Mayor Adams, at a news conference with Police Commissioner Edward Caban, points out a weapon caught by Evolv detection system. Adams said scanners will be installed at a few subway stations Thursday or Friday.

Civil rights fear on launch of gun scanners in subway

BY CHRIS SOMMERFELDT
NEW YORK DAILY NEWS

The NYPD is forging ahead with activating gun detection scanners in the city subway system this week even though the department hasn't outlined a formal policy for the new technology – an omission civil rights advocates say puts the rollout on legally shaky ground.

According to Mayor Adams, the scanners, developed by Evolv Technology, will be installed at a handful of turnstiles at undisclosed subway stations Thursday or Friday as part of a pilot program that's supposed to run for a month.

However, disclosure requirements mandated by the so-called POST Act have not been met, according to the Legal Aid Society. The POST Act, enacted in 2020 to increase transparency around the NYPD's use of surveillance technology, requires the department to publicly release an "impact and use policy" for any new surveillance device it intends to use within 45 days of the close of a public comment period on such a gadget.

The public comment period on the Evolv scanners expired May 13, meaning the NYPD had until June 28 to release a final policy for their use.

But as of Wednesday, the NYPD's POST Act database didn't list any final policy for the Evolv devices.

"City Hall continues to violate the POST Act by denying New Yorkers the right to review the final policy before this administration unilaterally moves ahead with unleashing a novel surveillance technology on the public," said Diane Akerman, a staff attorney at the Legal Aid Society's digital forensics unit. "It is a continuing affront to New Yorkers that the mayor refuses to provide transparency and oversight to his constituents, the very people who will be subject to the use of this invasive technology."

Adams' office declined to say Tuesday which stations will see the scanners installed this week, citing safety concerns. But an NYPD source told the Daily News that Times Square and other major transit hubs are going to get them, and that activation is likely Friday.

Legal Aid declined to say whether it plans to take court action over the POST Act matter.

Spokesmen for the NYPD and the mayor didn't return requests for comment on the privacy issues.

The mayor and NYPD officials have argued that the scanners will help officers find and arrest people who enter the subways carrying illegal guns, knives or other weapons.

"It's just not a metal detector, there's a screen, and if a person is carrying a firearm and they walk past the detector, it lights up and shows you where the gun is on that person," Adams said in a Wednesday morning appearance on 94.7 The Block radio.

"You don't have to stop and pause. You know when you do those metal detectors in the airport, you have to stop and empty your pockets – no. You just keep walking, and as soon as you walk through, if you're carrying a firearm, it would highlight exactly where that firearm is on your body, and a police officer is going to be at the location."

This week's planned Evolv unveiling comes as police data show major crimes in the subway system remain down as compared with the same period last year. Murders are up, though, year over year, with six so far in 2024, up from five in the same period last year.

Legal Aid and other civil rights advocates say the Evolv technology, used widely at large-scale public events, is unlikely to help crack down on guns in the subways.

They argue that anyone carrying a firearm could just avoid walking through the scanners, which are large and must be staffed by at least one officer. Advocates have also pointed to Evolv's CEO saying in a conference call this year that subways are not a "good use case" for his company's scanners because of the electromagnetic difficulties that come with such an environment.

Advocates' main concern, though, is that the machines could pose an invasion of privacy for New Yorkers who use the subways to commute.

"The fact that these technologies are ineffective and frequently trigger false alarms … should serve as enough reason for Mayor Adams to scrap this misguided plan," Akerman said.

In a sign that deployment is imminent, an Evolv scanner was seen being staged outside the NYPD's downtown Manhattan headquarters Wednesday afternoon.

According to a transit source familiar with the matter, the Adams administration has conducted 22,000 test scans at 30 stations in the past eight weeks in anticipation of the start of the pilot. The tests have not involved passengers, according to the source.

GRIM TOLL IN GANG WAR

Fatal back-to-back B'klyn shoots linked to Venezuelan foes

BY THOMAS TRACY
NEW YORK DAILY NEWS

A pair of Brooklyn shootings that left two men dead and a third clinging to life was sparked by an ongoing Venezuelan gang war, police sources said Wednesday.

The two back-to-back Sunday shootings, one in a park and one outside a migrant shelter, happened just two blocks and seven minutes apart in Clinton Hill. Witnesses told police that a four-door sedan followed by two men on a moped were spotted at each scene before bullets started flying.

The slayings took place amid growing tensions between the Venezuelan-based Tren de Aragua and an offshoot gang known as Anti-Tren, the sources said.

The first shooting took place at the Steuben Playground near Flushing Ave. and Steuben St. at 10:44 p.m., cops said. The victim, identified as Arturo Jose Rodriguez-Marcano, was shot twice in the chest and was rushed to New York-Presbyterian Hospital Brooklyn Methodist, where he died. Rodriguez-Marcano, 30, was homeless, cops say.

Two shell casings were recovered at the scene.

Seven minutes later, the same sedan and moped were seen passing a shelter for migrants on Ryerson St. near Park Ave., where 21-year-old Enny de Jesus Urbina Mendez and a 59-year-old man were standing.

The passenger on the moped jumped off, shot at both men and jumped back on the moped, which sped off.

Mendez suffered gunshot wounds all over his body and died at Bellevue Hospital. The 59-year-old man blasted in the head was taken to New York-Presbyterian Hospital Brooklyn Methodist, where he remains in critical condition.

"The 59-year-old guy had nothing to do with it. He only sit down drinking and enjoying," one witness, who wanted to be identified only as Angel, told the Daily News. "There were two guys on motorcycles with masks on. It's scary."

The moped sped off and crashed near the corner of Park Ave. and Taaffe Place, about six blocks from the shooting.

The gunman ran off but the operator of the moped was seriously injured and hospitalized, cops said. No charges were immediately filed against the hospitalized suspect.

Investigators managed to recover surveillance video of the shooter. They released the images late Monday and asked anyone with information on his identity or whereabouts to come forward.

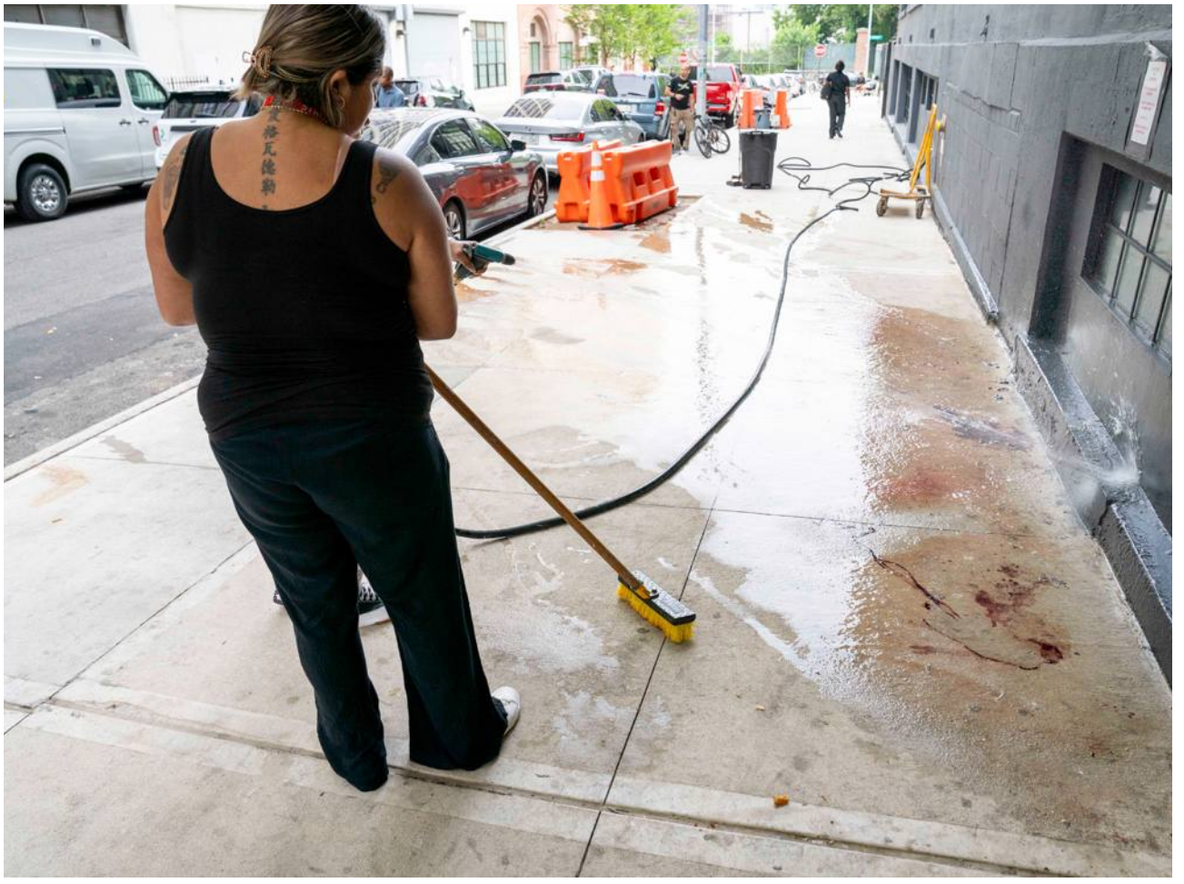

Mendez is a Venezuelan national who came into the U.S. about a year ago through San Diego. Since moving to the city, he has been arrested repeatedly for shoplifting, mostly in Manhattan, cops said.

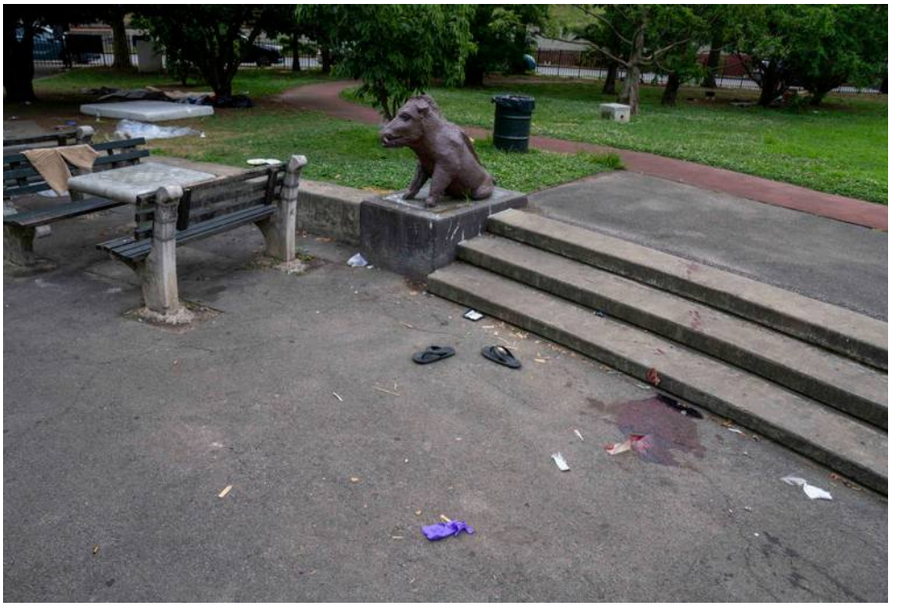

The hospitalized man who was operating the moped is a Venezuelan migrant who came to the U.S. about a month ago, police sources said.

