time information on the conflict in the Middle East, as well as reviewing chatter on social media, to see if any possible attacks are being coordinated here, officials said.

A variety of pupusas at Ricas Pupusas & Mas in Sunnyside, Queens. KAITLYN ROSATI FOR NYDN

Pockets full of fabulous

Ricas Pupusas & Mas offers 2,000-year-old Salvadoran treats

BY KAITLYN ROSATI
NEW YORK DAILY NEWS

Empanadas seem to reign supreme among Latin American pastry, but if you're sleeping on Salvadoran pupusas, let this serve as your wakeup call. Skip the Avianca flight to San Salvador, and get your fix at Ricas Pupusas & Mas in Sunnyside, Queens.

Opened in September 2019 by Irma Vargas and her daughters, Abby and Amy Vargas, Ricas Pupusas & Mas is about as authentic as it gets. The recipes are passed down through the family of Irma's mother, who hails from Cojutepeque, El Salvador, with a few tweaks from mom along the way.

Pupusas date back over 2,000 years, with origins tied to the Pipil tribe. While they are a staple in Salvadoran cuisine, they still fly far under the radar in the U.S. market.

Because of this, the Vargas ladies – who started their cooking biz selling tamales for a church fundraiser in Jackson Heights on Roosevelt Ave. – realized they wanted to highlight Salvadoran food.

Pupusas are flat, almost like a stuffed pancake, and at Ricas, you have the option of maiz (corn flour) or arroz (rice flour), Either way, the dough is freshly made each day. From there, you can choose from fillings including beans, cheese, chorizo and panes con pollo, a traditional Salvadoran dish made with bread, a whole chicken leg and tomato sauce.

I ordered four pupusas: two made with corn and two made with rice flour. I got the corn pupusas filled with simply cheese, and pollo and queso, and the flour pupusas filled with chorizo and cheese and beans.

It wasn't just pupusas, though. I was with a friend who got a hibiscus agua fresca, and I opted for the maracuya, or passionfruit. There's also a selection of Mexican offerings on the menu, as a nod to the Vargas' father, who hails from Guadalajara. You can choose from tamales, taco and burritos. The chicharron taco was strongly suggested so, twist my arm, I threw one of those in there for good measure.

The pupusas came out shortly after I placed my order, and it was evident before I even dug in that they do not skimp on the cheese. Some had a crusted cheesy edge, signaling that I was about to be in for the cheese-pull of my dreams. There was a pickled cabbage slaw served on the side, which helped brighten the thick, dense treat.

The cheese and chicken combination was my favorite, and was elevated even further when accompanied by a nice slathering of both the red and green salsa picantes offered on the side. The nicely spiced bite of the chorizo was up there in my rankings, as well.

While I was there strictly for pupusas, the chicharron taco on its own is enough reason to come back. The meat takes eight hours to cook and it shows; it's melt-in-your-mouth. Definitely throw some of the green sauce on there while you're at it. What can I say, I'm a fan of the green sauce.

The Vargas ladies note the strong importance of community when running a biz in the dog-eat-dog world that is New York City. They still can be found on Roosevelt Ave. every Saturday selling tamales and pupusas, and they credit Queens Together for helping them stay afloat during the pandemic.

And thank God they did. Ricas Pupusas & Mas continues to prove my theory that you can travel anywhere in the world without ever leaving New York City – but really, without ever leaving Queens.

You don't need a 17-course, $500 Michelin-star meal to have a prime dining experience in New York. You just need four bucks and a MetroCard swipe.

THE FOOD NETWORK NEW YORK CITY WINE & FOOD FESTIVAL PRESENTED BY INVESCO QQQ

4 DAYS, 80+ EVENTS, 500+ CHEFS & FOOD STARS, 1 GREAT CAUSE

The Food Network New York City Wine & Food Festival presented by Invesco QQQ (NYCWFF) is New York's largest food and wine festival, and it's coming back from Oct. 17-20.

New Yorkers will flock to get their fill from the world's best chefs, culinary personalities, and renowned wine and spirits producers to aid an excellent cause. 100% of NYCWFF net proceeds support the work of God's Love We Deliver, the NY metropolitan area's only provider of life-sustaining meals and nutrition counseling for New Yorkers living with severe illness.

This year, NYCWFF is moving to a new 450,000-sq-ft culinary campus at Brooklyn Army Terminal in Sunset Park. For the first time ever, Grand Tasting and walk-around pier parties will be anchored in one sprawling location.

"We're incredibly excited to expand our footprint to Brooklyn and offer our most attended events at one tented culinary campus," said Festival Founder and Director Lee Brian Schrager. "We are pleased to offer the same festival our guests know and love at our new location,"

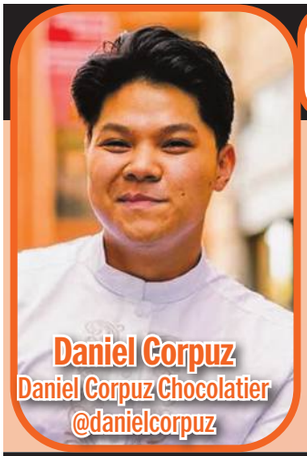

Brooklyn Army Terminal is easily accessible by train, bus, car, and the NYC Ferry (only a 12 minute ferry ride from Wall Street) with several direct access points from key locations in Manhattan to Brooklyn Army Terminal.

NYCWFF has partnered with the NYC Ferry to provide Festival guests with a dedicated NYCWFF ferry with a direct route to and from Wall St./Pier 11 to the Invesco QQQ Festival Campus at Brooklyn Army Terminal (BAT)/ Sunset Park.

The Daily News asked NYCWFF participating chefs about the festival and their foodie inspration. Look for this series every Thursday through October 10, and get your tickets before they sell out.

FESTIVAL EVENT: Halloween Sweets & Treats hosted by Kardea Brown and Duff Goldman part of the United Airlines Series

10/19 • 11:30 AM – 1:30 PM FESTIVAL DISH: Jack-O'-Lantern Holiday-Themed Bonbons

WHAT IS YOUR FOOD INSPIRATION?
Much of what I do can be attributed to my Fil-Am heritage. I grew up in an immigrant household, where the flavors of ube and pandan were staples in my mom's cooking.
WHAT IS YOUR FAVORITE CUISINE?
My favorite cuisine is Japanese. A solid bowl of ramen can truly hit the spot. It's always so flavorful and umami-forward while still being very light.
WHAT'S YOUR FAVORITE MEAL TO PREPARE AT HOME?
My "Chawcolate" chip cookie. It's a chocolate chip cookie with a New York accent. It's nostalgic and "easy." But I love my cookies thick and chewy, so the way we make and bake them is crucial to achieving my ideal cookie.
HOW/WHERE DID YOU LEARN TO COOK?
I graduated from the Culinary Institute of America with a degree in business administration and baking and pastry, but my time in Michelin restaurants allowed me to learn more about the field.
3 INGREDIENTS YOU ALWAYS HAVE:
We always have chocolate, calamansi, and muscovado.
WHAT IS YOUR SIGNATURE DISH ?
Our Ube Bonbon is simply designed with a solid purple color, and the filling speaks for itself. We use ube puree from the Philippines, giving people the true taste of ube.
WHAT'S NEXT FOR YOU?
Christmas. But on a bigger scale, the goal is to expand and find a new location.
WHAT EXCITES YOU ABOUT NYCWFF?
It allows me to nerd out on food, share that passion with like-minded individuals, and learn more about what I have devoted my life to: FOOD.
WHAT DOES NYCWFF MEANT TO YOU?
A room filled with Culinary giants, and it is an honor be a part of that.

WHAT IS YOUR FOOD INSPIRATION?
The Goodfella Burger was creatOur flavors are inspired by the Cookshops of Jamaica and the Melting Pot Cuisine of New York.
WHAT IS YOUR FAVORITE CUISINE?
West Indian (of course because that is my birthright) but I loveeee Mexican, Malaysian, Japanese and Peruvian.
WHAT'S YOUR FAVORITE MEAL TO PREPARE AT HOME?
Coconut Curry Chickpea and Sautéed Kale
HOW/WHERE DID YOU LEARN TO COOK?
I learned to cook in such a textured way. The seed was planted by watching my grandma pack box lunches as a little girl, honed by attending culinary school and being a kitchen assistant at a fancy school I couldn't afford and watered by working alongside some of the most hardwork and innovative Chef in the indusrty; including the James Beard House and Compare Lupin (New Orleans).
3 INGREDIENTS YOU ALWAYS HAVE:
Aleppo, Jerk Wet Marinade, Fine Kosher Salt.
WHAT IS YOUR SIGNATURE DISH AND
My signature dish is our Jerk Chicken Dinner Taco inspired by the motto of Jamaica - "Out of Many, One People" which also echos "Out of Many, One Cultures" and the blending of them. The world renowned Jerk dishes created and rooted in Jamaica's history and being a 1st generation Jamaican - American is my blending of cultures.
WHAT EXCITES YOU ABOUT NYCWFF?
It's in Brooklyn!!!! So Everything!! Being present and taking in every moment, dish, hug, and sip. Can't wait to share our food with the guests and people of NYCWFF.
WHAT DOES NYCWFF MEANT TO YOU?
To represent food in a reimagined and inviting way. Participating in NYCWFF is huge as a woman of color chef and business owner.

Officials want to accommodate 48 trains per hour at Penn Station.

LUIZ C. RIBEIRO FOR NYDN

Penn must grow: pros

Plan for twice the trains means bigger footprint

BY EVAN SIMKO-BEDNARSKI
NEW YORK DAILY NEWS

A joint Amtrak, NJ Transit and MTA analysis released Wednesday indicates that the planned doubling of train capacity into Penn Station will likely require an expansion of the facility beyond its current boundaries.

The report, commissioned by the transit-agency triumvirate from consultants at WSP, assessed two different plans for through-running and two different plans to build additional platforms below the existing station to determine whether any of those scenarios could support a planned 48 trains per hour coming under the Hudson River.

"Spoiler alert: We cannot," Petra Messick, a senior program director with Amtrak, told reporters. "What we found is that we will need to expand beyond the boundaries of Penn to reach the 48 trains per hour trans-Hudson capacity."

That 48 trains benchmark is the expected capacity of the Northeast Corridor line after the sweeping, $40 billion Gateway project is completed, removing bottlenecks across the New Jersey Meadowlands and building an additional tunnel under the Hudson River.

Amtrak's plans have long called for an expansion of Penn Station to the south in order to build additional platforms to accommodate the expected uptick in trains.

As previously reported by the Daily News, those plans would likely involve the demolition of what is known as "block 780" – the city block between W. 31st and W. 30th Sts., bounded by Seventh and Eighth Aves. – in order to create more platform space for New Jersey Transit commuter trains.

Penn Station serves three different railroads. Amtrak trains traversing the Northeast Corridor from Washington, D.C., to Boston enter the station via the North River Tunnel under the Hudson River, and continue on to the north through the East River Tunnel.

Long Island Rail Road trains come to the station via the East River Tunnel, before turning around to return to Long Island.

NJ Transit trains share the North River Tunnel with Amtrak. After dropping their final passengers off at Penn Station they continue through the East River tunnel to the Sunnyside Yard in Queens before turning around.

Advocates have floated several alternative proposals to increase train capacity while leaving block 780 intact.

One set of proposals involves the creation of a new set of platforms below the existing station – akin to the MTA's creation of Grand Central Madison below Grand Central Terminal.

The other set of proposals, known as "through-running," would let NJ Transit trains – which already head into Queens to turn around – and LIRR trains continue on into one another's territories, minimizing dwell time and speeding up traffic through Penn.

Wednesday's report claims neither is feasible.

The ventilation requirements of an additional underground station would necessitate expanding the footprint of the station, albeit slightly, said Foster Nichols of WSP. Passenger access would also be a problem, he said, in terms of placing stairs and elevators through the already narrow platforms of existing Penn.

And building the extension would severely disrupt service into Penn during construction, he said.

"Huge chunks of the station would be out of service to get it built," said Nichols.

The report goes on to argue that through-running would require extensive investments in the wider network of tracks and rolling stock in order to ensure that each railroad's trains and infrastructure are compatible.

"We looked at two alternatives," Messick said. "We found they did not meet the project goals."

Messick said the next step is to look beyond the footprint of Penn Station. "We're going to expand our purview and look at acquiring property to expand capacity."

Gambler: I was in cahoots with NBA ex-Raptor

NEW YORK DAILY NEWS

A pro poker player from Queens has folded his cards, admitting he conspired with disgraced former NBA player Jontay Porter to gamble on two basketball games.

Long Phi "Bruce" Pham, 38, pleaded guilty to wire fraud conspiracy in Brooklyn Federal Court Wednesday, and could face more than four years in prison based on sentencing guideline estimates.

Pham and three other men were arrested in June, charged with recruiting the Toronto Raptors player – who was drowning in gambling debts – into a plot that earned him a lifetime ban from the NBA and a felony conviction.

Porter (inset) agreed to leave two games early for medical reasons, giving the gambling foursome advance notice so they could make big bets that he would underperform in those games, federal prosecutors said.

Porter pulled himself from the Raptors' Jan. 26 game against the L.A. Clippers after playing just four minutes and scoring zero points, grabbing three rebounds and making one assist, telling team officials he had reaggravated an eye injury from a few days earlier. He then left a March 20 game after just three minutes, triggering an investigation by the NBA that led to the rare lifetime ban.

He pleaded guilty to wire fraud conspiracy in July. Based on federal sentencing guidelines, he could also face between 41 and 51 months in prison when he is sentenced Dec. 18.

Pham on Wednesday admitted he conspired to place bets with "inside information," namely that "Jontay Porter of the Toronto Raptors would exit these games early."

As part of his plea, Pham could also be on the hook for restitution in a number of other poker-related frauds he wasn't charged with, Magistrate Judge Sanket Bulsara explained during the hearing.

Pham, of Queens, was described at a June court appearance as one of the top 1% poker players in the world.

He remains free on $750,000 bond until his April 25 sentencing before Brooklyn Federal Court Judge LaShann DeArcy Hall.

Pham declined comment as he left the courtroom, and wouldn't answer a question about how he knew Porter.

Blast from the past: American WWII bomb jars Japan airport

BY MURI ASSUNÇÃO
NEW YORK DAILY NEWS

An unexploded bomb likely dropped by the United States during World War II has exploded at an airport in Japan forcing the cancellation of nearly 90 flights, Japanese officials said.