Beginning as a prison gang in Aragua, Venezuela, Tren de Aragua has quickly become a transnational criminal organization that is expanding throughout the Western Hemisphere, according to the U.S. Treasury Department.

The gang is known for human smuggling and sex trafficking as well as money laundering and drug dealing.

Last month, Bernardo Raul Castro Mata, who was arrested for shooting two Queens police officers after being caught zipping the wrong way down a one-way Queens street on a scooter, admitted to authorities that he is a member of Tren de Aragua. He told authorities it wasn't a big deal for gang members and police in his native country to shoot at each other.

Protesters hit Israel during Bibi visit to D.C.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON – Thousands of protesters against the war in Gaza converged Wednesday on Washington to condemn Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu's visit, chanting "Free, free Palestine" as they marched toward the Capitol before police deployed pepper spray on some in the crowd.

Demonstrators calling for an end to the war that has killed more than 39,000 Palestinians filled several blocks as they weaved through the streets of the nation's capital carrying Palestinian flags and signs with messages such as "arrest Netanyahu" and "end all U.S. aid to Israel."

Outside Washington's Union Station, protesters removed American flags and hoisted Palestinian ones in their place to massive cheers in the crowd.

"Bibi, Bibi, We're not done! The intifada has just begun!" protesters shouted, referring to Netanyahu by his nickname.

"Netanyahu, you can't hide. You're committing genocide," other protesters shouted.

Throngs of demonstrators rallied near the Capitol before starting their march ahead of Netanyahu's joint address to Congress, but police blocked them from getting close to the building. Police said they used pepper spray after some protesters became "violent" and "failed to obey" orders to move back from the police line.

Before Netanyahu's speech, some protesters tried to block his route to the Capitol but were removed from the street by police. After being turned away by officers near the Capitol, protesters wound through the Capitol Hill neighborhood for several blocks before gathering in front of the nearby rail station.

Outside Union Station, at least four protesters were handcuffed and taken away by police. Protesters shouted, "Let them go!" at officers who formed a circle.

One person grabbed at a police officer's riot shield and then raised his fists in a fighting stance.

An officer was seen grabbing a Palestinian flag from a woman and tossing it aside. At least one protester appeared to be overcome from the effects of pepper spray.

Capitol Police said in a post on X that six people who "disrupted" Netanyahu's address were removed from the House gallery and arrested.

JOE: I PUT NATION BEFORE 'ANY TITLE'

In first address to U.S. since quitting race, says it's more important to save democracy than cling to presidency

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON – President Biden on Wednesday delivered a solemn call to voters to defend the country's democracy as he laid out in an Oval Office address his decision to drop his bid for reelection and throw his support behind Vice President Kamala Harris.

Insisting that "the defense of democracy is more important than any title," Biden used his first public address since his announcement Sunday that he was stepping aside to deliver an implicit repudiation of former President Donald Trump.

He did not directly call out Trump, whom he has called an existential threat to democracy. The 10-minute address also gave Biden a chance to try to shape how history will remember his one and only term in office.

"Nothing, nothing can come in the way of saving our democracy," Biden said, in a somber coda to his 50 years spent in public office. "And that includes personal ambition."

It was a moment for the history books – a U.S. president reflecting before the nation on why he was taking the rare step of voluntarily handing off power. It hasn't been done since 1968, when Lyndon Johnson announced he would not seek reelection in the heat of the Vietnam War.

"I revere this office," Biden said. "But I love my country more."

Trump, just an hour earlier at a campaign rally, revived his baseless claims of voter fraud in the 2020 presidential election, which he lost to Biden. His refusal to concede inspired the Capitol insurrection of Jan. 6, 2021, which Biden called "the worst attack on our democracy since the Civil War."

Biden skirted the political reality that brought him to that point: His abysmal performance in a debate against Trump nearly a month ago, where he spoke haltingly, appeared ashen and failed to rebut his predecessor's attacks, sparked a crisis of confidence from Democrats.

Lawmakers and ordinary voters questioned not just whether he was capable of beating Trump in November, but also whether, at 81, he was still fit for the high-pressure job.

Biden, who said he believed his record was deserving of another term in office, tried to outlast the skepticism and quell the concerns with interviews and tepid rallies, but the pressure to end his campaign only mounted from the party's political elites and from ordinary voters.

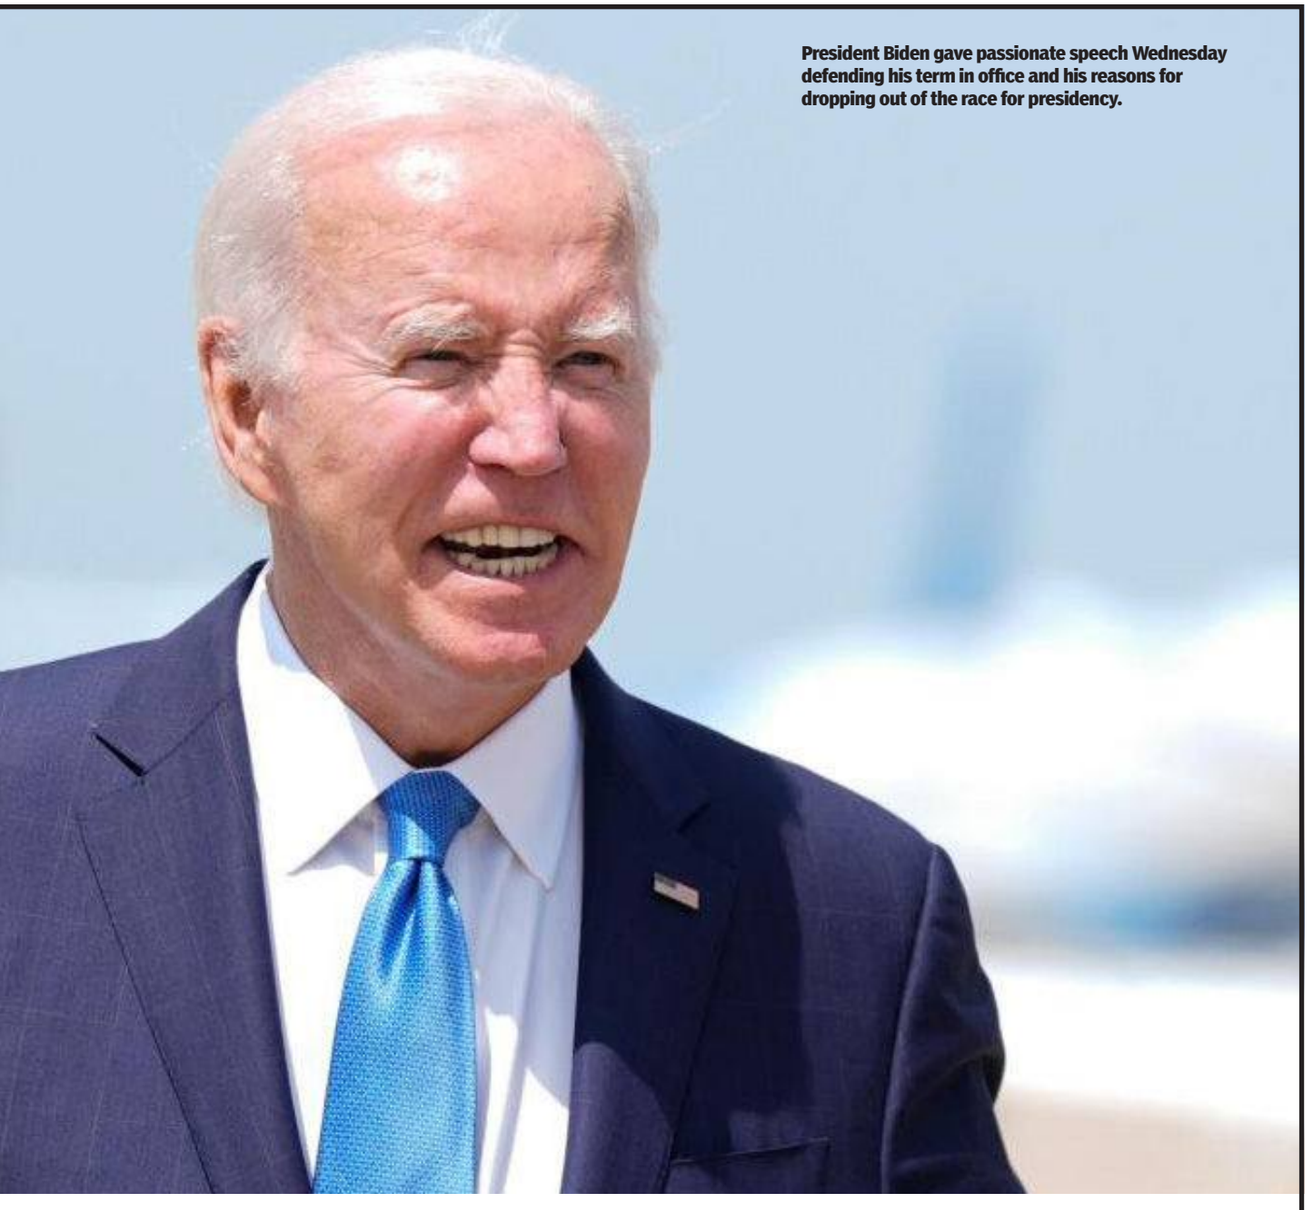

"I have decided the best way forward is to pass the torch to a new generation," Biden said, saying he wanted to make room for "fresh voices, yes, younger voices."

He added, "That is the best way to unite our nation."

It was a belated fulfillment of his 2020 pledge to be a bridge to a new generation of leaders – and a bow to the drumbeat of calls from within his party to step aside.

Biden's address was carried live by the major broadcast and cable news networks. He spooled out an weighty to-do list for his last six months in office, pledging to remain focused on being president until his term expires at noon on Jan. 20. He said he would work to end the war between Israel and Hamas in Gaza, fight to boost government support to cure cancer, address climate change and push for Supreme Court reform.

WHITE HOUSE 2024

President Biden gave passionate speech Wednesday defending his term in office and his reasons for dropping out of the race for presidency.

The president sought to use the address to outline the stakes in the election, which both Biden and Harris have framed as a choice between freedom and chaos, but he tried to steer clear of overt campaigning from his official office.

"The great thing about America is here, kings and dictators do not rule," Biden said. "The people do. History is in your hands. The power is in your hands. The idea of America – lies in your hands."