The explosion of the 500-pound bomb at Miyazaki Airport, in southwestern Japan, caused a large crater measuring 23 feet in diameter and 3 feet deep in the middle of a taxiway, the Reuters news agency reported citing a Japanese transport ministry official.

The airport was forced to cancel flights operated by Japan Airlines (JAL), All Nippon Airways (ANA) and regional airlines connecting the city of Miyazaki, in the southeast end of Kyushu island, to cities including Tokyo, Osaka and Fukuoka.

"We apologize for the inconvenience caused by the cancellation of today's flight (02OCT24) due to runway closure at Miyazaki Airport," JAL posted on X Wednesday morning.

Officials say the airport is expected to resume regular operations Thursday morning, according to a statement on the airport's website.

Several unexploded bombs dropped by U.S. forces during WWII have been unearthed in the area, according to the country's Defense Ministry.

Last year, 2,348 bombs weighing 41 tons were unearthed across Japan, Reuters reported, citing the Ministry of Self-Defense Forces.

Miyazaki Airport, which opened in 1943 as a former Imperial Japanese Navy flight training field, was used as a base where hundreds of kamikaze pilots would embark on their final, suicidal missions, according to the Miyazaki city website.

Residents make their way along a partially washed-out road Wednesday in Black Mountain, N.C. In Asheville (inset), people carry jugs of water from a distribution center. Entire water supply systems in some areas will have be completely rebuilt, authorities said. GETTY; AP

FRUSTRATION IN WAKE OF 'CANE

Parts of Southeast without water or power nearly week after Helene hit

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

ASHEVILLE, N.C. – Many residents of the Carolinas who still lacked running water, cell phone service and electricity Wednesday made do for the moment and questioned how long their patience would last nearly a week after Hurricane Helene devastated the Southeast.

The storm and its aftermath have killed at least 179 people.

In remote mountain areas, helicopters hoisted the stranded to safety while search crews waded through floodwaters and moved toppled trees so they could look door to door for survivors.

More than 1.1 million customers still had no power Wednesday in the Carolinas and Georgia, where Helene tore far inland after barreling over Florida's Gulf Coast six days ago.

"We have no water; we have no power; but I think it's also been humbling," Anna Ramsey said as she and her two children carried water in plastic bags from a distribution site in Asheville, North Carolina. "It's been humbling ... what we need to do for ourselves."

Fallen trees left her family stranded for several days. They've bailed water from a creek in their backyard to flush toilets and cooked on a propane grill.

"Friday will probably be our breaking point," she said.

Government cargo planes have been bringing food and water to the hardest-hit areas, and the Pentagon said Wednesday that the secretary of defense has authorized mobilizing 1,000 active-duty soldiers to help with supplies.

It may be weeks, though, before water is fully restored in Asheville, which supplies almost all of Buncombe County's 275,000 residents.

Thousands of feet of pipe from one reservoir were washed out and will have to be rebuilt, and a second intake is not working, said water system spokesperson Clay Chandler.

"There are portions of our distribution system that are going to have to be completely rebuilt," Chandler said.

The administration of North Carolina Gov. Roy Cooper said Tuesday that more than two dozen water plants remained closed.

As crews reached remote areas, more destruction came into view: homes teetering on hillsides and riverbanks that had been washed away.

President Biden surveyed the devastation in the Carolinas on Wednesday after saying a day earlier that the recovery will cost billions. "People are scared to death. This is urgent," he said.

In small Swannanoa, outside Asheville, receding floodwaters revealed cars stacked on top of others and mobile homes that had floated away.

Sinkholes pockmarked roads caked with mud and debris.

Residents and business owners wore masks and gloves while clearing debris in Hot Springs, North Carolina, where almost every building along the main street was heavily damaged.

Sarah Calloway, who owns the deli and gourmet grocery Vaste Riviere Provisions, said the storm arrived quickly. She helped fill sandbags the day before, but they turned out to be useless. The water rose so rapidly that even though she and others were on an upper floor, they called to request a rescue from a swift water team.

"It was really challenging to watch how quickly it rose up and then just to watch whole buildings floating down the river. It was something I can't even describe," she said.

In the Black Mountain Mobile Home Park in Swannanoa, the damage overwhelmed Carina Ramos and Ezekiel Bianchi. The couple, their children and dog fled in the predawn darkness Friday as the Swannanoa River began flooding the bottom end of the park.

By then, trees blocked the roads, and the couple abandoned their three vehicles, all of which flooded.

"We left everything because we were panicking," Ramos said.

The damage and outages affecting communications infrastructure left many people without stable access to the internet and cell service.

"People are walking the streets of Canton with their phones up in the air trying to catch a cellphone signal like it's a butterfly," said Mayor Zeb Smathers, of Canton, North Carolina. "Every single aspect of this response has been extremely crippled by lack of cellphone communication. The one time we absolutely needed our cellphones to work, they failed."

Many residents are relying on old-fashioned ways of communicating.

At the town square in Black Mountain, local leaders stood atop a picnic table shouting updates about when power might be restored. Alongside a fence a makeshift message board listed the names of people still missing. And mules delivered medical supplies to mountaintop homes.

Teams from Verizon worked to repair toppled cell towers and damaged cables and to provide alternative forms of connectivity, the company said in a statement.

AT&T said it launched "one of the largest mobilizations of our disaster recovery assets for emergency connectivity support."

The efforts to restore service was made more challenging by the region's terrain and spread-out population, said David Zumwalt, president and CEO of the Association for Broadband Without Boundaries.

Helene blew ashore in Florida late Thursday as a Category 4 hurricane and upended life throughout the Southeast, with deaths reported in six states: Florida, Georgia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee and Virginia.

What Vance wouldn't say

In contrast to the scattered, angry, erratic, openly demagogic man at the top of the ticket, Sen. J.D. Vance was calm and clear and presentable in Tuesday night's debate against Gov. Tim Walz, Kamala Harris' choice to be a heartbeat away from the presidency. Vance probably even won on points, if you judge these things like a high school debate meet; Walz served up a few word salads.

But presentable doesn't mean fundamentally truthful. In answering what is perhaps the most important litmus-test question of this election, Vance fell flat on his face.

Did Joe Biden steal the 2020 election from Donald Trump? The facts shout hell no. Georgia's Republican Secretary of State Brad Raffensperger and Republican Gov. Brian Kemp counted and counted and counted again, but Biden still came out ahead there – which is why Donald Trump had to try to pressure Raffensperger to "find 11,780 votes," as egregious an attempt to subvert an election as we've ever seen in these United States, unless you count the Civil War.

Biden also won Arizona by more than 10,000 votes. Michigan, by more than 150,000. Nevada, by more than 33,000. Pennsylvania, by more than 80,000. Wisconsin, by more than 20,000. In each case, Trump spread some ridiculous conspiracy theory about imaginary ballots stuffed by dark Democratic forces. Republicans on the ground used every conceivable pathway to challenge suspect ballots and count and recount and recount legitimate ones – but nothing moved the needle. The counts were right; the results were real. Biden won.

Walz asked Vance to admit that the 2020 election was legitimate. Vance dodged the question by talking about Harris "censoring" speech during COVID, answering weakly, "Tim, I'm focused on the future." But the future is one in which Trump is just as likely to refuse to accept defeat this time around, unleashing his minions again to do even worse than what the hordes did on Jan. 6, 2021.

And about that fateful day: Vance said "It's really rich for Democratic leaders to say that Donald Trump is a unique threat to democracy when he gave over power," Vance said.

What a joke. Trump only "gave over power" because every illegal attempt to do the opposite failed: the pressure put on Georgia, the fake electors plot, junk lawsuits that clogged the courts, and a fusillade of lies to add fuel to every flame. The system held by Scotch tape. Then, like a baby, Trump boycotted Biden's inauguration and proceeded to call the rioters "patriots" who he'd pardon if he got back into power, as clear a signal as it gets that he doesn't respect the will of the people.

Vance's dishonest attempt to sanitize all that makes him hardly any better than the thief-in-chief. At another point in the debate, he criticized Harris for falling short in doing the job "the American people gave her 3½ years ago." So deep down, he seems to know Biden actually won the election – but he can't or won't say it because the head of the man who picked him would promptly explode.

Trump's first running mate knew the truth and acted on it, prompting Trump's mob to chant "Hang Mike Pence!" That Vance knows the truth but must hold his tongue says a lot about him. The polished author and senator may be easier to swallow, but it's Trump who calls every last shot and Vance meekly accepts it.

The strike and the mob

Of the 45,000 members of the International Longshoremen's Association now on strike along the East Coast, from Maine to Texas, are the 7,000 or so who are in the Port of New York. Unlike in the rest of the country, where they are walking the picket line, we don't say all the ILA members "work" here because too many of them have low-show or no-show jobs, as the Daily News and others have documented over the years. Some get paid the equivalent of 25 hours a day, seven days a week, 365 days a year (and 366 in leap years). Otherwise, how else are they going to bring in $400,000 a year?

These very rich positions are controlled by the likes of ILA Local 1804-1, Local 1, Local 1814 and Local 1588. But behind the union are the Five Families of organized crime, the Bonanno, Colombo, Gambino, Genovese, and Lucchese, who control the waterfront, which extends on both sides of the harbor, the New York side, with piers in Brooklyn and Staten Island, and the New Jersey side, with docks in Newark and Elizabeth.

Take Local 1804-1, long influenced by the Genovese, say prosecutors. The former head was Harold Daggett. He's now the international president, who is leading the strike, while his son Dennis runs the local.

We are sure that there are some crooks and criminals in Boston and Baltimore and New Orleans and Houston, but here the mob is endemic, totally built in.

The crime and featherbedding inflates costs and imposes a mob tax on goods moving through the port. Which is why the two states formed the bistate Waterfront Commission to fight the gangsters 70 years ago.

As part of the commission's mission to root out the capos and the soldiers and the associates, the agency also sought to end the phony jobs and open the real jobs on the docks to women and minorities, which the ILA/mob kept out. This was their thing and they wanted to keep it for themselves.

Daggett successfully counterattacked through the weakest link: the New Jersey legislature. Daggett and the ILA got legislators to remove Jersey from the commission. Gov. Phil Murphy went along and even though Gov. Hochul and New York pursued the case up the U.S. Supreme Court, Trenton was allowed to quit when the justices agreed.

New York then formed a new commission to police this side of the harbor, while Jersey gave the task to the State Police, who have little experience with mob cases.

Daggett is now the face of a nationwide strike, with the large majority of ILA members who walked off the job being outside of New York and New Jersey. They want a better deal with a new contract and are choosing to withhold their labor. But here in New York Harbor, the ILA has the best deal possible. A $400,000 gig where you don't have to show up is about as sweet as it gets.

The strike will end, perhaps soon or perhaps it will take longer, and the ILA will go back to work handling cargo. And when the ports reopen, the mob will still be right there, having a free hand now in New Jersey, while in New York, the new waterfront cops will be chasing and fighting the bad guys.

UNRWA, refugees and terrorists

BE OUR GUEST

BY ASAF ROMIROWSKY AND ALEX JOFFE

There are few constants in American foreign policy. One of them is deference to UNRWA, the internationally funded welfare agency for Palestinians.

This organization is implicated in terrorism. The news that Fateh Sherif Abu el-Amin, head of UNRWA's teachers union in Lebanon and Hamas liaison to Hezbollah, was killed in an Israeli airstrike in Beirut, is just the latest example.

As we approach the anniversary of Hamas' horrific Oct. 7 massacre, things have gone from bad to worse. In an official document filed in a U.S. court, the UN – with support from the Department of Justice – has argued that UNRWA employees involved in 10/7 enjoy absolute immunity from prosecution, and the lawsuit should be dismissed."

The U.S. has long followed the international community in placing UNRWA in a different and higher category, with untouchable funding, unvettable employees, and senior managers who illegally lobby in the U.S. for support. Now it argues that actual murderers should be immune from prosecution.

The U.S. has defined Hamas as a Foreign Terrorist Organization since Oct. 8, 1997. The Department of Justice's new assertion that UNRWA employees have "absolute immunity" violates common sense and elevates international organizations above American law.

Since the 1960s American lawmakers have focused on UNRWA's relationship with terrorism. Section 301(c) of the 1961 Foreign Assistance Act stated "No contributions by the United States shall be made to the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East except on the condition that the United Nations Relief and Works Agency take all possible measures to assure that no part of the United States contribution shall be used to furnish assistance to any refugee who is receiving military training as a member of the so-called Palestine Liberation Army or any other guerrilla type organization or who has engaged in any act of terrorism."

DOJ decided to ignore the will of Congress and the Biden administration has also decided to follow Europe and refund UNRWA.

The same old lines about UNRWA's indispensability are being repeated. National Security Council spokesperson John Kirby claims that "in light of the fact that there is still an ongoing crisis in Gaza and the essential role that UNRWA does play in the distribution of life-saving assistance, we continue to support funding for UNRWA, with appropriate safeguards, with transparency measures built in and with accountability also baked into that."

The same old call for transparency has been made many times before, when Hamas members employed by UNRWA were inciting violence, hiding rockets in schools, twice, and when the organization was found to be promoting antisemitism in textbooks.

UNRWA's ties to terror go back decades, as do denials. Despite wiring running through the floor of UNRWA's headquarters to a Hamas server farm below the building, or when the headquarters' parking lot collapsed in 2014 as a result of Hamas' underground construction, Commissioner-General Philippe Lazzarini claimed to be unaware that Hamas was responsible. UNRWA "strongly and unequivocally" condemned the unnamed "group or groups responsible for this flagrant violation of the inviolability of its premises under international law."

This was a lie. Worse yet, now Secretary General Antonio Guterres gallingly admits "of course there are tunnels below the premises of UNRWA."

Everyone in UNRWA knew and lied, just as everyone in Gaza knew that Hamas was constructing a 500-kilometer tunnel network that diverted construction materials and goods from international aid. The international community, through UNRWA, funded a vast portion of Hamas operations by freeing it to focus on terrorism rather than health and education.

Lies and corruption were built into UNRWA from the very beginning. The organization's ever-expanding missions revolved around the slippery term "rehabilitation" and its unilateral redefinition of "refugee" to include all Palestinians and their descendants, meant that it was going to be corrupted for local gain and would play along for its survival. It kept Palestinians in stasis, inculcating a perpetual victimhood mentality.

What comes the day after in Gaza remains unclear, but UNRWA, cannot be a part of the solution. UNRWA's ethos of entitlement and the Palestinian identity as permanent refugees – pending the destruction of Israel – cannot continue.