Biden was also making the case for his legacy of sweeping domestic legislation and the renewal of alliances abroad. But the way history will remember his time in office and his historic decision to step aside is intertwined with Harris' electoral result in November, particularly as the vice president runs tightly on the achievements of the Biden administration.

His advisers say he intends to hold campaign events and fundraisers benefiting Harris, whom Biden praised as "tough" and "capable," albeit at a far slower pace than if he had remained on the ballot himself.

Harris advisers will ultimately have to decide how to deploy the president, whose popularity sagged as voters in both parties questioned his fitness for office.

Biden, aides say, knows that if Harris loses, he'll be criticized for staying in the race too long and not giving her or another Democrat time to effectively mount a campaign against Trump. If she wins, she'll ensure his policy victories are secured and expanded, and he'll be remembered for a Washingtonian decision to step aside for the next generation of leadership.

Biden said he's grateful to have served as president – nowhere else would a kid with a stutter grow up to sit in the Oval Office.

"I've given my heart and my soul to our nation," he said. "I've been blessed a million times in return."

Press secretary Karine Jean-Pierre said Wednesday that any question of Biden resigning his office before the election – which would allow Harris to run as an incumbent – was "ridiculous."

Jean-Pierre said Biden has "no regrets" about his decision to stay in the race as long as he did, or his decision to quit it over the weekend. She said Biden's decision had nothing to do with his health.

Trump, who watched Biden's remarks from his private jet, posted on his social media platform that the president "was barely understandable, and sooo bad!"

As he spoke inside the Oval Office, Biden was joined off-camera by family members, including his wife, Jill, son Hunter, daughter Ashley and several grandchildren. Hundreds of administration aides held a watch party in the White House and gathered in the Rose Garden afterward to hear Biden thank them for their service. Outside the gates, supporters of Biden gathered holding signs that read "We love Joe," and a brass band played,

Netanyahu rips demonstrators and backs war

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON – Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu defended Israel's war in Gaza and condemned American protesters in a scathing speech to Congress Wednesday that triggered boycotts by many top Democratic lawmakers and drew thousands to the Capitol to condemn the war and the humanitarian crisis it has created.

Netanyahu vowed to press on with the war until "total victory," disappointing hopes by some that the Israeli leader's visit to the United States could bring some breakthrough in negotiations for a ceasefire and hostage release.

Speaking to applause from some U.S. lawmakers, and stony silence from others, Netanyahu sought to bolster U.S. support for his country's fight against Hamas and other Iran-backed armed groups.

"America and Israel must stand together. When we stand together something really simple happens: We win, they lose," said Netanyahu, who wore a yellow pin expressing solidarity with the Israeli hostages held by Hamas.

But the Israeli leader soon pivoted to a darker tone as he derided those protesting the war on college campuses and elsewhere in the U.S., gesturing to demonstrations happening on the streets outside the Capitol. He called protesters "useful idiots" for Israel's adversaries.

He drew shouts of applause from many in Congress, but also silence from leading Democrats who declined to stand and cheer.

Freed former hostages of Hamas and families of hostages listened in the House chamber. Lawmakers of both parties rose to applaud the Israeli leader in milder moments in the speech. Security escorted out protesters in the gallery who rose to display T-shirts with slogans demanding that leaders close a deal ending the conflict and freeing hostages.

Netanyahu accused the numerous protesters of the war in the United States of standing with the terrorists who he said killed babies in Hamas' attack on Oct. 7.

KAM FOCUSES ON WOMEN,

In 'fight for our nation's future' against Don, she also aims

BY DAVE GOLDINER
NEW YORK DAILY NEWS

Vice President Kamala Harris plans to beat former President Donald Trump in the November election by winning over young voters and women while turbocharging turnout with people of color.

As Harris hit the trail for a second straight day Wednesday, her newly minted campaign says it will lean heavily on reclaiming voting blocs that traditionally vote Democratic, but have drifted toward Republicans in 2024.

"In this moment, I believe we face a choice between two different visions for our nation," Harris told a gathering in Indianapolis of Zeta Phi Beta, a national Black sorority. "One focused on the future, the other focused on the past. With your support, I am fighting for our nation's future."

Harris scored another record-breaking day of fundraising, gaining $276 million in donations and pledges since launching her campaign Sunday afternoon, including $126 million from 1.4 million individual donors and an additional $150 million from megadonors to the main Democratic super PAC.

The campaign believes that Harris, who would be the nation's first Black woman president if elected, can win over what it calls persuadable swing voters who had been apathetic or unhappy with their choice when President Biden was leading the ticket against Trump.

"Harris enters the presidential race with clear advantages among voters critical to victory," campaign director Jen O'Malley Dillon wrote Wednesday in a memo about the race. "This campaign will be close, it will be hard-fought, but Vice President Harris is in a position of strength – and she's going to win."

The biggest challenge in building Harris' coalition is that she may have an even tougher time than Biden in maintaining support among white men, and especially white men who lack a college degree.

Trump and his running mate, J.D. Vance, have already signaled that they plan to double down on the former president's wildly successful strategy of appealing to working-class voters, especially in the Rust Belt.

WHITE HOUSE 2024

to boost turnout of people of color

The GOP also hopes to win a greater share of Latino and young voters, with some polls showing Trump winning or about even among both groups.

Harris will need to counter that approach by winning a bigger share of white voters with a college education, especially white women, and boosting turnout among Black and Latino voters.

On the issues, Harris plans to push harder than Biden on reproductive rights, the party's best issue and one that can potentially dramatically expand her appeal to women.

Party strategists believe she is much better qualified than Biden to roast Trump for his hard-to-pin-down approach to the issue, which includes boasting about appointing the judges who allowed abortion to be outlawed while insisting he would leave abortion bans to the states.

She will also aggressively attack Trump over the right-wing Project 2025, which amounts to an extremist blueprint for the nation.

The memo laid out an Electoral College strategy that includes battling hard for the Sun Belt swing states of Arizona, Nevada, Georgia and North Carolina, along with the Rust Belt so-called "blue wall" battlegrounds of Pennsylvania, Michigan and Wisconsin.

That amounts to a shift from Biden's campaign, which was forced into a risky plan of hoping to get to 270 electoral votes by sweeping the Midwest swing states and the Omaha-based 2nd Congressional District, because he had fallen too far behind Trump in the Sun Belt.

Vice President Kamala Harris (main) boards Air Force Two on Wednesday as she hits campaign trail for second straight day on mission to best Donald Trump (l.). Part of her strategy is getting more women (above) to vote Democratic.

FBI chief: Pa. shooter researched JFK killer

BY JOSEPH WILKINSON
NEW YORK DAILY NEWS

The man who shot former President Donald Trump searched "How far away was Oswald from Kennedy?" before the shooting, according to FBI Director Christopher Way.

Thomas Crooks, 20, made the search on July 6, the same day he registered to attend Trump's July 13 rally in Butler, Pa., Wray testified Wednesday on Capitol Hill.

"That is a search that is significant in terms of his state of mind," Wray told the House Judiciary Committee.

Lee Harvey Oswald was 265 feet away from John F. Kennedy when he killed him on Nov. 22, 1963, in Dallas. Crooks was 471 feet away from Trump when he opened fire, according to investigators.

Authorities recovered eight bullet casings from Crooks' perch on a manufacturing building, Wray confirmed Wednesday.

Crooks visited the rally site at least three times before the shooting, according to Wray. He lived in Bethel Park, about 40 miles south of Butler, on the other side of Pittsburgh. Crooks' first visit was July 7, one day after his Oswald search, Wray said.

He also scouted the site twice on the day of the shooting, once in the morning and once in the afternoon with a drone, according to Wray. The drone was used to survey an area about 200 yards away from the stage.

Unlike doomed Secret Service Director Kimberly Cheatle on Monday, Wray volunteered plenty of information about the assassination attempt. While Cheatle cited ongoing investigations for her silence, such probes did not stop Wray.

However, he could not speak to exactly why Crooks targeted Trump. Wray noted, as previously reported, that Crooks had photos of Trump, President Biden and other prominent figures on his phone.

"A lot of the usual repositories of information have not yielded anything notable in terms of motive or ideology," Wray testified.

Cheatle resigned one day after testifying.

The FBI has not faced the same criticism over the shooting because the agency was not involved in securing the site. With News Wire Services

Trump's nephew recalls him spouting the N-word

BY BRIAN NIEMIETZ
NEW YORK DAILY NEWS

Donald Trump's nephew recalls hearing his famous uncle go on a racist tirade in the 1970s after the retractable top on his white Cadillac Eldorado convertible was slashed in Queens.

"N––s," Trump allegedly said. "Look at what the n––s did."

Fred C. Trump III makes that claim in a memoir coming out next week titled "All in the Family: The Trumps and How We Got This Way," according to The Guardian, which obtained an early copy of the book. The author says he wasn't yet a teenager when the alleged incident occurred outside the Trump family home, but he recounts his uncle being "p––d."

He claims Donald Trump had no idea who vandalized his car, but said his uncle's brain "went straight to the place where people's minds sometimes go when they face a fresh affront."

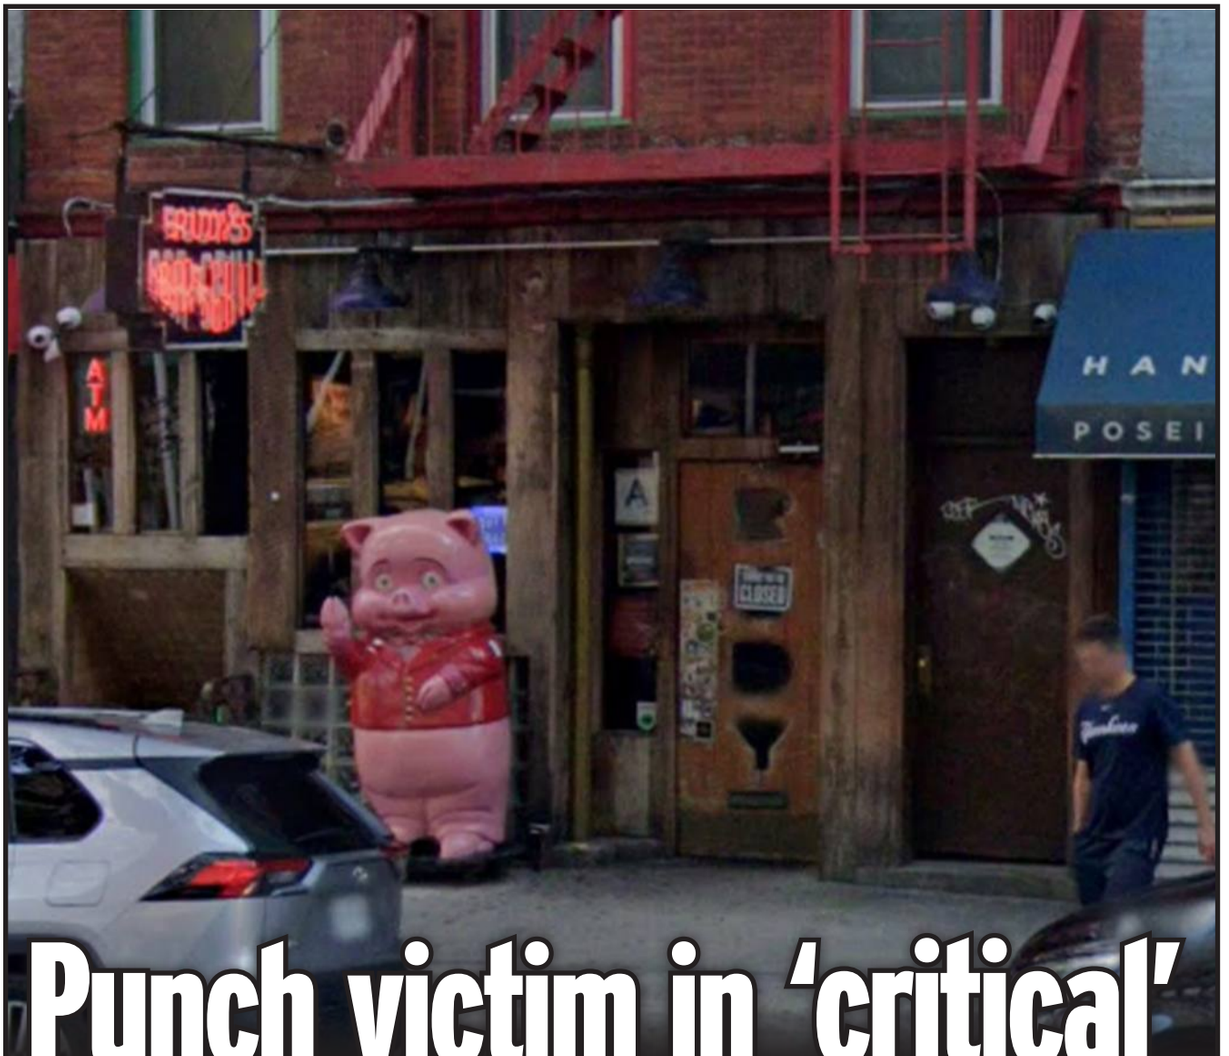

A Trump spokesman called the story "fake news" and claimed such reports about the 78-year-old Republican leader have been disproven. "Anyone who knows President Trump knows he would never use such language," campaign spokesman Steven Cheung told The Daily Beast when asked about the allegation.

Trump III is the brother of author Mary Trump, who also penned a memoir painting their uncle as a dishonest man raised by his abusive father, Fred Trump.

Trump III says he doesn't recall hearing Fred Trump use the N-word, though he does remember him using a derogatory Yiddish term for Black people. The elder Trump was detained by police outside a rowdy 1927 Ku Klux Klan rally, but there's no evidence he was a member of the racist organization, according to USA Today.

Former President Trump found out Sunday he would likely be campaigning against a Black woman as he attempts to be elected to the White House for a second time.

Kamala Harris started her presidential campaign by stating that as a former criminal prosecutor, she knows "Trump's type."

Punch victim in 'critical'

Hell's Kitchen beating has him clinging to life

BY ROCCO PARASCANDOLA
NEW YORK DAILY NEWS

Two friends leaving a Hell's Kitchen bar were punched unconscious, leaving one of them clinging to life, in a heated clash with a man riding a moped on the sidewalk, cops said Wednesday.

The critically injured victim, a 38-year-old German immigrant living in Brooklyn, remains intubated as cops continued their hunt for the menacing moped rider, police sources said.

The victims left Rudy's Bar & Grill and were walking to an Uber waiting for them by the curb at 2:40 a.m. Tuesday when the attacker, riding a black moped on the sidewalk, bumped into the critically hurt victim's friend, nudging him with his arm.

The friend, a 56-year-old man from Illinois, was in the city on a business trip, police sources said.

Words were exchanged as the attacker rode past the two men on Ninth Ave. near W. 43rd St.

The moped driver rolled off, but quickly circled back and began arguing with the two men, cops said. During the exchange, he punched the older victim in the face, knocking him unconscious, cops said.

The German immigrant, who had tried to intervene to prevent the assault, was also punched in the face, cops said. The force of the blow sent him reeling backward onto the sidewalk, smacking the back of his head on the concrete.

The fight was caught on the bar's surveillance cameras, a police source said.

The younger victim suffered a massive head injury and was rushed to Bellevue Hospital in critical condition. His friend was taken to Mount Sinai West hospital, where he was treated and released.

The attacker took off and is being sought. He's described as Black and about 5-feet-10 with black hair pulled back into a braid. He was wearing a white T-shirt and black pants with a white stripe running down the leg.

Cops released surveillance footage of the suspect and are asking the public's help identifying him and tracking him down.

Anyone with information is asked to call Crime Stoppers at (800) 577-TIPS. All calls will be kept confidential.

Boy, 14, nabbed in random bat bash of woman

BY RONI JACOBSON
NEW YORK DAILY NEWS

A 14-year-old boy has been nabbed for a caught-on-video baseball bat attack on a 58-year-old woman in lower Manhattan, police said Wednesday.

The arrest comes almost one month after the attack, which police say was random.

The teen, who police did not publicly name because of his age, is charged with assault.

Victim Shi Yanan suffered injuries to her head and leg in the harrowing 2 p.m. June 25 attack in which two masked individuals assaulted her near Monroe and Market Sts. near the Manhattan Bridge.

Her two young assailants were recorded sneaking up behind her, one of them carrying a baseball bat. The assailant not holding the bat punched Yanan in the back of the head when she turned around to confront him.

The duo then pushed her into a doorframe of a nearby building and started beating her with the bat and punching and kicking her.

The attack continued for 30 excruciating seconds before the two ran off east on Madison St.

Police identified the arrested teen as the one wielding the baseball bat. Cops apprehended him at his home, which is near where the attack occurred.

After the attackers ran off, Yanan was recorded retrieving the items from her purse, which were strewn across the sidewalk. A bystander helped her call police and she was taken to SUNY Downstate Medical Center, where she was treated and released.

The attack left Yanan with "severe psychological trauma," according to a family member who spoke to the Daily News.

"Targeting the elderly, women and children is truly reprehensible," the family added. "We urge the police to fully utilize the surrounding evidence to swiftly bring the criminal to justice."

The second attacker remains on the loose.

Anyone with information on the second suspect is asked to call Crime Stoppers at (800) 577-TIPS. All calls will be kept confidential.

QUESTIONS FOR ADAMS ADVISER

Auto insurance giant GEICO plans to depose confidant Carone in 'money laundering' suit

BY CHRIS SOMMERFELDT
NEW YORK DAILY NEWS

One of the country's largest auto insurance companies is seeking to question Frank Carone, Mayor Adams' political confidant, as part of a civil lawsuit alleging corporate entities Carone co-founded were involved in orchestrating a sprawling "money laundering scheme," court papers reveal.

The alleged scheme, which was first reported on by the Daily News in December when the suit was filed, centers around the claim that the corporate entities, known as the Financial Vision Groups, provided funding for a web of illegally operating medical clinics. Those clinics, in turn, billed major U.S. auto insurer GEICO for some $3.5 million worth of "no-fault" medical treatments that were either "unnecessary" or never provided at all, according to GEICO's suit, which alleges fraud and is requesting reimbursement and damages.

In a new development, GEICO's attorneys filed a previously unreported letter in Brooklyn Federal Court in late June notifying the presiding judge they plan to depose Carone during the discovery process in the case. The June 28 letter doesn't make clear what GEICO's lawyers specifically want to ask Carone about or when they hope to hold the deposition, during which Carone would testify under oath.

A GEICO attorney didn't respond to emailed questions this week.

Carone, the mayor's former chief of staff who remains a key adviser to him, isn't named as a defendant in GEICO's lawsuit, but the three Financial Vision entities he helped launch are. Asked about the suit last year, Carone said he played "no operational role" in the Financial Vision entities after co-founding them and that he has since "walked away" from them.

A spokesman for Carone also said at the time his involvement mostly related to lending money to the entities and receiving stock options in exchange for doing so.

On Monday, Carone, a licensed lawyer, said he hasn't been contacted by GEICO's attorneys, but that he will sit for a deposition if legally required. "I will follow whatever the law requires," he told The News in a text.

The letter says GEICO's lawyers also plan to question all of the suit's named defendants, including Daniel Kandhorov, a businessman and friend to Adams, who has with his wife donated to the legal defense fund the mayor launched in response to the federal investigation into his campaign's ties to Turkey, city records show.

Incorporation records show Kandhorov co-founded the Financial Vision vehicles with Carone and others. But Kandhorov is also accused in the GEICO suit of having taken on a leading role in the medical clinics that allegedly pumped out the fraudulent insurance claims.

In a separate legal action in Nassau County that remains pending, Carone's former law partner and fellow Financial Vision co-founder Howard Fensterman is suing Kandhorov on allegations he defrauded them during the Financial Vision affair.

In their latest court-filed letter, GEICO's lawyers also notified the judge it plans to seek testimony from a certified public accountant who can speak to the fact that the funding agreements between the Financial Vision entities and the allegedly illegal medical clinics "do not comport with general business practices." Due to the convoluted financial agreement, GEICO's suit alleges, "the flow of funds" that took place illustrated "a money laundering scheme."

Legal issues related to no-fault insurance have dogged Carone since the early days of the Adams administration.