A concrete step to ending the war is to end UNRWA. An important first step is demanding that Hamas murderers in UNRWA's ranks be punished as the war criminals they are.

BRAMHALL'S WORLD

Congestion pricing is not the (complete) answer

BE OUR GUEST

BY JAMES F. MCSHANE

There have been many recent articles in the media bemoaning traffic congestion in the Central Business District of Manhattan. In each of these articles, the now dormant congestion pricing plan is being offered as the "fix it all" solution to this problem.

While the introduction of congestion pricing might help the Metropolitan Transportation Authority to fund its capital project programs, it would really do very little to address the problem of traffic congestion in the city. This is because the current traffic nightmare is not the result of increased traffic volume, at least not entirely; but rather the reduction in traffic capacity.

In recent years, our mayors quietly engaged in an initiative to reduce the number of automobiles in the city by implementing a strategy that prioritized pedestrians and bikers at the expense of drivers. This strategy involved an increase in traffic congestion and a further reduction of traffic speed through engineering. With the support of the Department of Transportation, the city utilized a program of "stealth engineering" to reduce traffic capacity and, accordingly, speed.

One of the earliest initiatives was the redesign of Times Square, which expanded pedestrian space at the expense of traffic flow. Broadway, a major downtown route, was permanently closed at W. 47th Street. Drivers attempting to head downtown on Broadway are now forced west on W. 47th St. to Ninth Ave. where they must merge with traffic attempting to access the Lincoln Tunnel. Predictably, the result is gridlock, on both streets.

Broadway itself, perhaps the most famous roadway in America, has been reduced from three lanes of travel to one, in order to accommodate even more bike lanes and additional seating for tourists. And, in addition to Times Square, Broadway is also shut down at Herald Square and Union Square.

Throughout Manhattan, there are numerous streets whose capacity has been reduced through the elimination of what used to be second lanes of traffic. They have been replaced by an excess of bike lanes. It feels like almost every crosstown street will soon have its own bike lane.

Additionally, some major crosstown streets, such as 14th St., prohibit automobiles entirely at points along the route. Eastbound drivers on 14th St. are forced to turn south onto Fifth Ave. and to navigate their way eastward through congested side streets.

Although bus lanes are useful for enhancing bus travel during peak hours, some streets, such as Madison Ave., restrict two lanes of traffic 24 hours a day. This is overkill.

In a recent Daily News op-ed, the writers pointed out that the response times for emergency vehicles has increased because of traffic congestion. They noted that, in the last 10 years, EMS response times for life-threatening emergencies increased by 29% and non-life-threatening response times more than doubled. The writers opine that, "only congestion pricing" can address the problem.

Unfortunately, no amount of congestion pricing will reduce congestion enough in Manhattan to permit moderate traffic flow. Our streets have been successfully re-engineered to create congestion at all hours of the day. Current capacity is so limited that even emergency vehicles can no longer navigate our streets effectively during emergency responses. There is simply no room for them (or anyone else for that matter) to move.

And yet, in another Daily News op-ed, the writers speak effusively of a plan to "revitalize Park Ave., not just as a thoroughfare, but as a dynamic green oasis in the heart of Midtown East." This project, if implemented, will reduce the number of traffic lanes in either direction on Park Ave. to create "active open space." Does it really make sense to proceed with this project, considering the devastating impact it will have on traffic?

If we are to achieve a workable solution to the traffic conundrum, we need to strike a balance between capacity and volume. In addition to reducing volume with initiatives such as congestion pricing, we also need to rethink the engineering strategy in order to increase capacity. Thus, for example, traffic lanes that have been eliminated should be restored and major thoroughfares like Broadway should be reopened to enhance the flow of traffic.

In Fiscal Year 2024, the average speed in midtown was 4.8 mph. Surely there is room to increase this average safely. Increasing capacity can help to achieve a more efficient flow of traffic while balancing the safety of pedestrians. Then, congestion pricing, if implemented, might actually make a difference!

McShane is a retired NYPD chief, who served six years as the executive/commanding officer of the Traffic Control Division.

Israel makes more war, with total U.S. support

Los Altos, Calif.: Israeli airstrikes and targeted raids in southern Lebanon (photo) have already killed more than 1,000 civilians and displaced more than 1 million. Now, Israel is claiming to have launched a ground invasion, though Hezbollah and UN peacekeepers deny such an incursion has begun.

The chaos is escalating, and while President Biden has called for a ceasefire, the mixed signals coming from the U.S. government are troubling. Defense Secretary Lloyd Austin's conversation with Israeli Defense Minister Yoav Gallant reinforced U.S. support for Israel's actions along the Lebanese border. Meanwhile, the targeted assassinations and bombings suggest that Israel's true aim is to provoke a broader conflict involving the U.S.

Hezbollah's media sources confirm that while Israeli forces attempted to enter southern Lebanon, they were forced to retreat under heavy firepower. Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu appears more concerned with rehabilitating his shattered image after Oct. 7 than with any sincere pursuit of peace. His government has continually sidelined the Gaza front and opted to expand the war into Lebanon, perhaps believing that escalation will rewrite history in his favor.

However, this reckless expansion of conflict is not only undermining Israel's standing in the region but is also a direct threat to U.S. interests in the Middle East. Jordan's Foreign Minister, Ayman Safadi, said it clearly: Peace is within reach, but only if Israel ends its occupation and allows for the establishment of a Palestinian state. Netanyahu's refusal to pursue peace leaves Israel on a dangerous path of perpetual war, a path the U.S. should not be enabling. Shame on Biden and Kamala Harris! Jagjit Singh

Don't let up

West Hempstead, L.I.: To Voicer Eugene F. Elander: The Bible is replete with instructions on the conduct of war by the Jewish nation. There is a time for war. This certainly meets the description of such a time. Micah's statement notwithstanding, the commandment to conquer our land and destroy those who would kill us takes precedence. With regard to a multi-front war, Israel has fought such wars in '48, '67 and '73, to name a few. Israel had multiple truces with Hezbollah and Hamas. Each broke them after Israel gave into allowing more workers, more supplies and cash sent by countries like Qatar – all used for war, not betterment of the Arab society. With G-d going in front of Israel's brave troops, its enemies have been vanquished. There will be time for peace when our enemies, like America's enemies in WWII, are thoroughly defeated and their societies purged of their maniacal, murderous philosophies. Samuel J. Mark

Radiating conflict

Manhattan: I'm a Catholic and most of my friends are Jewish. When I tell them Netanyahu is the lead recruiter for Islamic terrorists, they look at me in horror. But it's true. Netanyahu has ordered the killing of at least 42,000 Palestinian men, women and children, and don't you know that each family of the fallen has then sworn an oath to destroy Israel. Iran launched dozens of ballistic missiles at Israel, and if just one of those missiles went rogue and destroyed a U.S., Russian or Chinese aircraft carrier, we'd all be cinders and ash in moments. Israel has the right to exist, but not to threaten all life on the planet. Israel must drop its racism against people of color, sit down at the negotiating table, work on a two-state solution and build in all necessary military protections. Otherwise, each escalatory step by Israel will bring us closer to the unimaginable brink. Ron Spurga

Circle up

Margate, Fla.: Rabbi Joshua Stanton is well-intentioned, but he is wrong ("We can't circle the wagons this Rosh Hashanah," op-ed, Oct. 2). Since 10/7, communities such as much of academia, progressives in politics and the mainstream media have made clear their enthusiastic support for the antisemitic, genocidal goals of Hamas, Hezbollah and Iran. To not circle the wagons against these Jew-hating communities is to make the same fatal mistake liberal Jews in Germany did after 1933, when they did not circle the wagons against the Nazis. Richard Sherman

Legendary longevity

Scranton, Pa.: What a national blessing that Jimmy Carter, Dick Van Dyke and Mel Brooks have collectively been alive longer than America has been a country. Vin Morabito

Saintly statesman

Homer, Alaska: No question: Within 50 years or maybe earlier, Jimmy Carter will be celebrated as the equivalent of a Protestant/evangelical saint. History will recognize his genuine accomplishment of delicately balancing the imperatives of faith with public policy. In time, we will realize that the tenor of our present partisan comments is simply a symptom of a passing affliction of hyper-polarized acrimony. Events will surely arise that will cause many more of us to behave like adults. In time, many more of us will also honor real human progress rather than ingrained biases and cherished political ideologies. Gary Carter

Behind the times

Little Egg Harbor, N.J.: Once more, we are viewing another successful woman becoming president of another country that we have always viewed as less successful than ours ("New president takes the stage in Mexico," Oct. 2). There was Indira Gandhi in India moving that country ahead, then Golda Meir making Israel world-known, then Evita in Argentina, and so on. When are we going to become a more enlightened, less misogynistic country? Why are all these countries ahead of us when it comes to the equality we presume to possess when it comes to human rights? Perhaps it is due to all the harping about abortion and not about having women own the rights to their bodies. Rose S. Wilson

Inked immaturity

Brookfield, Conn.: Reality cider, Honest Tea, Orange Jeff Davis, orange menace and Orange R. Kelly. It sounds like it was written by a child. Would someone please take away Voicer Stephen De Falco's crayons and put him down for his nap? I think he's getting cranky. Fred Schoeneborn

Detectable dangers

Hammonton, N.J.: Re "Home-grown terror" (editorial, Oct. 1): The Editorial Board writes, "those who've been banging the drum about some nonexistent migrant danger." Nonexistent? The numbers released the other day regarding murderers and rapists illegally loose in our country is scary. There are also plenty of military-age men from China and the Middle East invading our country. We have set ourselves up for another 9/11, but obviously to the media, it's more important to cover up for Kamala Harris just like they all covered for President Biden four years ago. Six months ago, there were rumors about replacing Harris on the ticket. Now the media is doing its best to hide her sheer incompetence, even downplaying the danger we are in because of this invasion. William Cook

Imports' import

Milford, Pa.: If the longshoremen strike teaches us anything ("Dock strike hits NYC, E. Coast, Gulf," Oct. 2), it should be this: If more of the items we depend on were made here, we wouldn't have to worry about supply chains, would we? Robert K. Greco

Bill the polluters

Rochester, N.Y.: We are facing two massive climate problems: How do we stop atmospheric and ocean warming caused by years of burning fossil fuels from continuing to cause harmful and expensive weather disasters? How do we pay for the damage that's already happened? Both problems have been caused knowingly by the largest polluters. Solutions, in New York at least, lie in Gov. Hochul's hands. She's falling down on the job of meeting the fully doable and hard-won climate mandate. She's left the Climate Change Superfund Act on her desk unsigned. Hochul must heed Climate Week's call to action. The act will exact only a sliver of fossil fuel producers' profits – just $3 billion per year for 25 years – to help New York pay the enormous repair costs for infrastructure weakened or destroyed by fossil fuel-powered heavy downpours and flooding. That's a small price to pay out of their huge profits Kanwaldeep K. Sekhon

Full accounting

Ocala, Fla.: The MTA is always begging for money, but we need the Daily News to show us an itemized, line-by-line detailing of what they are actually doing with our money! Who is getting paid, why and when? I would bet the top guns get tons of money that is required for real needs. Let's do it! Lynn Miller

2 men shot, 1 fatally, in Wash. Heights

Two men were shot, one fatally, on a Washington Heights street early Wednesday, police said.

The mortally wounded victim was shot in the chest at W. 160th St. and Amsterdam Ave. at about 12:05 a.m., cops said. Medics rushed him to Harlem Hospital but he could not be saved.

Surveillance video shows workers at the Mexican Culture Deli seek cover as gunfire erupts just outside.

Moments later, the victim man staggers off the street, dropping his jacket on the sidewalk, before collapsing inside the bodega.

Deli owner Reveriano Flores, 52, said his wife was working that night and told him what she saw.

"The shooting happened outside. She said they [the gunmen] were in a car," Flores said.

"When [my wife and her co-workers] heard the shots, they ran into the back. Then they saw the guy who got shot walk in here. … He was shot here," said Flores, pointing to the center of his chest.

"My wife, she didn't do anything. He got shot. There was nothing she could do. They were panicked."

Cops were working to identify the victim, believed to be in his 30s.

Police later learned a 25-year-old man showed up at New York-Presbyterian Hospital Columbia by private means after being shot in the left ankle during the same incident. That victim is in stable condition.

Flores said the fatally wounded victim may have been trying to escape to his car when he was shot. A hole that appears to be from a bullet could be seen just over the driver-side front windshield of a white Honda Accord that Flores said was parked outside during the shooting. Colin Mixson and Rocco Parascandola

Man trashes gay pride flag in Qns.

A knife-wielding man in pink pants ripped down and carved up an LGBTQ pride flag hanging from a Queens sports bar during an act of anti-gay vandalism, police said Wednesday.

Armed with surveillance images of the suspect, cops are hoping to locate the man who a month ago yanked down the flag hanging from Murphy's Sports Bar on 23rd Ave. near 45th St. in Astoria.

The vandal was caught on camera tearing down the flag at about 2:30 p.m. on Sept. 6. He then went around the corner, pulled a knife, and cut the flag into pieces.

Afterward, the same man repeatedly called and messaged the bar, threatening workers with "anti-gay slurs," police said. Cops did not disclose what was said to bar employees.

Attempts to reach the bar for comment were unsuccessful Wednesday. Thomas Tracy

Akim Cisse, 18 (inset), was shot Friday night during a dispute outside a McDonald's in Springfield Gardens (main photo) and died the next day. Rayvon Philip, also 18, was arrested Wednesday afternoon on murder charges.

Teen shot outside Queens McD's dies; suspect held

BY NICHOLAS WILLIAMS AND ELLEN MOYNIHAN
NEW YORK DAILY NEWS

An 18-year-old shot in the head in a skirmish outside a Queens McDonald's has died – and a teen his same age has been nabbed for killing him, cops said Wednesday.

Akim Cisse was taken to Long Island Jewish Medical Center by private means after being shot at about 11:15 p.m. Friday outside the burger place in Springfield Gardens. He died the next day, police said Wednesday.

Rayvon Philip, also 18, was arrested Wednesday afternoon for murder and weapon possession.

Cisse was passionate about basketball and had an upbeat, fun personality, his sister and others said.

"We want Akim to be remembered as an athlete for sure, basketball, sports and his friends were really important to him," the victim's sister Myriam Cisse, 24, told the Daily News. "He was a really memorable person around his community where he lived and at school."

Cisse was the youngest of three siblings and a recent graduate of Transit Tech Career and Technical Education High School in Brooklyn. He played junior varsity and varsity basketball at the school, whose teams are called the Express. His sister said his life revolved around his "foundation for being a basketball player."