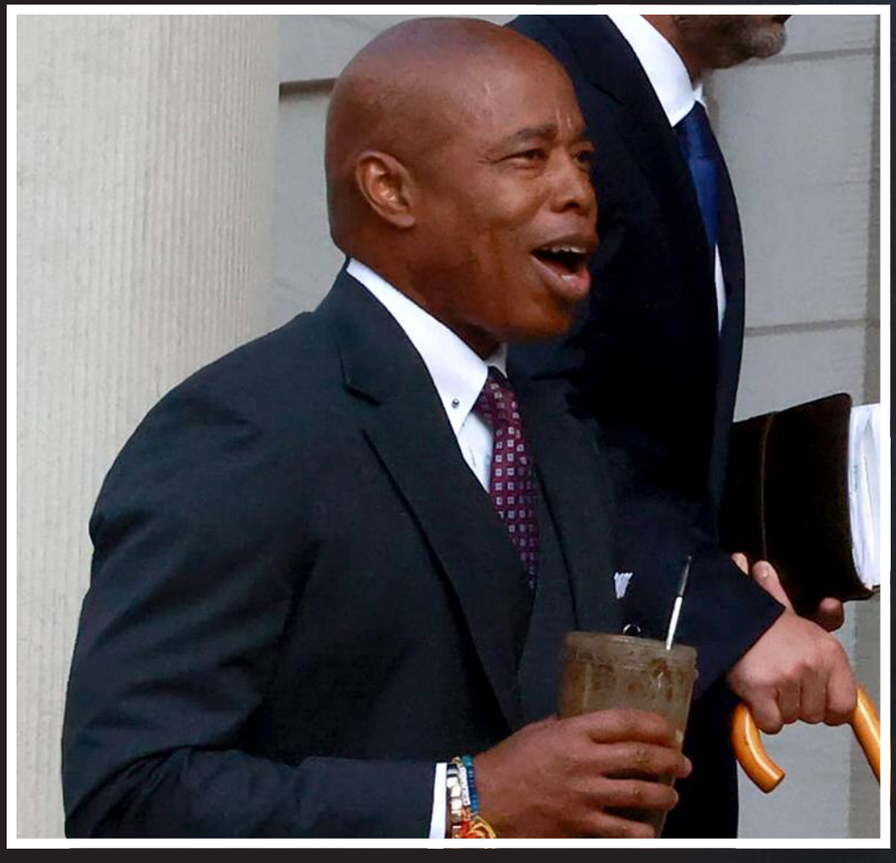

Shortly after Adams became mayor in January 2022, GEICO subpoenaed Carone, then Adams' chief of staff, for documents as part of a separate no-fault insurance fraud lawsuit against some of the same defendants listed in the latest action. In response to the subpoena, Carone, who wasn't personally named as a defendant in that suit, either, turned over records that have yet to be publicly released, court papers show.

Having played a key role in Adams' first Brooklyn borough president campaign, Carone is one of the mayor's most trusted political advisers.

The Brooklyn-born barrister, who resigned as Adams' chief of staff in late 2022, is expected to chair the mayor's 2025 campaign and said last week the reelection team is in the "final push" for fundraising.

"We will be in a position to finish all campaign fundraising by October, a full eight months ahead of the June primary," Carone told Politico on July 16.

Simultaneously with working on Adams' campaign, Carone is running Oaktree Solutions, a consulting firm he launched upon leaving City Hall that has since registered to lobby members of the mayor's administration on behalf of private business interests.

Anti-abort violence hit

Activist gets 3+ years for blocking patients at Village clinic

BY MOLLY CRANE-NEWMAN
NEW YORK DAILY NEWS

Personal religious beliefs are not an excuse to break the law, a Manhattan judge said Tuesday before sentencing a notorious anti-abortion activist to more than three years for violently blocking patients from entering Planned Parenthood on Bleecker St.

The message was delivered along with the prison term to Bevelyn Beatty Williams, 33, of Ooltewah, Tenn., who's originally from Staten Island and has described herself as the "wife of Christ."

"You cannot commit crimes even in the name of a religious cause," Manhattan Federal Court Judge Jennifer Rochon said in imposing the 41-month term. "People were trying to give and get legal medical services."

A jury found Williams guilty on Feb. 12 of violating the Freedom of Access to Clinic Entrances Act on June 19 and June 20, 2020, when she blocked women from accessing the clinic through physical and verbal threats, injuring a volunteer escorting patients in the process.

Planned Parenthood provides a wide range of medical services other than abortion for people with and without health insurance, including general gynecological care, breast exams, STD testing, birth control, HPV vaccines and help quitting smoking.

At trial, witnesses testified that they saw Williams using her body as a barrier to the facility and directing other anti-abortion protesters to stop people from going inside. Jurors heard she threatened staff with "war," telling the chief administrative officer she would "terrorize this place" and that "we're gonna terrorize you so good, your business is gonna be over, mama."

"Out of all the appointments today, only one couple came in," prosecutors quoted Williams as bragging in filings to the judge ahead of the sentencing.

The feds, who brought the case in December 2022, presented evidence at the trial earlier this year showing how the situation turned violent on the second day of the protests when Williams crushed a volunteer's hand in a door as they tried to help a colleague enter the facility.

"If I wasn't saved [by Christ], I would have punched that woman in the face," Williams said in court Wednesday, however adding, "In my heart, I would have never wanted that woman's hand to be hurt."

The New York native said she had an abortion when she was 15 and that it "took a toll on me," leading her to prevent others from accessing the procedure, claiming, "I'm not judging on girls waiting to go in there to get an abortion."

"I gave my life to Christ," Williams said, later acknowledging she "got too loud."

The same month as the Bleecker St. encounters, Williams and a co-defendant, Edmee Chavannes, were arrested for smearing paint over a Black Lives Matter mural on the street outside Trump Tower.

Both women have live-streamed their stunts and boasted about having security protection from right-wing group the Proud Boys. They were accused of routinely harassing patients in a now-settled civil suit brought by the New York attorney general in 2021.

"Bevelyn Beatty Williams repeatedly intimidated and interfered with individuals seeking and providing critical reproductive health services. She did so by physically blocking access to clinics, threatening staff, and by force," Manhattan U.S. Attorney Damian Williams said in a statement.

Williams and Chavannes were acquitted of another count accusing them of carrying out a multiyear campaign to block women from accessing reproductive medical care in New York, Georgia, Tennessee and Florida.

A doctor from a Planned Parenthood in Fort Myers, Fla., testified that care was delayed for several patients scheduled to have time-sensitive procedures – or risk bleeding, infection, and severe pain – when Williams, Chavannes and others blocked entrance to the facilities in January 2022.

Six months later, Williams invaded a clinic in Atlanta and screamed at a patient alone in a waiting room with other rioters until the patient left, federal prosecutors alleged at the trial.

The same month, she stopped patients from entering a clinic in Nashville, leading to a conviction for trespassing and a 30-day jail term.

Williams' lawyer, Calvin Scholar, told The News he would request the Bureau of Prisons allow his client to serve her term close to friends and family.

"We accept the jury's verdict," Scholar said. "You know, the sentence is harsh, it's definitely harsh."

A rep for Planned Parenthood did not immediately respond to a request seeking comment.

War profiteer hated Ukraine and helped Russia

BY JOHN ANNESE
NEW YORK DAILY NEWS

A Ukraine-hating war profiteer who helped sell weapons equipment to Russia talked herself into a harsher prison sentence Wednesday – by telling a Brooklyn judge she was her husband's unwitting dupe, even though her text messages suggested she knew exactly what she was doing.

Kristina Puzyreva, 34, got two years in prison for her role in the multimillion-dollar scheme, which involved sending components used in aerial vehicles, guided missile systems and other weapons to sanctioned entities in Russia.

Brooklyn Federal Judge LaShann DeArcy Hall said she was inclined to give Puzyreva a different sentence, particularly in light of the hellish conditions at Brooklyn's Metropolitan Detention Center, where she's been locked up for the past nine months.

Puzyreva was assaulted in the jail, then placed in solitary confinement for a month while staff sorted out that she was the victim, not the attacker.

But she canceled out any Metropolitan Detention Center discount coming her way in her rambling statement to the judge.

"When I committed this crime, I knew my husband had an illegal business. … I never knew that these electronic components would go to weapons," she said.

"I trusted my husband, but he never mentioned to me that it would go somewhere to hurt someone."

She added, "I hate myself that I let myself be part of that."

She said she merely opened the bank accounts her husband used in the scheme to help him avoid taxes.

"I believe that was a patent lie," DeArcy Hall said, pointing to a text exchange between her and her husband where they discussed how a package with "not a pretty part" in it was intercepted by customs officials.

Puzyreva, a Russian-Canadian citizen, pleaded guilty in February to money laundering conspiracy. Her hubby, Nikolay Goltsev, who also took a plea, will be sentenced in December. They worked with a third conspirator, Salimdzhon Nasriddinov, who has also pleaded guilty, and others, to smuggle about $7 million worth of U.S.-origin "dual-use" electronics to Russia between August 2022 and September 2023.

They used two Brooklyn companies, SH Brothers Inc. and SN Electronics Inc., then shipped the electronics through intermediaries in Turkey, Hong Kong, India, China and the United Arab Emirates to get them to Russia.

"Some of the electronic components and integrated circuits with the same make, model and part number shipped by the co-defendants through SH Brothers have been found in seized Russian weapons platforms and signals intelligence equipment in Ukraine," the feds wrote in a July 8 sentencing memo.

Prosecutors described Puzyreva as the "linchpin" of the operation, taking on the minor but critical role of controlling the bank accounts they used to receive their profits from the scheme.

Puzyreva also lamented the pace of Russian President Vladimir Putin's illegal invasion of Ukraine in text messages to her husband and co-conspirator last May, after a drone attack on Moscow, according to court filings.

"What is Putin waiting for. He needs to destroy Ukraine," she wrote to her husband, then continued, "He needs to put fear into them. Those losers. … I hate [ethnic slur for Ukrainians] anyway."

Puzyreva told the judge that she left Russia at age 17 and never wants to return, and that she's half-Ukrainian and doesn't hate Ukraine. She said she expressed support for Ukraine on social media, but became angry when she saw remarks cheering the death of Russian civilians.

"Although we believe the sentence was excessive considering her limited role in the conspiracy, we understand and accept the absolute horror of the war being waged against Ukraine," her lawyer Jeff Chabrowe said Wednesday.

Chabrowe argued that she was manipulated by her husband, who told her when she could go out and who could be her friends, and he repeatedly made that point in court, but DeArcy Hall said he presented no evidence that she was manipulated into the crime.

"I don't think this is a winning argument for you," the judge said. "I do think there are better ones. You should move on."

Vic's dashcam footage aided nab of hit-run killer: cops

BY ROCCO PARASCANDOLA AND ELIZABETH KEOGH
NEW YORK DAILY NEWS

NYPD cops tracked down a Bronx hit-and-run driver using dashcam footage caught by the victim, who was killed in the brutal crash on the Bruckner Expressway, police sources said Wednesday.

Sadiel Ramirez Payano, 21, faces charges including leaving the scene of an accident resulting in death and aggravated unlicensed operation of a motor vehicle following the Sunday crash, which killed 51-year-old Armando Rodriguez.

Rodriguez had pulled over on the right shoulder of the expressway's northbound lanes near Exit 8 by Pelham Parkway around 5:15 a.m., police and prosecutors said.

The man was taking a look at the passenger side of his car when Ramirez Payano, sped past and struck Rodriguez, according to prosecutors.

Rodriguez died at the scene and Ramirez Payano fled behind the wheel of a 2020 Toyota Camry with a distinctive tailpipe, officials said.

The slain man lived in Middletown, Orange County, about 70 miles north of the city, according to police.

Police investigating the crash were able to pull footage from Rodriguez's dash camera, which caught Ramirez Payano's unique tailpipe.

Using this footage, cops were able to track Ramirez Payano's car before and after the crash, police sources said.

They eventually found the car on Waring Ave. near Lodovick Ave. in Pelham Gardens, the hood covered with a blanket.

Under the blanket was significant damage, including the broken driver-side mirror, a cracked windshield and a missing piece of the front bumper, which cops recovered at the crash site.

A woman in the neighborhood told police her niece was in the car with her boyfriend during the crash and the couple had been drinking beforehand, according to police sources.

Cops were continuing to investigate the claim on Wednesday.

Following an arraignment in Bronx Criminal Court, Ramirez Payano was released on a $20,000 cash bail or a $75,000 bond.

ON BROADWAY

A guide to current Broadway shows by Daily News theater critic Chris Jones:

& Juliet: A savvy jukebox musical from London offering a feminist reworking of Shakespeare's "Romeo and Juliet" with added bits and songs made famous by Pink, Britney and Kesha, et al. This nonstop party-empowerment show is derivative, over-confident and fun. Stephen Sondheim Theatre, 124 W. 43rd St.

Aladdin: Disney's "Aladdin" is a bit too frenetic, gag-heavy and overly anxious to please – but it has settled in as an entertaining family attraction featuring a diverse cast, a fun genie whose antics will always remain a tribute to Robin Williams, and the requisite magic carpet ride against a backdrop of the glittering lights of a utopian Arabian night. New Amsterdam Theatre, 214 W. 42nd St.

Back to the Future: The Musical. Closer to a thrill-park ride than a traditional musical, this frenetic new spectacle from London showcases a flying DeLorean car essentially re-creating the role played, years ago, by the helicopter in "Miss Saigon." The show is attracting a family and tourist audience and Roger Bart at peak eccentricity is fun to watch. But unlike the film, the show makes you feel very little. Winter Garden Theatre, 1634 Broadway.

The Book of Mormon: A relic of an era when satirists had more guts, Trey Parker and Matt Stone's show lampoons the LDS religion with the same sharp edge familiar from "South Park." Go enjoy a wicked musical from before America lost so much of its sense of humor. Eugene O'Neill Theatre, 230 W. 49th St.

Cabaret at the Kit Kat Club: An epic disappointment and a money-grabbing misfire, this revival of a musical theater masterpiece is overpriced, under-eroticized and, for the most part, poorly sung. It's an example of the immersive theater craze taken too far and with the wrong show to boot. Eddie Redmayne, Emcee of this unfortunate shebang, comes off a creepy human jack-in-the-box. Spend your money elsewhere on Broadway. August Wilson Theatre, 245 W. 52nd St.

Chicago: This long-lived show celebrating real-life killers of prohibition-era Chicago has been pulling in Broadway suckers since 1996. The real stars here are John Kander and Fred Ebb, who penned a score that drips with melodic aspiration and lyrical cynicism, and Bob Fosse, whose erotically muscular choreography is the perfect match. Ambassador Theatre, 219 W. 49th St.

The Great Gatsby: This is what many people think of when they ponder a big Broadway night out: a familiar yet glamorous title from the Jazz Age, a star tenor in the titular role, songs of passion, obsession and resolve set to string-heavy orchestrations, and a massive Art Deco set cascading off the stage, which has the décor to match. The show is dull and emotionally inert but it's the best dressed crowd on Broadway. Broadway Theatre, 1681 Broadway.

Hadestown: A dystopian 2019 musical rooted in the 2010 concept album by Anaïs Mitchell and updates and retells the classic myth of Orpheus and Eurydice via a compellingly theatrical blend of steampunk, "Westworld" and self-aware Bourbon St. sensuality. It's a thrillingly alarmist show, albeit potentially jarring to those who prefer warmer or more traditional musicals. Mitchell's music variously evokes gospel, blues, blue collar work-song and the ravings of a rabid cult. Walter Kerr Theatre, 219 W. 48th St.

THE BOOK OF MORMON

Hamilton: Still a tough and expensive ticket, this Lin-Manuel Miranda global cultural phenomenon employs a young, diverse cast to tell the story of Alexander Hamilton, the Founding Father with the long-term berth on the ten-spot, but also a scrappy immigrant who wrote like he was running out of time. The music is eclectic and often gorgeous, the emotional intensity still capable of blowing all else away. Richard Rodgers Theatre, 226 W. 46th St.

Harry Potter and the Cursed Child: An epic commitment requiring two tickets and six hours has now been reduced to a more manageable single show. We purists lament the change, which cut much of the subtlety and fun in the text but left all the spectacular theatrical effects. Even in this version, though, Harry Potter fans leave fully satiated. Lyric Theatre, 214 W. 43rd St.

Hell's Kitchen: The songs of Alicia Keys are well suited to a jukebox musical. The burst of energy that flows from hits like "Girl on Fire" are dynamic blasts in a show drawing from Keys' own origin story as a kid growing up in the federally subsidized artists' haven of Manhattan Plaza in Hell's Kitchen. No surprises here and you have to love Keys' music. But lots of warm sentiment and affection for a creative Gotham childhood. Shubert Theatre, 225 W. 44th St.

THE LION KING

Illinoise: A late entry to the season, "Illinoise' is not a traditional musical but Justin Peck's wordless choreographic response to the Sufjan Stevens album, as played live. If you remember Twyla Tharp's "Movin' Out," a response to the music of Billy Joel, or can imagine "A Chorus Line" in the cornfields of the Prairie State, you'll have a sense of what transpires here. It's not for all tastes but very beautiful nonetheless. St. James Theater, 246 W. 44th St.

The Lion King: Julie Taymor's masterful work is 25 years old but still as fresh as a Serengeti morning. This Disney family attraction features stunning puppets, visual tableaux, Elton John songs, African music. It's deservedly the most successful musical of its era. Minskoff Theatre, 200 W. 45th St.

MJ The Musical: This homage to the King of Pop is set during the creative process for Michael Jackson's "Dangerous" world tour. Although there is little mention of the MJ controversies (the estate prefers it that way), "MJ" offers the chance to hear a slew of iconic MJ hits and experience his choreographic soul through the simpatico-but-original ideas of Christopher Wheeldon. Neil Simon Theatre, 250 W. 52nd St.

Moulin Rouge the Musical!: A decadent live translation of Baz Luhrmann's widely beloved 2001 movie musical and an intense, anachronistic extravaganza that stuffs cuts of pop anthems (70 songs! 161 composers!) inside a letter-box of gorgeous retro-red velour. This is date-night pastiche with a unifying communal playlist, and an omnisexual dip into a sensual ocean with nervous fellow travelers. Al Hirschfeld

Theatre, 302 W. 45th St.

The Notebook: This weepy musical based on the 1996 Nicholas Sparks novel and the hit 2004 movie has a gorgeous suite of songs from Ingrid Michaelson, landing somewhere between Duncan Sheik, Jeanine Tesori and Sara Bareilles. The populist show is not for romantic cynics, as you might expect, but this actually is a strikingly artful and minimalist telling of love across generations. Gerald Schoenfeld Theatre, 236 W. 45th St.

Oh, Mary!: Cole Escola's chaotic version of Mary Todd Lincoln casts the former first lady as a wild-eyed wannabe cabaret star marinated in whiskey, paint thinner and self-delusion – and the star of an uproariously anachronistic summer farce that has arrived on the Main Stem from edgier points downtown. It's a satiric soupcon at just 80 minutes, but the running time packs in more laughs than any place on Broadway. Even Abe Lincoln would laugh at this one. Lyceum Theatre, 149 W. 45th St.

The Outsiders: The beloved YA author S.E. Hinton famously penned "The Outsiders" after watching two rival gangs explode at her own Will Rogers School in Tulsa. The resultant musical needed greater expansion of character, a gentler, simpler touch, a better sense of authentic teenage angst and a deeper focus on the heart. But many love this story and will enjoy the talents here and the fresh roots/country score by the Austin-based Jamestown Revival. Jacobs Theatre, 242 W. 45th St.

SIX: The Musical: Just 90 minutes, this small-cast original pop musical is centered on the six wives of Henry VIII who bond in a post-death sisterhood and compete for who actually had the worst time with their bearded pig. Audiences generally ignore the relatively thin gruel and have an empowering blast. Lena Horne Theatre, 256 W. 47th St.

Stereophonic: A fabulous, three-hour dissection of ego, insecurity and the messy, messed-up gorgeousness of the creative process, David Adjmi's "Stereophonic" is about an up-and-coming British rock band on the brink of superstardom making a studio album in California between the summers of 1976 and 1977. What a brilliant piece of must-see Broadway. It's Chekhovian, babe. Golden Theatre, 242 W. 45th St.

Suffs: With Hillary Rodham Clinton as a producer, an all-female cast of 23 playing historical figures, and a weighty topic like the history of women's suffrage, Shaina Taub's musical "Suffs" is more of a gathering of the politically like-minded than a complex evening suffused with surprise. But "Suffs" also is a moving, stirring show that does what all the best Broadway musicals do: It humanizes, empowers, entertains and moves an audience. Music Box Theatre, 239 W. 45th St.

The Who's Tommy: Pete Townshend's prescient 1969 rock opera, a horrifying if ultimately transcendent howl of anger and anguish at the damage wrought on the Boomer generation by their war-scarred parents, has returned to Broadway in a new, born-in-Chicago production from Des McAnuff that will sock you right in the gut. Who leader Townshend's epic achievement is presented as a loud Boomer coda, an emancipatory rock banquet and a reminder that dads really have improved. Nederlander Theatre, 208 W. 41st St.

Water for Elephants: This sentimental musical based on the 2006 Sara Gruen novel and the 2011 Reese Witherspoon movie contains one of the more remarkable ensembles ever seen on Broadway. The hugely talented crew sings, dances and are fully believable as acrobats, aerialists and roustabouts from the tawdry touring circus culture of America in the early 20th century, the setting of a sawdust story wherein an elephant named Rosie busts her trunk through a love triangle. It's formulaic in places but the terrific ensemble carries it through. Imperial Theatre, 249 W. 45th St.

Wicked: Now more than 20 years old, "Wicked" is one of Broadway's best loved attractions. The musical is a prequel to "The Wizard of Oz" and focused on the intense friendship between two witches, one good, one maybe better. The Winnie Holzman book is a witty tour de force and Steven Schwartz came up with a bevy of emotional numbers, including "Defying Gravity," one of the great Act 1 closers of all time. Gershwin Theatre 222 W. 51st St.

2034: Winter Games of Salt Lake City and committee's discontent

BY JOSEPH WILKINSON
NEW YORK DAILY NEWS

AP

International Olympic Committee President Thomas Bach makes it clear Wednesday where the 2034 Winter Games will be held.

Salt Lake City was awarded the 2034 Winter Olympics on Wednesday, but the International Olympic Committee shocked observers by attempting to intimidate federal U.S. authorities in the contract.

The IOC was expected only to rubber-stamp Salt Lake City's bid for the 2034 Games, which was unopposed and anointed late last year by the group's executive board.

However, the contract includes a provision that requires local organizers, including Utah Gov. Spencer Cox and Sen. Mitt Romney, to pressure federal authorities to end an ongoing doping investigation.