The high school put out a statement Monday, saying, "We're saddened to announce the loss of a former student athlete and high school graduate, Akim Cisse. Akim was a former JV and varsity athlete for the Express who came to us in junior high school. He was a friend and brother to all. We express our deepest condolences to his family and friends. Akim is forever in our hearts."

Cisse was also a member of Loyal to the Game, a community youth basketball organization in Brooklyn.

"Our entire organization is saddened to hear of Akim's untimely passing," Kavon Baker, director of Loyal to the Game Basketball, said in a statement on Instagram. "Akim had an infectious personality, and was loved dearly by his siblings, classmates, teammates, and coaches. He was a natural comedian, and often provided the laughs on our road trips."

It remains unclear what sparked the fight between Philip and Cisse that led to the deadly shooting.

"He was young, he hadn't decided the university as yet, but he was def planning on going to university," his sister said. "We just want people to remember him as being an enthusiastic, bright young soul in his community."

Cisse was about a half mile from home when he was shot, according to cops. The suspect, like Cisse, lives in Springfield Gardens, police say.

Philip was awaiting arraignment in Queens Criminal Court Thursday.

A 43-year-old cashier at the fast-food joint on S. Conduit Ave. near 222nd St. said she heard a commotion by the bathroom shortly before police arrived.

"I was in the office with my general manager," she said. "We saw like two kids running around, and we thought they was gonna fight. So my general manager got one of the guys from the kitchen to ask him to go with her because we thought we would have to break up a fight. But it was nothing.

"Like 10 minutes later, the police came and said that somebody got shot, like outside on the parking lot," she said. "It is just sad 'cause they're teenagers. That's the part that breaks me, like, they're teenagers."

Silent gunman kills man, 40, on Bx. street: cops

A 40-year-old man was fatally shot on a Bronx street Wednesday afternoon by a gunman who said nothing before he opened fire, police said.

Kavon Reid was hit in the chest and leg near Bainbridge Ave. and E. 198th St. in Bedford Park about 1:45 p.m., cops said. Medics rushed the victim unconscious and unresponsive to St. Barnabas Hospital, where he died.

"He passed right by me and slapped me five," Tyrone Clarke, 55, a retired teamster, told the Daily News. "I said 'What's up?' He comes by here every day on his way home. Down the block, I heard pop, pop, pop. He came back running, but he was not right. He collapsed right there, he fell on his face."

"I said, 'You got shot?'" Clarke recounted. "He said 'Yeah I'm shot.' He was hit right below his heart, maybe right in the heart, and he was hit in the leg, that's why he couldn't run."

Neighbors said they heard five shots fired at the time of the deadly encounter.

"He passed out, facedown, vomiting blood, that's when I knew there was nothing I can do," Clarke said. "I was calling police. I was the last person he talked to. I hated to see it happen, it was really sad."

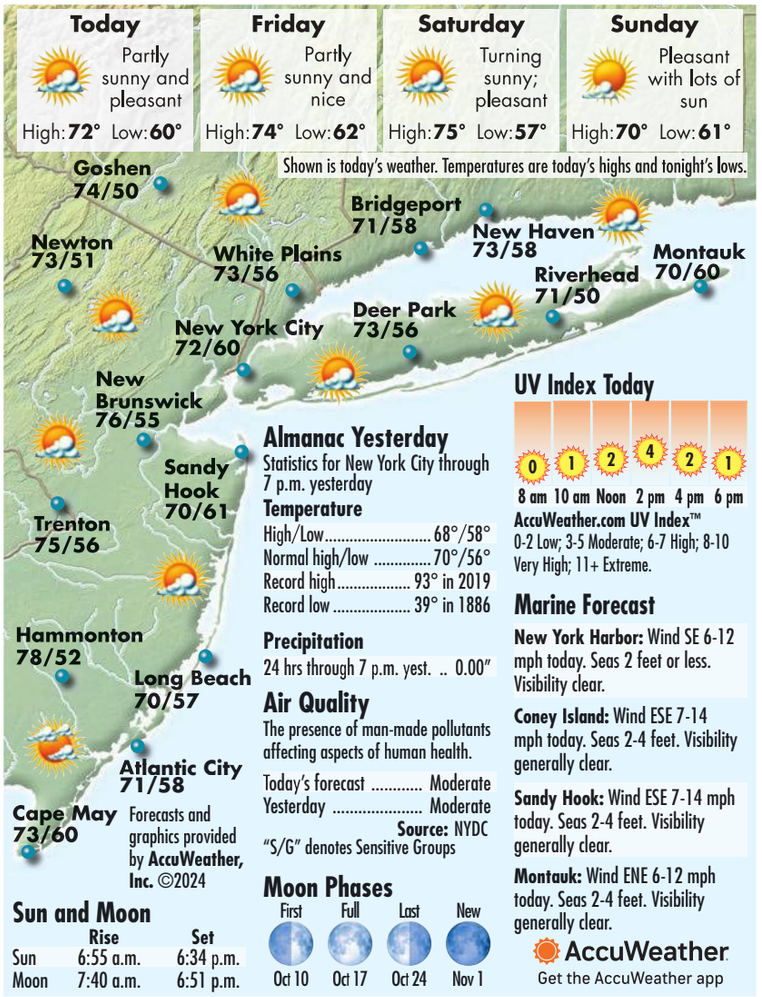

The shooting was captured on grainy video as police tried to track down the gunman. Police believe the victim may have been targeted.

Police sources said the suspect parked a car along Pond Place, south of E. 198th St., got out and walked up the block to wait for the victim to pass by.

"There was no interaction," a police source said. "He [the victim] walked by the shooter and didn't recognize him. They said nothing, and he pulled out a gun and shot him."

There were no immediate arrests, and cops have not determined what sparked the shooting.

Anyone with information is asked to call Crime Stoppers at (800) 577-TIPS. All tips are confidential. Nicholas Williams and Kerry Burke

Your HOROSCOPE

BY TAROT.COM

For Thursday, October 3

Emotions are running hot. The sensitive Moon squares fiery Mars, which can take us right on the edge of an emotional eruption. Later on, the Moon trines joyful Jupiter, putting a balm of good energy on the metaphorical burns from our earlier blazes of feelings. Finally, when the Moon faces off with wounded healer Chiron, we might feel almost wholly resistant to making amends with others or letting ourselves heal. We can be passionate without burning anyone.

ARIES

MARCH 21-APRIL 19

Two people that are close to you may not see eye to eye. The way that they communicate with each other might not be the way that you would communicate with either of them. Due to this mismatch, you could find yourself in the middle of their drama. Set personal boundaries to protect your peace.

TAURUS

APRIL 20-MAY 20

It's important to watch your words today. Because of a clash with someone in your life, it could be difficult to hold your tongue the moment an argument begins. While they might be trying to drag you down to their level, you don't have to sink down there! Don't let them pull you out of your character.

GEMINI

MAY 21-JUNE 20

The frustration of any current uncertainty increases the risk that you'll make an impulsive decision. You might want to jump into this situation rashly because you can't stand the lack of information and just want to get everything over with. Think things through instead of letting anger rule you.

CANCER

JUNE 21-JULY 22

You might find yourself at odds with a family member. It's likely that they're older than you or have another social advantage. This could embolden them to be critical of you or push you in a direction that you dislike. You can be firm back without being cruel.

LEO

JULY 23-AUG. 22

An emotional build-up could explode without warning. You might not have realized that you were suppressing so much! Any little event could be the straw that breaks the camel's back, leading you to unleash the beast on the next person who adds to your stress. Tame that wildfire!

VIRGO

AUG. 23-SEPT. 22

You might find your present goals are slightly out of reach. Even when you give it your all, there could be obstacles that you can't yet overcome. It could be something that you wanted to finish quickly, but now you have to wait until things settle down. Try not to be discouraged. There will be more time to find your way to success.

LIBRA

SEPT. 23-OCT. 22

You're taking the reins! You may be forced into a leadership position, one that demands you make decisions for other people. Being a stern boss may not be a position that you naturally enjoy taking. Delegation can be stressful to navigate, but others require your direction!

SCORPIO

OCT. 23-NOV. 21

Information that you're about to learn may throw you off. It'll be tough to catch up or update your plans on the fly. Whenever your to-do list gets overwhelming, take it one step at a time and know that you only have to do your best. No one should be disappointed in your efforts to roll with the punches.

SAGITTARIUS

NOV. 22-DEC. 21

Your dreams may feel stuck in a rut, unable to lift off. Every corner could seem like a dead end, whether an opportunity didn't pay off or a mistake hampered your progress. This can be discouraging and irritating at the same time, but it's important for you to get back on track.

CAPRICORN

DEC. 22-JAN. 19

Someone else's feelings may explode in a way that you weren't expecting. They could have been holding everything inside, trying to protect their image or others from their turmoil. Hold your ground and make sure they don't destroy your peace while venting.

AQUARIUS

JAN. 20-FEB. 18

A hidden enemy may make themselves known at any moment. They could have been putting on a friendly act to prevent you from seeing their true colors, since once you see behind the curtain, there will potentially be no way for them to hide. Don't chase what isn't for you.

PISCES

FEB. 19-MARCH 20

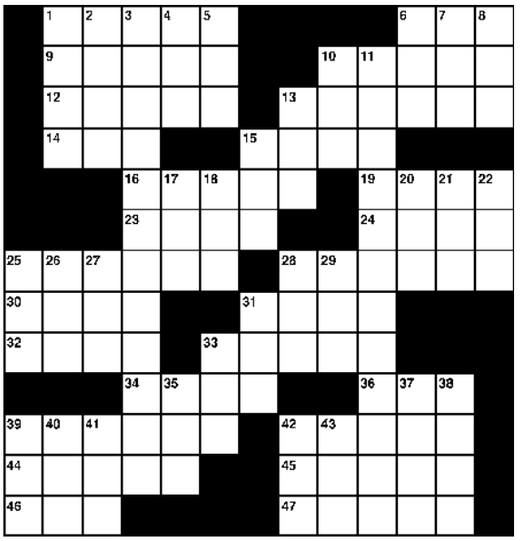

Reckless actions made in the heat of the moment will have consequences. You may be feeling more impulsive, making it easier to succumb to the influence of others, procrastination, bad habits, or leaping to conclusions. Do your best to stay aware of how you're spending your time and how you're utilizing your patience. There's no need to rush!

THE BROOKLYN UNION GAS COMPANY d/b/a NATIONAL GRID NEW YORK

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that on June 12, 2024, The Brooklyn Union Gas Company d/b/a National Grid New York ("Company") filed revisions to its Schedule for Gas Service, P.S.C. No. 12 – Gas Service Tariff with the New York State Public Service Commission ("PSC"), to become effective October 1, 2024. On September 10, 2024, the Company filed to postpone the revisions until November 1, 2024 to allow for this newspaper publication of the proposed revisions.

The proposed revisions would update provisions regarding the timing of bills, estimated billing, and adjusted bills in the Company's P.S.C. No. 12 – Gas Service Tariff.

Copies of the Company's filing and proposed revisions are available for public inspection and can be obtained on the PSC's website (dps.ny.gov) by searching the document and matter management system for case number 24-G-0360.

New York State Department of Environmental Conservation Notice of Complete Application

Date: 09/19/2024
Applicant: TRUSTEES OF COLUMBIA UNIVERSITY IN CITY OF NEW YORK
535 W 116TH ST
NEW YORK, NY 10027
Facility: COLUMBIA UNIVERSITY - MANHATTANVILLE CAMPUS
605 W 129TH ST
NEW YORK, NY 10027
Application ID: 2-6202-01787/00002
Permits(s) Applied for: 1 - Article 19 Air State Facility
Project is located: in NEW YORK COUNTY
Project Description:
The Department has prepared a draft permit and has made a tentative determination, subject to public comment or other information, to approve an application for the renewal of an Air State Facility Permit for the continued operation an existing facility, Columbia University-Manhattanville Campus/Facilities Utility Improvement Project, which facilitates the development of new academic mixed use facilities in the Manhattanville section of West Harlem by Manhattanville Development Columbia University (MDCU), located at 605 West 129th Street, New York, NY 10027.
MDCU currently has an Air State Facility permit to operate a total of four identical Babcock & Wilcox FM 10- 57 boilers with COEN ECOjet-SLN Ultra Low NOx burners, each rated at a maximum heat input rating of 54.26 MMBtu/hr, however, one boiler is no longer being installed. No new emission sources or expanded operations are proposed as part of this permit renewal. The draft permit would allow for the continued operation of three (3) dual fuel-fired boilers as well as four (4) emergency generators. The boilers fire natural gas or No. 2 oil. There are a total of two stacks used to vent flue gases from the three boilers.
This permit is subject to the provisions of the State Facility requirements specified under 6NYCRR 201-7. With this renewal, the Facility will not increase emissions and no change to the facility's emissions cap is proposed. NOx emissions from the combustion sources at the facility will remain capped at 24.9 tons per year, including exempt sources. Records demonstrating compliance with this cap will be kept in accordance with the permit specific conditions. The Air State Facility permit contains a listing of the applicable federal, state, and compliance monitoring requirements for the facility.
Persons wishing to inspect the subject files, including the application with all relevant supporting materials, the draft permit, and all other materials available to the DEC (the "permitting authority") that are relevant to this permitting decision should contact the DEC representative listed below. The Draft Permit may be viewed and printed from the Department web site at: https://www.dec.ny.gov/chemical/8569.html.
Availability of Application Documents:
Filed application documents, and Department draft permits where applicable, are available for inspection during normal business hours at the address of the contact person. To ensure timely service at the time of inspection, it is recommended that an appointment be made with the contact person.
State Environmental Quality Review (SEQR) Determination
Project is not subject to SEQR because it is a Type II action.
SEQR Lead Agency
None Designated
State Historic Preservation Act (SHPA) Determination
The proposed activity is not subject to review in accordance with SHPA. The application type is exempt and/or the project involves the continuation of an existing operational activity.
Coastal Management
This project is located in a Coastal Management area and is subject to the Waterfront Revitalization and Coastal Resources Act.
DEC Commissioner Policy 29, Environmental Justice and Permitting (CP-29)
It has been determined that the proposed action is not subject to CP-29.
Availability For Public Comment
Comments on this project must be submitted in writing to the Contact Person no later than 10/25/2024 or 30 days after the publication date of this notice, whichever is later.

("Secured Party") shall dispose of, by public sale, the right, title, and interest of AVS Mezz LLC ("Pledgor") in and to the following assets (collectively, the "Collateral"): all of Pledgor's right, title and interest, whether now owned or hereafter acquired, whether direct or indirect, whether legal, beneficial or economic, whether fixed or contingent, whether arising under the Articles of Organization and the Operating Agreement of Adams Hotel International, LLC ("Pledged Entity") and all amendments thereto ("Organizational Documents"), under federal, state, county, municipal and other governmental statutes, laws, rules, writs, orders, regulations, ordinances, judgments, decrees and injunctions of governmental authorities affecting Pledged Entity ("Legal Requirements"), or otherwise (i) as the sole member in and to Pledged Entity (including the membership interests of Pledgor in Pledged Entity, Pledgor's interest in any other rights to participate in the equity of Pledged Entity, Pledgor's share of the profits, losses and capital of Pledged Entity, all of Pledgor's rights under the Organizational Documents and Legal Requirements to vote and give approvals, consents, decisions and directions and to exercise any other similar right in respect of the Collateral and/or the business and affairs of Pledged Entity and otherwise to participate in the operation and management of the Pledged Entity and all of Pledgor's rights in, to and under the Organizational Documents, including any purchase option, right of first refusal, right of first offer and buy/sell right); (ii) in or to any other membership and other interest in and to Pledged Entity now owned or hereafter acquired by Pledgor as a result of exchange offers, direct investments, contributions or otherwise; (iii) in all profits, income, surplus, compensation, return of capital, distributions, and other disbursements and payments from Pledged Entity to Pledgor (including, without limitation, specific properties of Pledged Entity upon dissolution or otherwise); (iv) in all present and future claims, if any, of Pledgor against Pledged Entity under or arising out of the Organizational Documents for monies loaned or advanced, for services rendered or otherwise; (v) in all proceeds (including claims against third parties), products, offspring, rents, revenues, issues, profits, royalties, income, benefits, additions and accessions to or of any of the foregoing; (vi) in all replacements and substitutions of or for any of the foregoing; (vii) in all books and records (in whatever form or media, including without limitation computerized records, software and disks) relating to any of the foregoing; and (viii) in all documents, instruments, certificates, agreements or other evidence of any of the foregoing, whether or not in written form and whether heretofore or hereafter in existence or acquired; but excluding any obligation or liability of Pledgor with respect to Pledged Entity or any duty of Pledgor as a member of Pledged Entity.

The public sale shall be conducted by Mannion Auctions, LLC, by William Mannion, Auctioneer, NYC DCA License No. 796322, and/or Matthew D. Mannion, Auctioneer, NYC DCA License No. 1434494, or such other auctioneer licensed in the State of New York as is selected by Secured Party in its sole and absolute discretion.

Based upon information provided by Pledgor, Pledged Entity, and certain other persons and entities affiliated therewith, it is the understanding of Secured Party (but without any representation or warranty by Secured Party as to the accuracy or completeness of the following matters) that: (i) Pledgor own one hundred percent (100%) of the membership interests in Pledged Entity (the "Membership Interests"); (ii) Pledged Entity has good, marketable and insurable leasehold estate in and to each parcel of real property more particularly described in Schedule I of the Loan Agreement (which is available for inspection by contacting Newmark, as set forth below) and located at 130 West 44th Street, New York, New York 10036 (Block 996, Lot 46), known as the Chatwal Hotel, the Improvements (as defined in the Loan Agreement) thereon and all personal property owned by Pledged Entity and encumbered by the Security Instrument (as defined in the Loan Agreement), together with all rights pertaining to such property and Improvements (the "Premises"); and (iii) the Premises is encumbered by an Agreement of Consolidation and Modification of Leasehold Mortgage, dated December 20, 2019, made by Pledged Entity to Secured Party, in the total principal amount of $62,500,000.00.

The Collateral is offered "AS IS, WHERE IS", with all faults, and Secured Party makes no guarantee, representation, or warranty (including, without limitation, any representation or warranty of merchantability or fitness), express or implied, of any kind or nature whatsoever.

Secured Party will be permitted to bid at the sale, and notwithstanding any requirement herein that the sale of the Collateral be for cash, Secured Party may credit bid all or any portion of the outstanding balance of the amounts due under the Loan Documents. The auctioneer reserves the right, in its sole and absolute discretion, to reject all bids and terminate the sale or adjourn the sale to such other date and time, including, without limitation, by announcement on the date of the sale, and any subsequent adjournment thereof. The auctioneer reserves the right to impose any other commercially reasonable conditions upon the sale of the Collateral as the auctioneer may deem proper.

The Membership Interests are unregistered securities under the Securities Act of 1933 as amended. Because of this, each prospective bidder seeking to be a "Qualified Bidder" (as determined by Auctioneer in its sole and absolute discretion) shall be required, among other things, to execute and deliver to Secured Party a "Bidding Certificate" certifying, among other things, that such bidder: (i) will acquire the Collateral for investment purposes, solely for its own account and not with a view to distribution or resale; (ii) is an accredited investor within the meaning of the applicable securities laws; (iii) has sufficient knowledge and experience in financial and business matters so as to be capable of evaluating the merits and risks of investment and has sufficient financial means to afford the risk of investment in the Collateral; and (iv) will not resell or otherwise hypothecate the Collateral without either a valid registration under applicable federal or state laws, including without limitation the Securities Act of 1933 as amended, or an available exemption therefrom.

This UCC Public Sale Notice constitutes notice that the prior sale of the Collateral, previously scheduled for September 5, 2024has been adjourned to October 16, 2024, as set forth above.

The public sale of the Collateral shall be subject to the further terms and conditions set forth in the "Terms of Public Sale" (including without limitation terms and conditions with respect to the availability of additional information, bidding requirements, deposit amounts, bidding procedures, and the consummation of the public sale), which are available by contacting: Newmark, 125 Park Avenue, New York, New York 10017, Attn: Nick Scribani, email: Nick.Scribani@nmrk.com, tel: (212) 372-2113.

NOTICE OF SALE OF COLLATERAL

RE: 125 West 96th Street Unit 6E a/k/a #6E a/k/a Apt.6E a/k/a 6E, New York, NY 10025-6419
PLEASE TAKE NOTICE, that, pursuant to the New York Uniform Commercial Code, Wells Fargo Bank, N.A. ("Seller"), as secured creditor of Adrienne Borgersen ("Debtor"), will sell all of the right, title and interest of the Debtor in the collateral described below at public sale. The collateral to be sold is described as follows:
UCC Financing Statement recorded on July 28, 2003 at CRFN 2003000263126 covering the Stock Certificate No. 357 representing 260 shares of stock and Proprietary Lease for Unit No. #6E a/k/a Apt.6E a/k/a 6E a/k/a Apt. #6E at 125 West 96th Street Unit 6E a/k/a #6E a/k/a Apt.6E a/k/a 6E, New York, NY 10025-6419. Wells Fargo Bank, N.A. is successor by merger to Wells Fargo Home Mortgage, Inc.
260 shares of stock per the Stock Certificate and Power issued by 125 West 96th Street Owners Corp. ("Corporation") represented by Certificate number 357 including all personal property of the Debtor, affixed to or used in connection with Unit No. 6E a/k/a Apt.6E a/k/a 6E, located at 125 West 96th Street Unit 6E a/k/#6E a/k/a Apt.6E a/k/a 6E, New York, NY 10025-6419, that are subject to the securing interest of the undersigned.
The foreclosure Sale is subject to the following conditions and any buyer takes the property subject to same: the subject proprietary lease was issued by 125 West 96th Street Owners Corp. to Anthony J. Kane and later assigned to Adrienne Borgersen. The Stock Certificate is held in the name of Adrienne Borgersen. The unpaid principal balance is $70,379.49 (not including fees, costs, other recoverable amounts).
The sale shall be conducted pursuant to all terms and conditions set forth in the Terms of Sale, specifically including but not limited to: Buyer responsibility for obtaining possession of the collateral, payment of any sums due the Corporation, obtaining any necessary approvals from the Corporation, any existing tenancy and prompt payment of the purchase price according to the Terms of Sale issued by Seller. The sale shall be "as is, where is and with all faults" and subject to any prior liens. No bid shall be accepted with any contingency of any nature. A deposit of ten percent (10%) of the bid amount must be paid at sale, in the form of a certified check payable to "Woods Oviatt Gilman LLP." Seller makes no warranty or representation in connection with the sale, except that it has a security interest in the collateral and that the transfer is made free and clear of its security interest. The warranties of merchantability and fitness are expressly disclaimed. The sale shall be conducted without recourse to Seller, except for breach of an express warranty contained in this Notice of Sale. The Debtor is entitled to an accounting of the unpaid indebtedness. Transfer shall occur by secured creditor bill of sale made without representation or warranty, except as set forth above.
The public sale shall take place on October 23, 2024 at 10:00 am at the portico at the top of the front steps of the New York County Supreme Court, 60 Centre Street, New York, NY 10007-1474. Such sale shall be conducted by Matthew D. Mannion, Division of Consumer Affairs Licensed Auctioneer, License No. 1434494, and/or John O'Keefe, Division of Consumer Affairs Licensed Auctioneer, Auctioneer License No. 2103965, of Mannion Auctions, LLC, as Agent. Seller hereby reserves the right to bid. Interested parties may contact the undersigned prior to the sale to obtain a copy of the Terms of Sale.

OMG is always a good sign for Jose Iglesias (second l.) and Mets. AP PHOTOS

In so many ways, Iglesias has been a hit for Mets

BY ABBEY MASTRACCO
NEW YORK DAILY NEWS

MILWAUKEE – The hits keep on coming for Jose Iglesias, both on the field and on the charts.

The Latin pop sensation known as "Candelita" could have never imagined he would be in this position, batting second and playing second base for the Mets in the postseason, just two days removed from a champagne celebration with his teammates, hearing his hit song played at Citi Field every time one of them hits a home run and even getting a chance to perform it on the field for fans with an entire big-league team dancing on the field behind him.

No, he didn't see this coming.

The Mets probably never envisioned him contributing like he did, either, but there he was sprinting out of the box after hitting a ground ball to first base Tuesday night in Game 1 of the NL wild-card series against the Brewers. It should have been the third out in the fifth inning, but Iglesias slid head-first into the bag safely, allowing the tying run to score.

The Mets then went on to win, 8-4, with a five-run fifth inning.

"Every game, it seems like he does something like that," said shortstop Francisco Lindor. "He's a special, special player. He competes. Every game, his last two or three at-bats are very quality – high quality – at-bats. He has helped us to be in this position, for sure."

It was ruled as a base hit, extending his streak to 23 games.

And to think, the 34-year-old veteran could have opted out of his minor-league deal with the Mets when he was assigned to Triple-A Syracuse out of spring training.

He thought about it, and imagine how differently things would have turned out if he hadn't stayed.

"I'm glad I stayed," an emotional Iglesias told the Daily News this week. "I'm glad I got the chance to have this opportunity and grab it with two hands."

It's been a wild season for the Mets, but even wilder for Iglesias. The value he's brought to the team can't be quantified because, yeah, you could look at his 137 OPS+ or his +2 OAA, but how can you measure the vibes he's brought to the Mets and to the city with his hit song, "Omg?"

You can't quantify vibes.

"I think he's been one of the bigger players for our team because he brings the energy every day," said catcher Francisco Lindor. "The whole day, he's talking. He's talking, talking. He always has this song on, and he keeps the game fun. He makes it fun for everybody in the clubhouse. He's a great clubhouse guy."

Iglesias has been important for the Mets beyond just the clubhouse. When Jeff McNeil struggled at the plate to start the season, Iglesias stepped into the lineup and produced. This gave the Mets flexibility to use McNeil in the outfield when Starling Marte was injured over the summer. When McNeil was injured late in the season, Iglesias stepped in as the starting second baseman.

A utility infielder who can play second base, third base and shortstop, Iglesias doesn't fit any sort of analytical mold. It was clear he had beat out Wendle and Scott in spring training, but the Mets felt otherwise at the time. Instead, he started the season in Syracuse, becoming a mentor to top infield prospect Luisangel Acuña. Iglesias adopted a weighted ball program on the advice of his former teammate in Detroit and Boston, J.D. Martinez, to improve exit velocity, knowing it was one of the analytics teams liked.

Once the Mets called him up in June, everything changed. He helped them get back into the postseason race with his bat, hitting .500 with runners in scoring position at one point during the season. He finished the regular season with a .375 average and a .902 OPS with RISP.

"I think he's a different hitter in this type of era, where it's the homers and it's the walks," said manager Carlos Mendoza. "This is a guy that puts the ball in play, and when you put the ball in play, a lot of times good things happen."

Beyond what he's done on the field, he's also given the Mets their rallying cry and the fans the song of the summer. The OMG sign, gifted to the Mets by Jerome McCroy or "Jay Mac," an artist in Ridgewood, became the celebratory item.

Iglesias struggles to verbalize what this season has been like for him, not because the native Cuban speaks two languages, but because it's been so rewarding.

"Everything that 'Omg' is bringing to the stadium – the energy in the clubhouse and in the stands – that's off the field," Iglesias said. "On the field, it got us together as a group. We've come a long way as a group and we understand what it takes."

BY ABBEY MASTRACCO
NEW YORK DAILY NEWS

MILWAUKEE – The Mets' comeback magic lasted another 7 ½ innings before the Brewers got the big hit they needed to stay alive in the NL wild-card series.

With the Mets holding on to a one-run lead, right-hander Phil Maton gave up a game-tying home run to rookie sensation Jackson Chourio in the bottom of the eighth, his second of the game, and a huge, two-run go-ahead shot to Garrett Mitchell as the Mets dropped the second game of the series, 5-3, on Wednesday night at American Family Field.

They'll play the deciding game tonight.

Until the eighth, neither team gave up much offense. When the Mets had chances, the Brewers mostly made tough pitches, but they also failed to capitalize on the chances they did have, going 2-for-11 with runners in scoring position and leaving nine on base.

METS	3

After huge comebacks Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, the Mets couldn't manage another.

Devin Williams, one of the NL's top closers, retired the side in order in the ninth to convert the save.

The Mets scrapped for three runs over the first two innings against right-hander Frankie Montas, and the Brewers got the home run from Chourio in the bottom of the first, and utilized Brice Turang's legs to get a second run across in the bottom of the fifth.