"It is shocking to see the IOC itself stooping to threats in an apparent effort to silence those seeking answers to what are now known as facts," U.S. Anti-Doping Agency CEO Travis Tygart said in a statement.

The doping case centers around 23 Chinese swimmers who tested positive for a banned substance before the 2021 Olympics in Tokyo. The World Anti-Doping Agency cleared all 23 swimmers and allowed them to compete. The swimmers won three gold medals in Tokyo, and several are set to compete at the Paris Games beginning this week.

While the World Anti-Doping Agency closed the case, the FBI continued investigating under a 2021 U.S. law, which was passed in the wake of Russia's state-run doping program at the 2014 Sochi Games. The IOC wants an end to that investigation.

"That was the only way that we could guarantee that we would get the Games," Gov. Cox said after the announcement. If the U.S. does not respect the "supreme authority of [the World Anti-Doping Agency]," the governor said, "they can withdraw the Games from us."

Salt Lake City's 10-year preparation period is the longest ever for a modern Winter Games, even though the city hosted the 2002 Olympics as well. However, because of global warming, there are vanishingly few cities and countries that can host the Winter Olympics. Even before awarding the 2034 Games, the IOC had identified only 15 countries capable of hosting the Winter Games in the foreseeable future.

Additionally at Wednesday's meeting, the IOC confirmed the 2030 Winter Olympics will be hosted by a joint bid from ski resorts in the French Alps and the Riviera city of Nice. The French government still needs to approve that project.

Corn empanada and tequeño at Titi's Empanadas in Williamsburg. Inset, wheat empanadas. KAITLYN ROSATI FOR NYDN

MAKE BEELINE TO TITI'S

Pan-American empanada eatery holds own vs. B'klyn hotspot

BY KAITLYN ROSATI
NEW YORK DAILY NEWS

Every now and then, I succumb to the hype surrounding New York's hotspots, so I recently decided to check out L'Industrie Pizzeria in Williamsburg, Brooklyn. Once I saw the line, however, I decided there isn't a price you can put on my dignity to wait that long for a slice of 'za in New York City. With an appetite calling, I simply went around the corner and made my way into Titi's Empanadas instead.

Titi's is proof that Plan B is oftentimes indeed the best plan of all. Out the front door, I could see folks waiting in line for L'Industrie while I already had a seat in Titi's with a menu in hand. Aside from empanadas, options also included tequeños and cachapas. Upon seeing those two options on the menu, I realized I must be in a Venezuelan establishment. When I asked the employee working behind the counter if this was true, she told me it's Venezuelan-owned, but New York-inspired.

"Empanadas" being in the name of the restaurant, I knew that would be my focus for the day. The menu has options for both corn empanadas and wheat empanadas – naturally, I had to try both. For the corn empanada, I opted for the papa con queso (potato and cheese, $3), and for the wheat version, I tried the al pastor. Al pastor, or slow-roasted pork with pineapple, is more typical of Mexican cuisine, and it was a tossup between that or the Argentinian-inspired choripan empanada, filled with chorizo, provolone, chimichurri, onion and roasted red pepper. Safe to say, these menu options let me know that, despite being technically Venezuelan, Titi's doesn't stick entirely within its borders.

Additionally, I simply had to try a tequeño ($2.50), or a Venezuelan fried cheese stick, which consists of fluffy fried bread stuffed to the brim with stretchy queso blanco. My fried corn empanada and tequeño came out first, and I immediately noted how golden brown the empanada was. I'm often used to a breadier or doughier crust, and the color and texture of this one looked like it would promise more crunch factor. In the case of Titi's corn empanadas, looks were not deceiving. The empanada was crisp without being greasy, and the three complimentary sauces provided helped brighten the otherwise slightly heavy, albeit delicious, bite.

The sauces at hand are "pink sauce," which is like a ketchup/mayo hybrid; "green sauce," made with parsley, onion and garlic, and hot sauce, my personal favorite. I highly recommend drizzling a rainbow of sauces over the top of your empanadas before digging in.

The tequeño, despite being a dish made entirely of bread and cheese, was much lighter than the fried corn empanada. While eating my Venezuelan cheese stick, I looked out at the suckers in line for pizza and thought, if only they knew they could just pop in here and, at the very least, grab a quick cheesy snack while they wait in line for more bread and cheese.

Last but not least, my al pastor wheat empanada came out. The crust on this empanada was more on par with those I'm familiar with.

Despite being the most expensive items on my bill at only $5, I'd argue it was the greatest bargain considering the amount of meat that was stuffed in the small vessel. However, my favorite bite of the day was the fried corn papa con queso variety thanks to the crisp pastry, but with the prices so affordable, I'd recommend ordering a nice mix like I did.

I did finally make it to L'Industrie Pizzeria a few days later, and it was indeed very good – worthy of the hype and the long wait, even. But word to the wise: Next time you feel compelled to wait in a long line for anything in New York City, it would be a missed opportunity to not grab a snack to help pass the time ... especially when there's an option close by that's as good as Titi's Empanadas.

Not off the hook

Nearly three years after NYPD Chief of Department Jeff Maddrey sprung his old friend, ex-cop Kruythoff Forrester, from a Brooklyn precinct after the latter was arrested for allegedly waving a gun at some kids who broke his security camera, the NYPD deputy commissioner of trials, Rosemarie Maldonado, ruled that the Civilian Complaint Review Board does not have jurisdiction given that Maddrey did not directly involve interactions with a civilian.

Ostensibly, this would be a matter for the Internal Affairs Bureau, but IAB already investigated and determined, incredibly, that there was no wrongdoing.

It's easy to get lost in the weeds here, so let's lay some cards down on the table: All signs point to Maddrey doing what he is accused of doing. The then-community affairs chief was called and turned up at the precinct shortly afterwards; while Maddrey was inside, Forrester's arrest was voided, and shortly afterward the chief left with Forrester. There are records and video of all of this.

It is not about whether Forrester should have been arrested in the first place. The fact that the teenagers were all able to accurately describe Forrester's unusual two-tone gun and how he drew it seems like very solid evidence for the charge, but ultimately this line of questioning is misdirection. Maddrey himself certainly hadn't done any investigation here and didn't know all the facts, nor was it his role to investigate. It would have been up to detectives and prosecutors to figure out if and with what Forrester should have been charged, but Maddrey stopped that process short.

NYPD regulations say that "a member of the service who impedes or attempts to impede an official investigation will face disciplinary action for conduct prejudicial to the good order, efficiency, or discipline of the Department." It seems a good fit to us. And the CCRB.

If Maddrey faces no consequences for his action it is contrary to the good order, efficiency and discipline of the department.

So fine, perhaps for procedural reasons the CCRB isn't the correct entity to investigate this, but that shouldn't be the end of it. The deputy commissioner of the NYPD's Department Advocate's Office should take up the case. Also, the city Department of Investigation has a dedicated inspector general for the NYPD with jurisdiction.

The DOI commissioner is also empowered to sign off on a separate investigation by the Commission to Combat Police Corruption, with purview over just such these types of matters – officers using their authority for corrupt ends. The CCPC could request case files from IAB and the CCRB to pick up where they left off.

The latter investigation would also require sign-off from the mayor, and in any case, neither body is empowered to directly impose consequences. Only the NYPD Commissioner Eddie Caban or Mayor Adams himself could materialize real consequences for Maddrey. They should, not only for the good of the department itself but the trust and respect of the public. And they should centralize NYPD accountability into one agency instead of the separate CCRB, IG and CCPC, that can use its weight more effectively, instead of having it be scattered across so many different bodies.

J.D. Vance's family fears

Republican vice-presidential nominee Sen. J.D. Vance thought it was decent and conservative to launch withering attacks on leaders in public life who've had no children.

In July 2021, before he held office, he told Tucker Carlson, "We are effectively run in this country ... by a bunch of childless cat ladies who are miserable at their own lives and the choices that they've made, and so they wanna make the rest of the country miserable, too. It's just a basic fact. You look at Kamala Harris, Pete Buttigieg, AOC (Alexandria Ocasio-Cortez), the entire future of the Democrats is controlled by people without children." He asked: "How does it make any sense that we've turned our country over to people who don't really have a direct stake in it?"

Where to begin? We can quickly get past the fact that Secretary of Transportation Pete Buttigieg and his husband in August 2021 adopted twin babies. And the fact that Harris has two stepchildren with Doug Emhoff. And the fact that AOC is just 34 years old and has plenty of time to become a mom if she wishes to.

And the fact that the vast majority of Democratic leaders past and present are fathers and mothers: Joe Biden, Chuck Schumer, Hakeem Jeffries, Barack Obama, Nancy Pelosi, Bill and Hillary Clinton and governors from Gretchen Whitmer of Michigan to Josh Shapiro of Pennsylvania to Wes Moore of Maryland to Gavin Newsom of California. Anyone who asserts with a straight face that "the entire future of the Democrats is controlled by people without children" has an abusive relationship with the truth.

But stop and dissect the nasty insult that someone without children lacks a stake in the future of the country.

George Washington had no children. Did the literal father of the United States lack a stake in America's future? Stop laughing.

Ed Koch had no children. Did one of New York City's most consequential modern mayors lack a stake in the future of New York City? The notion is patently ridiculous.

Angela Merkel has no children. Did Germany's most consequential modern leader have a miserable life and therefore set about to make the rest of her nation miserable?

Nor does having offspring correlate in any way, shape or form to the quality of a person's character or leadership. Donald Trump has five children from three separate marriages. He's been held civilly liable for sexual abuse. He added more to the national debt than any president in U.S. history, a clear sign of disrespect for future generations.

Vance, like Trump, is so desperate to ignite new culture wars that set Americans against Americans that he looks for any potential rift to explain why "they" are alien to "us," and why "they" are to blame for all "our" problems. It's ironic because a big message of his bestseller "Hillbilly Elegy" is that facile political blame games are facile and self-destructive.

In the book, Vance is honest about the fact that the family he grew up in, mired in poverty and beset by drug addiction and alcohol abuse and chronic irresponsibility, made its own bad choices.

The introspective, relatively honest man who wrote that 2016 memoir has vanished. So who is the man running alongside Donald Trump?

A mayoral mea culpa in the City Charter

BE OUR GUEST

BY JUMAANE WILLIAMS

The How Many Stops Act – a bill to bring basic transparency to NYPD interactions with the public – began its implementation on July 1 after a long campaign by the mayor to mislead the public about the bill, veto it, and be overridden after months of spreading misinformation. But rather than give New Yorkers the confidence that City Hall will faithfully execute the laws, the mayor is trying to rewrite the rules.

Mayor Adams' Charter Revision Commission, launched in response to the City Council writing basic checks and balances into law, is advancing a bizarre proposal – that "public safety legislation" be subject to a different process than all other bills. It cites the How Many Stops Act as justification, baselessly asserting that there was not ample opportunity for input from the public or stakeholders in the standard process for legislating, notwithstanding the two-year process that took place.