Turang, who went 9-for-19 against the Mets during the regular season and 4-for-8 with a double and three stolen bases in two games over the weekend, ripped one down the left-field line to lead off. Brandon Nimmo tried to play the ball off the bounce when it caromed off the wall, but it rolled past him. It was ruled a double, his third of the series. He moved to third on a grounder by Chourio.

That was around the time the Mets got Reed Garrett up in the bullpen. Blake Perkins hit a fly ball to former Milwaukee outfielder Tyrone Taylor in center field to score Turang. Francisco Lindor helped Sean Manaea get out of it by making a tough play on a screaming grounder.

That was it for the pitcher that helped carry the Mets' staff all summer. Manaea left after two earned runs on five hits over five innings. He struck out four and didn't allow a walk.

The entire game was too close for comfort. The Mets have been playing this way for weeks, with every pitch and every play carrying weight. And there were times when it was obvious that they weren't exceptionally comfortable.

With two on and none out in the top of the sixth and the Mets holding a one-run lead, Taylor and Francisco Alvarez both swung at first-pitch sliders low in the zone from Joel Payamps. Both hit right into outs. After the Brewers intentionally walked Lindor, Jose Iglesias, one of the Mets' best hitters with runners in scoring position, struck out on four pitches to strand the bases loaded.

Lindor, still playing on an injured back, made some dynamic plays at shortstop, including a spinning throw to get Sal Frelick out in the bottom of the second, and a sliding stop on a 110.1 MPH grounder from William Contreras, the play that ended the fifth. But there were a few other plays where it was evident he was dealing with discomfort: diving stops on which he was slow to get up, and a ground ball that got through the middle after he was only about a half-step away from grabbing.

Still, the Mets held the lead until Chourio's second homer of the game.

Montas went just 3 ⅔ innings, allowing three runs (one earned), walking one and striking out three.

Volpe, other Yank playoff newcomers, brace for a ‘madhouse’ in the Bronx

BY GARY PHILLIPS
NEW YORK DAILY NEWS

Growing up in New York City and North Jersey, Anthony Volpe pictured himself starring for the Yankees in the postseason.

“The last swing of the day is always bottom of the ninth, two outs, win the World Series, stuff like that,” Volpe, now the Yankees’ starting shortstop, told the Daily News of his childhood. “I think that’s every kid.”

Volpe added that he witnessed a few postseason victories at Yankee Stadium, as he attended the Bombers’ wild card wins over the Twins in 2017 and A’s in 2018. He also saw the Yankees get blown out by the Red Sox in Game 3 of the 2018 ALDS.

“I was lucky to go to a couple (playoff) games growing up,” he said. “That’s just what it’s all about. To me, it’s what being a Yankee is.”

Next Saturday, Volpe will no longer be a kid with an active imagination or a fan roaring from the stands. Instead, the 23-year-old and a few other teammates will get their first taste of October baseball when the Yankees host the Royals in Game 1 of the American League Division Series in the Bronx.

“I’m so excited to get there and see how different it is,” Jasson Domínguez, 21, told The News with his postseason role still up in the air. “It’s really hard to have a picture in my head because I’ve never been [to the playoffs]. I was in the minor leagues, but it’s not the same. It’s not even close. But I’ve seen it in the past, and it seems to be intense.”

“I’m really looking forward to it,” added 25-year-old Austin Wells, who has been a force at and behind the plate all season.

For Volpe, his first trip to the playoffs is coming in his sophomore season. Domínguez, Wells and Luis Gil, a 26-year-old who could start in the ALDS, still have their rookie status intact.

“It’s amazing for them to be able to do that early in their careers,” Luke Weaver told The News. “Sometimes the situation and things don’t quite happen right away.”

Weaver would know, as the self-described “sneaky” veteran is in his ninth season. The former failed starter turned unofficial closer has logged 658.1 innings in his career.

None of them have come in the postseason, which is why Weaver is not taking this “special” opportunity for granted.

“I don’t know if there’s a gauge for that,” the 31-year-old Weaver said when asked to imagine what the playoffs might be like. “I think I’m starting to kind of see some of it unravel with some of these close games down the wire here.

“You’re starting to feel the anticipation and the vibe kind of rising. It’s putting out a type of nerve that is enjoyable and kind of infectious.”

Like his younger teammates, Weaver envisioned himself in playoff situations as a kid. Back then, he did the hitting in those grand, imagined moments. Now he’s trying to keep the ball in the park.

Weaver has watched a lot of postseason baseball as a big leaguer, even if he hasn’t participated in such a game. The early parts of his offseasons have been spent on the couch, glued to the TV. He’s felt the “electricity” through the broadcasts and paid close attention to how players across the league performed under pressure.

Volpe took similar notes when he and Clarke Schmidt recently watched highlights from the 2009 World Series, the Yankees’ last championship. He’s also talked to Yankees of yesteryear at Old-Timers’ Day, picking their brains about how to handle baseball’s biggest stage.

None of that will adequately prepare Volpe and the Yankees’ other postseason newbies for the real thing. There’s just no way of knowing what the playoffs feel like until you take the field.

One thing Volpe does know, however, is that Yankee Stadium is going to be a “madhouse.” He and his peers can’t wait.

“It’s the best fans in the game,” Wells said. “Best fans in the world. So having that stadium packed up for the playoffs is going to be really special.”

Rodon will start Game 2, but

BY GARY PHILLIPS
NEW YORK DAILY NEWS

With Gerrit Cole always an obvious lock to start Game 1 of the ALDS this Saturday, the Yankees announced that Carlos Rodón will take the ball in Game 2 on Monday at Yankee Stadium.

While Rodón always had a spot in the club’s ALDS rotation, Aaron Boone previously said the Yankees were weighing whether to have him start Game 2 or 3.

“He’s pitched really well, really the last 10-11 starts for us,” pitching coach Matt Blake said over Zoom on Wednesday. “So we felt good about him in any of the games. Obviously, Gerrit was going to go Game 1. There was some conversation around what makes sense for [Rodón], at home or on the road. Obviously getting him a second start, potentially Game 5, was interesting.”

With Game 3 taking place on the road – in either Baltimore or Kansas City – the Yankees opted for Rodón to pitch at home, where he enjoyed more success this season. The lefty recorded a 3.11 ERA over 14 starts at Yankee Stadium but a 4.69 mark over 18 road outings.

“It’s going to be really fun,” Rodón said of the postseason after his last start. “We start here in the Bronx; it’s gonna be electric.”

Overall, Rodón enjoyed a bounce-back second season in New York, posting a 3.96 ERA. He led the Yankees with 175 innings and a career-high 32 starts after three injuries limited him to just 14 starts in 2023.

As Blake noted, Rodón was mostly reliable down the stretch, tallying a 2.91 ERA over his last 12 starts.

“Performance-wise, obviously I’d like to be better,” said Rodón, who allowed four earned runs over 2.2 postseason innings with the White Sox earlier in his career. “Everyone wants to be better. But I went out there and competed and that was the main thing for me, just to make every start and go out there and compete every time I

Anthony Volpe has experienced a playoff atmosphere in the Bronx, but only as a spectator when he was a fan and not the Yankees' starting shortstop. AP

Witt and Royals top Orioles to set date with Yanks in ALDS

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BALTIMORE – Bobby Witt Jr. beat out an infield single to drive in the go-ahead run and send the Kansas City Royals into an AL Division Series with a 2-1 victory over the Baltimore Orioles on Wednesday for a two-game sweep of their Wild Card Series.

With two outs and runners at the corners in sixth inning, Witt hit a grounder to the edge of the dirt behind second base, where Jordan Westburg made a diving stop and throw to first. Witt was already there after zooming 90 feet in 4.14 seconds, allowing Kyle Isbel to score from third.

It was the second consecutive game in which the AL batting champion provided the decisive hit. Witt's RBI single Tuesday in Game 1 plated the only run in a 1-0 victory.

Kansas City, which endured two seven-game losing streaks over the final month of the season, advances to face the AL East champion New York Yankees. Game 1 is Saturday in the Bronx.

TIGERS ELIMINATE ASTROS

Andy Ibáñez hit a tiebreaking three-run double in Detroit's four-run eighth inning, and the Tigers swept the Houston Astros with a 5-2 victory in Game 2 of their AL Wild Card Series on Wednesday.

Parker Meadows homered as Detroit ended Houston's run of seven consecutive appearances in the AL Championship Series. It was a sweet moment for Tigers manager A.J. Hinch, who led Houston to a championship in 2017 and was fired in the aftermath of the Astros' sign-stealing scandal.

Next up for the wild-card Tigers is a trip to Cleveland to take on the AL Central champions in a best-of-five AL Division Series. Game 1 is on Saturday.

Kerry Carpenter sparked Detroit's eighth-inning rally with a one-out single off Ryan Pressly (0-1), who converted his first 14 postseason save opportunities. Carpenter advanced to third on a single by Matt Vierling and scored on a wild pitch, tying it at 2.

Pressly departed after Colt Keith reached on a two-out walk, and closer Josh Hader walked Spencer Torkelson to load the bases.

Hinch then sent Ibáñez up to hit for Zach McKinstry, and Ibáñez lined a 1-2 sinker into the corner in left for a 5-2 lead.

Vierling, Keith and Torkelson jumped around and high-fived in celebration after scoring on Ibáñez's clutch swing. Ibáñez raised his arms high above his head and smiled as he reached second.

Hader, who signed a $95 million, five-year contract with Houston in January, allowed three hits and walked two in 1 ⅓ innings.

Detroit used seven different pitchers a day after pitching Triple Crown winner Tarik Skubal got the win in the series opener. Sean Guenther pitched 1 ⅔ innings for the win in Game 2, and Will Vest handled the ninth for the save.

Yanks will wait on Game 3 call went out there."

With the first two games of the ALDS set, Blake made it sound like the Yankees are taking a wait-and-see approach to who will start Game 3. That could change once the Bombers know who their opponent is, but they want to see how the first two games play out.

Luis Gil and Clarke Schmidt are the candidates to start Game 3, but either could pitch in relief earlier in the series.

Schmidt, who recorded a rotation-leading 2.85 ERA over 16 starts, has been a reliever in the past. Blake noted that while adding that the righty could fill numerous roles.

"Clarke's still up in the air for Game 3, amongst a few others," Blake said. "But if he's out of the pen for us in Game 1 or 2, I think it's a Swiss Army Knife option for us that can pitch in a bunch of different situations. Obviously, he's really developed his arsenal to pitch against lefties a little bit better than he has in the past.

"And he's got a good mentality for coming out of the pen."

Gil, on the other hand, has never been a reliever in the majors. His iffy command but high-octane arsenal may be better suited for a start, as the Yankees may be more comfortable giving him a quick hook than asking him to put out a fire.

Blake acknowledged that Gil's lack of relief experience is "definitely a concern" as the Yankees weigh their Game 3 starting options.

"It's something we haven't done with him up to this point," the coach continued. "So definitely some unknown involved with that, and that's part of the conversation about why we might use Clarke and him in different roles. Obviously, we know Clarke's done it in the past, so there's some definite unknown with what Luis would look like in the pen. Obviously, some really high upside if it does click there. But obviously part of the conversation."

Gil, a Rookie of the Year contender, finished the season with a 15-7 record, 3.50 ERA and 29 starts.

Yankee lefty Carlos Rodon will start Game 2 of the ALDS on Monday.

HE'S PACKED UP AGAIN

Adams eyes Raider exit and Rodgers reunion a real possibility

BY ANTWAN STALEY
NEW YORK DAILY NEWS

From the moment Aaron Rodgers was traded to the Jets in April of 2023, many thought acquiring his former teammate Davante Adams was inevitable.

Now, we are closer than ever to that reality.

Adams has informed the Raiders, with whom he has spent the last three seasons, that he prefers to be traded, according to multiple sources. The Jets were interested in acquiring Adams a season ago despite Rodgers' Achilles tear four plays into his debut. However, the Raiders were not interested in dealing Adams, who has been their top receiver.

After spending eight seasons with Rodgers in Green Bay, Adams was traded to the Raiders in 2022 and signed a five-year, $140 million contract. The six-time Pro Bowler has two years remaining on his contract after the 2024 season ($35.6 million base salary). However, Adams has zero guaranteed money left on his deal after this season.

Whoever wants to trade for Adams would need at least $13 million in cap space.

In addition to the Jets, Adams will have plenty of suitors who believe he can help them become Super Bowl contenders. Let's examine the Jets and each potential landing spot for Adams.

JETS

Adams and Rodgers have an obvious connection dating back to their years together in Green Bay. Current Jets offensive coordinator Nathaniel Hackett was also with Rodgers and Adams in Green Bay from 2019-21, so this would be a natural fit.

The Jets' offense has been on a roller coaster ride since the start of the season. Rodgers and Garrett Wilson haven't had the chemistry many people expected before the season began, and Allen Lazard, who also played with Adams with the Packers, has been the Jets' best receiver after four games.

Gang Green could use another target, considering Mike Williams' injury history and lack of depth after Wilson, Lazard and Williams. The Jets have the most cap space out of all the candidates on this list. They currently have $16.8 million of open space.

The 2024 season is a critical year for Jets coach Robert Saleh and general manager Joe Douglas. After receiving a mulligan after Rodgers' injury a year ago, the Jets need to end their 13-year playoff drought, or there could be drastic changes after the season.

Davante Adams wants out of Vegas and the Jets could be a perfect fit. AP

"You're always going to look at ways to help the roster get better," Jets coach Robert Saleh said. "Whether it's utilizing the guys who are here and moving them to different spots on the field or different positions, just like as coaches, we're trying to evolve as coaches to figure out the best way to coach. We're always going to figure out the best way to use our players."

A third-round pick and other compensation shouldn't be too much for Douglas because he knows what is at stake this year. So does Rodgers because if Saleh and Douglas leave after the season, he is likely to do the same.

"I love Davante," Jets wide receiver Allen Lazard said on Wednesday. "He is one of my favorite teammates, one of my biggest mentors and I was so grateful to be able to share the field with him in the time that we spent in Green Bay together. During the things that we did is something that I will never forget. But, as far as the other stuff, I work for the Jets and my mind, soul and focus is on the Vikings this week.".

SAINTS

Adams to the Saints would make a lot of sense. One of the main reasons Adams wanted to go to the Raiders in the first place in 2022 was to play with his former Fresno State teammate and then Las Vegas QB Derek Carr.

However, after playing just one season together and finishing 6-11, the Raiders released Carr during the 2023 offseason. Now, Adams and Carr could be reunited once again.

The Saints are 2-2 and could use another receiver to complement Chris Olave. A trade to New Orleans would get Adams out of the AFC, and the Raiders wouldn't have to worry about playing him regularly.

STEELERS

The Steelers were reportedly in on the Brandon Aiyuk sweepstakes if the 49ers had decided to trade him. But Aiyuk signed a four-year extension with San Francisco.

Pittsburgh certainly could use an upgrade at the receiver position. George Pickens and Calvin Austin III are solid, but the Steelers needs a No. 1 option.

The Steelers have gotten off to a 3-1 start with Justin Fields under center. Having a target like Adams would give Fields a security blanket and back teams off the line of scrimmage, which would then help the Steelers' rushing attack.

BILLS

The Bills should immediately call Raiders general manager Tom Telesco. After trading Stefon Diggs to the Texans last offseason, Buffalo QB Josh Allen lacks a top target during critical moments in a game. Rookie Keon Coleman could eventually be a game-changing receiver, but he is still adjusting to the NFL game.

Acquiring Adams would serve multiple purposes, including preventing the Jets and Rodgers from reconnecting. Second, Adams could be the missing piece as the Bills look to challenger the Chiefs in the AFC.

The Bills only have $3.7 million in salary cap space, so they would have to free up funds to acquire Adams.

RAVENS

Imagine an offense with Adams, Lamar Jackson and Derrick Henry.

Zay Flowers is a dependable receiver and tight end Isaiah Likely has become a real weapon for the Ravens' offense. However, Jackson still needs that receiver who can stretch defenses and prevent them from dedicating all their resources to stopping the run.

Just like some of the other teams on this list, the Ravens have limited cap space.

CHIEFS

Through four games, Kansas City has been snakebitten by wide receiver injuries. Marquise Brown (shoulder) is expected to miss the entire regular season, and Rashee Rice (knee) could be out for the season after suffering an injury in their win against the Chargers on Sunday.

Chiefs coach Andy Reid and GM Brett Veach will undoubtedly be searching for some type of receiver upgrade, and they should at least call the Raiders about Adams. However, it is hard to envision the Raiders trading Adams to their bitter rival unless they sweeten the pot.

After Wilson's 'route tree' talk, Saleh leaves it alone

JETS insider
By ANTWAN STALEY

On Tuesday, Garrett Wilson created a stir during his weekly appearance on ESPN New York's Bart and Hahn show when asked about the team's identity.

"I don't think we do a lot of different stuff, to be honest," Wilson said. "When I watch football on Sundays and I see a lot of teams who mix it up and stuff like that. I don't feel like we do that.

"I think we know our identity. It's just about going out and executing it or figuring out if it's going to work. I don't think we're trying a lot of different things.

"I know, personally, my route tree hasn't been what it has been the last two years as far as the stuff I've been running. It's just about figuring out if it's the right identity and whether it's going to win games and do what it needs it to do."

On Wednesday, Jets coach Robert Saleh declined to address Wilson's comments with the media about his "route tree" but said he was not worried about his chemistry with Aaron Rodgers.

"They'll get on the same page," Saleh said. "Obviously, there's different coverages that are being run, but they'll find a way to sync up."

Wilson has gotten off to a slow start during the Jets' first four games. He has 20 receptions for 191 yards and one touchdown, and is averaging 47.8 yards per game.

Wilson and Rodgers failed to connect on a few occasions during the Jets' surprising 10-9 loss to the Broncos last Sunday. There was one instance during the second half on a second down play in which Rodgers threw the ball, and Wilson didn't see the pass coming.

The Jets' offense struggled against the Broncos and went without a touchdown for the first time all season. Because of that, Rodgers was visibly frustrated on and off the field. It also didn't help the Jets committed 15 penalties against the Broncos, with 13 accepted – including five false starts by the offense.

During his 20-year career, Rodgers has used his cadence to draw defenders offsides, which has resulted in free offensive opportunities for the offense. During the opening season loss against the 49ers, Rodgers completed a 36-yard touchdown pass to Allen Lazard after Leonard Floyd jumped offsides.

Following Sunday's game against the Broncos, Saleh told reporters that the Jets have to clean up the penalties, "whether or not" the team is "good" enough to handle all of Rodgers' cadence.

When asked on Wednesday if he had spoken to Rodgers about the cadence issue, a testy Saleh hinted that the media had overblown the situation.

"There is no cadence issue," Saleh said. "There never was a cadence issue. It was created."

Whatever the issue is, they Jets will look to get on track this week against a Vikings team that's 4-0 with a defense that's allowing 14.8 points per game, fourth in the NFL.

RODGERS LIMITED

On Tuesday, while appearing on The Pat McAfee Show, Rodgers said his left knee was a "little banged up " and swollen. He attributed it to the "wear and tear" of Week 4 of the NFL season.

Rodgers wasn't on the field during the Jets' stretching period on Wednesday but came out for practice. Because he wasn't out during the warm-up period, Rodgers was listed as limited, but he was expected to participate in all practice drills.

"He's just dealing with his knee, but we're not concerned," Saleh said.

BACK TO PRACTICE

Defensive tackle Leki Fotu practiced for the first time since before the season started. He suffered a hamstring injury during training camp and Fotu was later placed on injured reserve.

Gang Green has 21 days to activate Fotu, or he will be placed on season-ending injured reserve.

HANK'S HONEYS: Kirk Cousins, as always, is a gamer, but his still-not-100% Achilles has made him a marked man. He doesn't have the same mobility and he's been near the bottom of the league in QB efficiency when under pressure, with three picks and four sacks in his two games against the strong pass rushes of the Steelers and Chiefs. Everything in Todd Bowles' defense works off the blitz. Injuries have hit the Bucs' defense, but those injuries didn't show up against the Eagles last week, when they sacked Jalen Hurts six times. They have impressively allowed just 19.5 ppg, including matchups against the Lions and Commanders.

After blowing a tire the previous week against the Broncos, Baker Mayfield and the Bucs offense got back on track with 445 yards of total offense. Mayfield is patient and can spread the ball around and that's what you need to do against this defense. Betting trends also favor the Bucs. They have covered in eight of their last 11 games while the Falcons are just 2-10 ATS in their last 12 games as favorites.

Thursday night games are generally low scoring and with Atlanta likely to lean on the run (Tampa Bay is 22nd in rushing yards allowed), the under is very much in play. The Falcons have been settling for Younghoe Koo field goals a lot (34 of the Falcons' 73 points have come off his toe), and the Bucs have allowed just one TD through the air all season long.

Additionally, the Falcons' defense is based on limiting big plays. They make you grind out drives .

Jalin Hyatt made some long-distance grabs last season and the Giants might need him to do the same on Sunday against Seattle. AP

DEEPLESS IN SEATTLE?

Hyatt can help Giants' long game even if Nabers can't play against Seahawks

BY PAT LEONARD
NEW YORK DAILY NEWS

Giants quarterbacks Daniel Jones, Tyrod Taylor and Tommy DeVito each hit Jalin Hyatt for a completion of 40 yards or more last season.

So far this fall, Hyatt has been nailed to New York's bench, and the Giants consequently are one of only five NFL teams who have not hit a pass of 40 yards or more through four games.

Star rookie receiver Malik Nabers (concussion) is tracking towards missing Sunday's game against the Seahawks (3-1) in Seattle, though. So it looks like Week 5 could be Hyatt's chance to get on the field and possibly ignite the Giants (1-3) down the field.

"The explosive plays are gonna come," Hyatt said at his locker Wednesday. "We're capable of doing it here. We will connect, and we will connect soon."

Hyatt was talking about his confidence in the Giants' entire offense to create more explosive plays. He said he hopes "Malik's back" on the field in Seattle.

The entire offense runs through Nabers: He leads the entire NFL with 52 targets, a 35.9% target share and 35 catches. He ranks second in receiving yards (386), and he's tied for second in touchdown catches (three).

But the Giants are only averaging 15 points per game. They have only accounted for two plays over 30 yards on offense all season: a 43-yard Devin Singletary run in Cleveland in Week 3 and a 39-yard completion to Nabers against the Cowboys last Thursday.

And Jones drew criticism in that 20-15 loss to Dallas for underthrowing a few deep passes that could have been big plays to Darius Slayton and Nabers.

Maybe Hyatt can help. He has played only 19% of the Giants' offensive snaps so far (51 of 268, to be exact), and has no catches on three targets so far this season.

"D.J. throws a beautiful deep ball," Hyatt said Wednesday. "We connected so many times in training camp. Now we just have to go do it in a game."

Get this out of the way first: Jones said "nothing physically" – not his surgically repaired right knee, nothing – is hindering his ability to lead his receivers on deep passes. He has the strength to get it there.

Jones simply said some overthrows early this season – including one to Hyatt on a deep post in Cleveland – led the quarterback to overcorrect a bit too much in the Dallas game.

"I think through the first few weeks, I'd overthrown a few in situations," Jones said Wednesday. "It felt like giving a guy the chance was the way to go, and then I left some short. So I feel like I'm in a good spot now. I think it's about just trusting it and throwing it.

"I feel like I've thrown the deep ball well through my career," he added. "I've always felt good about that part of my game. So I'm confident I'll be able to do that well."

With Jones ready to launch, it is now on Brian Daboll to deploy Hyatt the way offensive coordinator Mike Kafka did as a play-caller last season to maximize the explosiveness of college football's former Biletnikoff Award winner as the nation's top receiver.

In Week 2 of last season in Arizona, for example, Jones hit Hyatt for a 58-yard completion on a deep post.

Hyatt was lined up on the left. Jones play-actioned to Saquon Barkley out of shotgun, drawing the linebackers' eyes. Tight end Darren Waller ran a deep in at the second level from the right, and Hyatt exploded over top of the Cardinals' zone for the catch.

In that same game, Jones also hit Hyatt for a 31-yard gain against man coverage.

Hyatt was lined up on the left. Slayton motioned from right to left outside of Hyatt, which turned the rookie into the slot receiver, the position he often manned in college at Tennessee. Hyatt then ran a deep corner route and caught a ball that was thrown a bit late.

When Jones got hurt, Taylor and Hyatt showed a strong rapport.

When DeVito took over, Hyatt was still a weapon. He caught five passes for 109 yards in a win over the Patriots, including gains of 29, 22 and 41 yards.

There are reasons, obviously, why Hyatt is not playing this season despite those exciting flashes during his rookie year.

Slayton is a well-rounded, veteran receiver with proven production and a strong rapport with Jones. Robinson is the preferred slot. Nabers was the No. 6 overall pick in April.

And the Giants are max protecting and putting two tight ends on the field often this season, shrinking the amount of three-receiver sets and wideout snaps.

Hyatt also had a measly six catches for 43 yards on 12 targets in the Giants' final five games of last season. He spoke of needing to improve his consistency entering year two to prove he deserves to stay on the field.

A strong training camp didn't earn that opportunity. Now, though, a Nabers injury might have opened the door.

Daboll himself said Nabers' Wednesday absence "will give Jalin more reps today than he's had in practice." And more importantly, Jones said he has confidence in No. 13.

"I think Jalin has handled it well," Jones said. "He's a pro. He's a mature guy. You've seen it out at practice. He's continued to show up and make a lot of plays.

"I know it's frustrating for a guy not to get those opportunities on Sunday, but I [think] he's handled it well," the QB continued. "I have a ton of confidence in him out there making plays, changing the game with his speed and ability to get behind the defense. So I know he'll be ready to go."

BUMPS, BRUISES AND NOTES

Nabers, Singletary (groin) and corners Dru Phillips (calf) and Adoree Jackson (calf) did not practice Wednesday. Edge Brian Burns (groin) and Robinson (heel) were limited. And linebacker Matt Adams was a full participant as he ramps up to come off injured reserve from a quad injury … Nabers was fined twice by the NFL for unsportsmanlike conduct for making a "violent gesture" after each of his touchdowns in Cleveland in Week 3. Each fine was $14,069. So that's a total of $28,138 coming out of the rookie's pocket … The Giants had some new faces on the field after making a few moves on Tuesday. They signed wide receiver Kearis Jackson and corner Greg Stroman Jr. to their practice squad, and they released tight end Lawrence Cager (injury settlement), corner Alex Johnson and tight end Joel Wilson.

SHOW A LITTLE FAITH IN JOSH

BY BILL REINHARD
SPECIAL TO THE NEWS

My fraternity, Zeta Psi, had a reunion at Syracuse University last weekend. It was great catching up with a wonderful group of men, one of which was Ben Kaminow. His Fantasy league, "Kettle It Up," is as old school as it gets, only awarding points for TDs. With an amusing team name like Fourth and Drunk, Benji has always had a great sense of humor and a love for life. And it's no small wonder; Benji was sitting at his desk on the 25th floor of the North Tower on Sept. 11 when the first plane struck. The harrowing, yet touching, story of his escape is lionized at the 9/11 Memorial & Museum in NYC. Compared to the events of that day, Fantasy Football is a walk in the park. Keep smiling, Benji. It's always good to see you.

FANTASY BILLBOARD

GIDDY UP!

● QB Josh Allen (at Texans) – Don't panic after the Bills were buffaloed in Baltimore. The Texans are 25th against the pass and Allen will have to throw early and often to keep pace with C.J. Stroud.

● QB Deshaun Watson (at Commanders) – If you have Hurts or Goff on a bye, I recommend the unimaginable: start Watson. Washington has given up 10 TD passes on the year. Watson should be good for two TDs and 200 yards.

● RB Justice Hill (vs. Bengals) – The electric scatback has had a decent Fantasy season, with two double-digit point efforts. Surprisingly the second-leading receiver in Baltimore (16/161/1), Justice is getting the receptions that used to go to TE Mark Andrews.

● RB Chuba Hubbard (at Bears) – Let's enjoy the ride on the Chuba train for another week against a Chicago defense that gives up more than 16 points per game to RBs.

● WR Jayden Reed (at Rams) – The Rams will have no answer for Reed, who has blossomed into the third-highest scoring WR in Fantasy, even with QB Jordan Love missing two games.

● WR Brandon Aiyuk (at Cardinals) – Hopefully you haven't lost patience with Aiyuk and traded him away, because he's about to explode for his first TD of the season and at least 80 yards.

Bills quarterback Josh Allen. AP

● TE Jake Ferguson (at Steelers) – It's a sad statement when 10 points is the new benchmark for TE success. Fergy is as likely as any to reach that total.

WHOA DOWN!

● QB Sam Darnold (vs. Jets in London) – The Jets said "cheerio" to Darnold, their former first-round pick, trading him away in 2021. Now Darnold has the undefeated Vikings on a roll. But the Jets have only given up two TD passes on the year. Darnold will find himself in a sticky wicket in London against his old team.