A charter revision is supposed to be significant, serious, and designed to last for the long-term. This one is barely designed to last for a news cycle. The mayor seems to believe the most important issue facing the city is his own backward-looking failure to adequately bully Council members and scare the public into opposing a basic transparency bill, one he pledged to support during his mayoral campaign.

I understand the danger of hastily enacted, poorly thought-out government actions – this commission certainly shines a spotlight on that. But it is ludicrous to suggest that a bill introduced two years prior to passage, and concepts introduced a decade prior, are rushed. That a bill which goes through the normal legislative process is rushed. That there was not ample time for the administration and public to weigh in on the law and its implications.

The administration's failure to pay attention or refusal to honestly engage until the 11th hour are not things we can fix with a charter revision.

Beneath the obvious and alarming motivations for these suggestions, there are deeper causes for concern about the administration's governing philosophies. The charter proposal is aimed at legislation impacting public safety – and seems to equate that solely with law enforcement.

A narrow lens on public safety is short-sighted and ineffective. As most New Yorkers know, public safety is all-encompassing, involving areas such as housing, health care, education, and economic development. Is the administration suggesting that any legislation touching these issues should be subject to a new process? Is it suggesting that only bills the police unions pay attention to should face this scrutiny? Or is it simply putting forward an ill-conceived proposal to address a political problem for the mayor?

The charter proposal reassures that the requirement could be "made waivable when necessary," which raises the question of what this administration deems necessary. When is urgency required? It's clearly not when documented abuses of stop, question and frisk are on the rise, or individuals in mental health crises are killed by law enforcement.

The mayor has no issue acting rapidly or unilaterally when it comes to things he views as politically advantageous – say, convening a charter commission in the first place. Yet when policies pass which he dislikes, he'll find every opportunity to slow them down – even now, he's attempting to block the solitary confinement ban overwhelmingly enacted by the Council six months ago. He wants the authority to act unilaterally or dictatorially on policies he supports, and erect barriers and constraints on his perceived opponents.

Our politics are already being harmed enough by executives who struggle to move past losses, who attempt to consolidate power and diminish the legislature. That ideology is evident here, from public safety to the attempt to block the Council expanded "advice and consent" responsibilities.

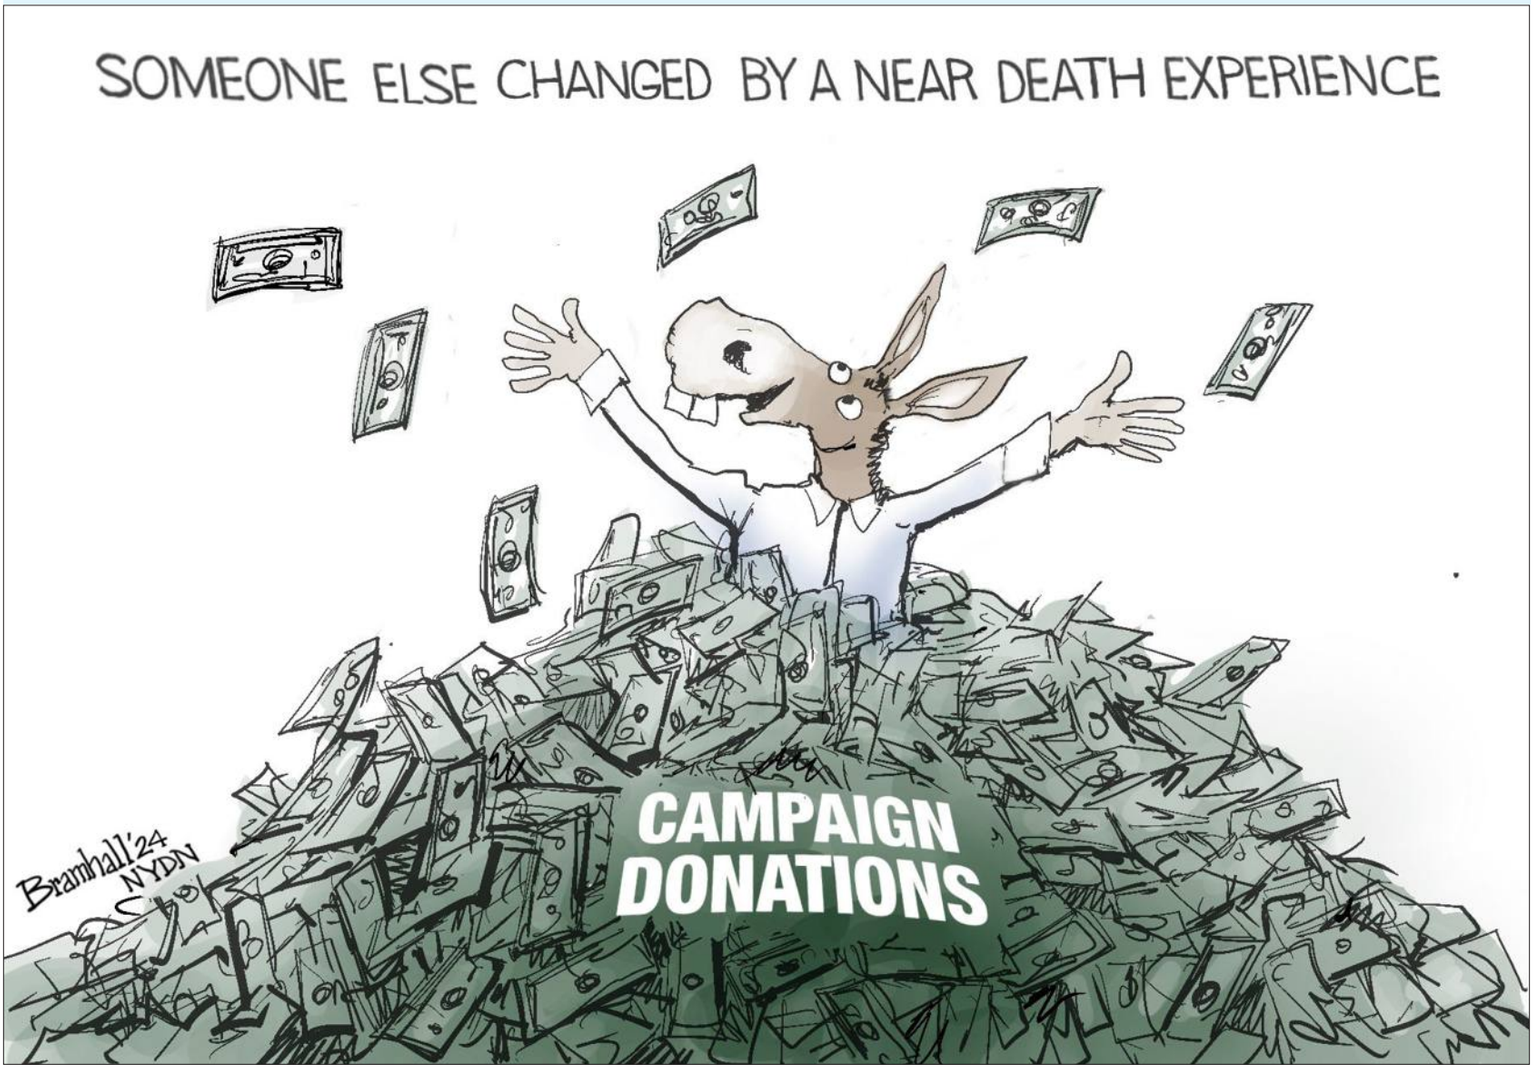

There are real questions a charter commission could grapple with, especially one made up of many respectable, accomplished people appointed to this panel. But instead, the mayor has sent this commission hurtling toward foregone conclusions to advance his agenda. A hurried process of poorly promoted hearings has ensured that the mayor's voice is the loudest echoed in these proposals. This transparent tactic is aimed at the immediate, but its implications could impact decades of governance.

If these proposals make the ballot, the mayor will likely promote them with the same kind of public misinformation campaign he waged against the How Many Stops Act.

New Yorkers should stand against this effort to minimize the City Council, maximize mayoral priorities, and turn short-term political goals into permanent processes.

Williams is the NYC public advocate.

BRAMHALL'S WORLD

Trump campaign's panic at the disco with Harris

S.E. CUPP

After what was, by all accounts, a resoundingly successful Republican National Convention, the party appears to be over for former President Donald Trump and the GOP.

The weeks leading up to the RNC were good for Republicans. Very good.

President Biden had suffered through an agonizing and, some would say, fatal debate performance. Democrats were divided over what to do, with calls for him to step aside growing by the day. Biden was slipping even further behind Trump in key battleground state polls. And experts were declaring he could no longer win.

In even better news for Republicans and Trump, Biden didn't seem to care. He insisted he wasn't going anywhere, dragging out the Dem deliberations and disastrous news cycle even longer, injuring his campaign even worse.

Then, there was a horrific assassination attempt on Trump at a Pennsylvania rally, vaulting him to practical sainthood among a constituency that's already often compared to a cult.

Needless to say, he entered the RNC with massive tailwinds, and a party that, in contrast to Biden's, was incredibly unified, electrified, and focused.

What a difference a Sunday makes.

Just three days after the balloons came down in Milwaukee, Biden announced he was stepping down and swiftly endorsed his vice president, Kamala Harris.

And suddenly Republicans aren't so unified, electrified, or focused anymore.

First, the Trump campaign has a new problem: age.

In that, it's no longer a problem for the Democrats, and is a new problem for Republicans. At a spry 59 years old, Harris is young next to 78-year-old Trump, and polls show most voters have a confidence in Harris that they didn't in Biden.

There's also the fact that the finely-tuned Trump campaign was designed to beat Biden – not any generic Democrat.

The Atlantic's Tim Alberta, who was embedded with the Trump campaign for months, said that they'd been "praying Joe Biden doesn't drop out," fearing they'd have to abandon an operation "built to run a very specific race against a very specific opponent..."

Then, Trump's selection of Ohio Sen. J.D. Vance – another white guy from a state Trump won twice and is positioned to win again – was made when the campaign was feeling confident, doubling down on MAGA rather than addressing deficiencies on the ticket.

Now, campaign officials are reportedly lamenting Vance is not an appeal to swing -state voters that Trump will need to win. "Most striking thing I heard from Trump allies yesterday," said Alberta, "was the second-guessing of J.D. Vance – a selection, they acknowledged, that was [born] of cockiness, meant to run up margins with the base in a blowout rather than persuade swing voters in a nail-biter."

And he's poised to be a drag on the ticket, not a boon.

Finally, the GOP appears deeply divided over how best to attack Harris.

Some House members have run with an ill-conceived new talking point, that she's merely a "DEI hire," picked only because she's a woman of color, and not a former prosecutor, attorney general, senator and vice president.

It's not going over well – with other Republicans, who probably know that winning back suburban women and independents in swing states is the whole ball game.

Former House Speaker Kevin McCarthy called it "stupid and dumb," while current House Speaker