● QB Patrick Mahomes (vs. Saints) – The Saints held Dak Prescott, Jalen Hurts, and Kirk Cousins to one TD pass total. Mahomes hasn't thrown more than two TDs in a regular-season game since Week 7 of last year. With WR Rashee Rice out, lower expectations for Mahomes even further.

● RB Alexander Mattison (at Broncos) – Raiders coach Antonio Pierce promises more work for Mattison over Zamir White. But the Broncos just shut down the far superior Breece Hall: four yards on 10 carries. I'm not gonna lose my shot on Alexander Mattison.

● RB Zack Moss (vs. Ravens) – After cupcake matchups against the Panthers and Commanders padded his stats, Zack faces a ravenous Ravens team that gives up less than three yards a carry.

● WR Stefon Diggs (vs. Bills) – Revenge works both ways in Fantasy Football. As much as Diggs wants to exact a pound of flesh from the Buffalo secondary, the Bills are sure to give him extra attention, and an extra chuck or two.

● WR Jordan Addison (vs. Jets) – Addison returned from injury last week to catch his first TD of the season. He won't catch another against the Jets.

● TE Mark Andrews (at Bengals) – Despite his previous superstar status, you're braver than I am if you start Andrews after two catch-less outings.

● Thursday Night Special: The Bucs have the better defense and the better offense. Not sure why the Falcons are favored by 2.5 points. That line is for the birds. Tampa Bay 24, Atlanta 21

Knick depth won't worry Thibodeau

CHARLESTON, S.C. – Tom Thibodeau doesn't look at his team's new bench as a weakness.

Instead, after losing Isaiah Hartenstein in free agency, signing veteran second-unit help in Cameron Payne and Landry Shamet, and trading Julius Randle and Donte DiVincenzo to the Timberwolves for Karl-Anthony Towns, Thibodeau views depth as a strong suit.

"I'm not (concerned about depth). I actually like our bench a lot," he said on Day 2 of Knicks training camp on Wednesday. "I think when you look at the things that our guys have done – and I'm still not sure exactly who it might be – but Landry's been on a team that won at a high level, Cam's been on a team that won at a high level."

Thibodeau also mentioned two players who are returning for another season: Miles McBride, who goes by the nickname "Deuce," and Precious Achiuwa, who re-signed on a one-year $6 million deal after Hartenstein's departure.

"Deuce has provided a lot for us over that time," he said. "Precious has been in a lot of big games for us. And then one of the starters is gonna be with (the second unit). So I think our bench is gonna be a huge asset for us."

LOSS PREVENTION

Thibodeau said he's not letting last year's injury misfortune influence his approach this time around.

"No," he said. "Injuries are part of – every team has injuries, so you just deal with them. That's part of pro sports. So some years you don't have any injuries, other years you do. So whatever your reality is."

Josh Hart, who played in all but one game last season, scoffed at the idea of changing his play style, or his routine, to avoid getting hurt.

"That's for the media to sit there and cry about. I never go into a game and think I've gotta pace myself or think I've gotta not play as hard as I'm supposed to," he said."

BIG KAT TIME

The Towns trade is official.

The Knicks' new All-Star big man can officially practice with his new team. He is expected to talk to reporters today.

Villanova trio hopes to bring Philadelphia magic to MSG

Mikal Bridges steps in this season to join former Villanova teammates on Garden floor.

NEW YORK DAILY NEWS

CHARLESTON, S.C. – "Damn. We really got my dog over here."

It's Day 2 of training camp at McAlister Field House on The Citadel's campus, and as Tom Thibodeau runs through offensive and defensive philosophies, Josh Hart can't help but get nostalgic.

Hart's relentless pursuit of Mikal Bridges – clowning him from across the Manhattan Bridge – paid off when the Knicks sent five first-round picks and Bojan Bogdanovic to the Nets, reuniting the Villanova trio that led the Wildcats to the 2016 NCAA title.

Seven years had passed since Hart, Bridges, and Jalen Brunson last shared the floor as teammates. Now they were back – not at Villanova, but on an NBA roster, with training camp unfolding on a military campus in the South.

"I was thinking about that earlier today," Hart said. "It's definitely cool. It's gonna take some time getting used to because we've been away from each other for so long, but there's a certain level of comfort and familiarity that you never get in the league."

For Hart, seeing his Villanova brothers wasn't just about old memories – it was a reminder of their journey from campus to the pros. Their bond had grown deeper, from boys with dreams to men fulfilling them under basketball's brightest lights.

Brunson became the 36th Knicks captain, ascending to superstardom on the biggest stage. Bridges, once a complementary piece, had become a legitimate two-way force and the Nets' No. 1 option before his trade.

As for Hart?

Well, Hart's the same.

Unfiltered. Unrelenting. Unable to dial it down, whether it's practice or game time.

But at the heart of it, these are three friends who get to live out their dream of playing basketball – and now, for the first time in nearly a decade, they're doing it together again.

"Josh, you've got to watch out for him," Bridges said. "I can't look him in the eye sometimes – he's just going to make me laugh, thinking about back in the day. But Jalen, he's still the same. The only thing that's changed is how much better he's gotten as a player. He's always been a winner."

"Bully."

It's the word both Bridges and Brunson used to describe how Hart, then a sophomore at Villanova, welcomed the freshman forward angling for minutes in the Wildcats' rotation.

Bridges was a redshirt freshman during the 2014-15 season, Hart's first year as a fixture in the lineup.

"I had nothing wrong with him. He didn't like me," Bridges said. "I think it was a little fear of a 6-6 lanky kid who was looking pretty solid. But after that, we've been close ever since."

Brunson joined the team the following season.

"Mikal was a year before me. And so I kind of saw it," he recalled. "I didn't see the brutal battles, but I saw a little bit.

"Yeah, Josh is just a bully. That's just who he is."

Hart, as expected, disagreed.

"Wasn't a bully," he laughed. "At Nova, we had the 'Villanova Way.' Guys had to figure it out, and for me, I was just like, let's keep it moving. We don't want people slowing up the process.

"I'm the same way with rookies now. I'm just a little more tempered. I got kids now."

Tempering his intensity doesn't mean Hart has lost his edge. It's more refined now, under control, channeled in a way that's become the backbone of his NBA career.

The Knicks feed off of it, too.

The grit, the passion – it's all still there, only focused. What binds this trio is that edge, alongside Brunson's leadership and Bridges' two-way versatility.

And as chance would have it, what the trio built eight years ago in Philadelphia was more than just chemistry – it was a foundation.

"I think all the adversity that we had with Mikal and Jalen back in college, that's where relationships are really formed: in adverse situations," said Hart. "I feel like we all went through it together, and I feel like that's why we have the close bond that we have now.

"And I think that's gonna translate onto the court, off the court, and we're extremely excited to be all on that court at one time."

This isn't college ball.

It's the pros – where nothing is guaranteed, and on any given night, any team can knock you down.

Even these Knicks, anchored by their Villanova trio and now bolstered by OG Anunoby and Karl-Anthony Towns, can get caught in a trap game.

Getting on the same page won't be a cakewalk.

"We're gonna have to figure it out," Brunson said. "We've all grown as players since then, and the league is totally different from college. But the chemistry is there. On the court, it's just easier for us to make sure we're all in the right headspace and the right mindset."

Net veterans know time may be short

BY C.J. HOLMES
NEW YORK DAILY NEWS

Nets forward Cam Johnson knows trade speculation will continue to follow him and his veteran teammates throughout the 2024-25 season. The team is in the midst of a full rebuild. And as the front office continues to gaze toward the future, few on the roster are safe.

"It's easy to let your mind drift and wander and worry," Johnson said. "I think that's human nature."

Certain veterans will yield more trade value than others. General manager Sean Marks appears to be fixed on accumulating as many future assets as possible.

Trade rumors will persist until Marks shows his hand. But for the sake of maintaining internal chemistry under first-year coach Jordi Fernandez, how veterans handle those rumors will be important.

Johnson seems to understand that, as do Dorian Finney-Smith and Dennis Schröder. The NBA is a business before anything else, and these Nets veterans are trying their best not to take the rampant speculation personally. They are forced to live in the moment because they still have jobs to do.

"Right now, it's (about) being a Brooklyn Net," Johnson said. "Being a Brooklyn Net and being 100 percent here. I'm embracing that and I'm really excited to be here and I'm really excited to work with coach Jordi and get this thing going and establish who we want to be."

Nic Claxton, the longest-tenured Net, signed a four-year, $100 million deal to remain with the team. He appears safe for now, although his contract will become more tradable as it matures. But if Marks were to move veteran talent ahead of the trade deadline, dealing Johnson, Finney-Smith or Schröder would make the most sense.

Johnson, who has three years left on his deal, averaged 13.4 points, 4.3 rebounds and 2.4 assists in 58 games last season while shooting 44.6% from the field and 39.1% from 3-point range. Finney-Smith, who averaged 8.5 points, 4.7 rebounds and 1.6 assists in 68 games last season while shooting 42.1% from the field and 34.8% from deep, has one year left on his deal, plus a player option in 2025.

Schröder, who was acquired at last season's trade deadline, started 25 of 29 games after arriving and averaged 14.6 points, 3.5 rebounds and 6.0 assists while shooting a career-best 41.2% from deep. He has one year left on his deal and is set to be an unrestricted free agent next summer.

The 31-year-old just recently moved his family from Toronto. If it were up to him, he would remain with the Nets as long as he could.

"I want to be in Brooklyn long-term," Schröder said following Germany's 73-69 loss to France in the semifinals of the 2024 Paris Olympics. "Hopefully that works out."

Marks said he has routinely told veterans not to read into outside opinions. In order to maintain a healthy ecosystem around the organization, he has tried to be as transparent with them as possible. He believes this open-door policy will send the right message and keep whoever is on the roster locked in on the task at hand.

"Yeah, I spoke to Sean, spoke to coaches," Finney-Smith said. "They've been really open, and I appreciate that. A lot of times in this league, coaches won't say anything to you, and they're just trying to sweep it on the road like your name isn't all over the internet."

Fernandez said he has also made himself available to veterans who may have questions or feel disgruntled, but from a front office standpoint, acknowledged that there is only so much he can do.

"Number one thing is, I ask them how they feel and if they need anything from me, if they have any questions, we'll be clear and transparent," Fernandez said. "I love having them around. They're great veterans and they can help us set this foundation here."

Cam Johnson and Net veterans know they can be dealt at any time. GETTY

Rose to remain ineligible for Hall of Fame induction

Pete Rose still isn't going into the Baseball Hall of Fame.

While the career hits leader's banishment from baseball 35 years ago was often referred to as a lifetime ban, and his death this week led some to believe that would end, Rose agreed to permanent ineligibility from Major League Baseball following a probe of his betting on the game.

Anyone on the permanently ineligible list can't be considered for election to the Hall under a rule adopted by the Hall's board of directors in 1991. Rose's status didn't change when he died Monday at age 83 of natural causes in Las Vegas.

That certainly won't stop the debate about whether the 17-time All-Star with 4,256 hits deserves inclusion.

The Hall of Fame's board adopted the rule 1 ½ years after Rose agreed to the ban, and the same year that he would have become eligible to be on the ballot for the first time.

FERNANDO STEPPING AWAY

Fernando Valenzuela is stepping away from his broadcast duties with the Dodgers for the rest of the season so the former pitcher can focus on his health.

Valenzuela, who turns 64 on Nov. 1, is a Spanish language broadcaster for LA. The team said Wednesday he is hoping to return for next season.

The Dodgers will host San Diego or Atlanta in Game 1 of their NL Division Series on Saturday night.

Valenzuela spent the first 11 of his 17 years in the majors with Los Angeles. He helped the Dodgers win the 1981 World Series, winning the NL Cy Young Award and Rookie of the Year after he went 13-7 with a 2.48 ERA in 25 starts.

MATTINGLY'S ROLE CHANGES

The Blue Jays are moving Don Mattingly back to the position of full-time bench coach after the six-time All-Star also spent the 2024 season as the team's offensive coordinator.

"He's excited about that opportunity to impact us and (manager John Schneider) in a different way and a bigger way," general manager Ross Atkins said Wednesday at his end-of-season news conference. "We think the world of Donnie. He's been incredible and open-minded to change, as well."

Atkins said associate manager DeMarlo Hale will remain in his role supporting Schneider in 2025.

However, Atkins said hitting coach Guillermo Martinez, field coordinator Gil Kim and assistant pitching coach Jeff Ware won't return after the Blue Jays went 74-88 and finished last in the AL East.

● The Pirates fired hitting coach Andy Haines and bullpen coach Justin Meccage on Wednesday, three days after the team finished last in the NL Central.

Pittsburgh's 76-86 record included a 21-34 mark after the trade deadline that dropped the Pirates out of the playoff race. There were multiple factors in the freefall, most notably an offense that failed to show any real signs of progress during Haines' three seasons with the club.

● The Twins are remaking their on-field staff in the aftermath of a late-season collapse that kept them out of the playoffs, announcing Thursday that hitting coaches Rudy Hernandez and David Popkins, assistant hitting coach Derek Shomon and assistant bench/infield coach Tony Diaz will not return next year.

The Twins lost 27 of their last 39 games to finish 82-80 after staying in playoff position for the majority of the season. President of baseball operations Derek Falvey and manager Rocco Baldelli will return, but some changes were inevitable after such a pronounced failure down the stretch.

DONCIC HURTS CALF

The Mavericks' Luka Doncic injured a calf during preseason practice and will be re-evaluated in a week.

The Mavericks are in Las Vegas for training camp, and the club didn't indicate if Doncic was with the team or stayed in Dallas. The team held media day Monday before opening a three-day camp in Nevada on Tuesday.

The injury to Doncic comes after fellow star guard Kyrie Irving broke a thumb while working out in the offseason following Dallas' five-game loss to Boston in the NBA Finals.

Irving said his thumb was progressing well after he resumed basketball activities.

ON THIS DATE

OCT. 3

1947: Floyd Bevens of the Yankees held the Dodgers hitless until two were out in the ninth, when pinch-hitter Cookie Lavagetto doubled in two runs for a 3-2 Brooklyn victory in the fourth game of the World Series.

1951: Bobby Thomson hit a three-run homer off Ralph Branca of the Brooklyn Dodgers with one out in the bottom of the ninth to give the New York Giants a 5-4 playoff victory and the National League pennant.
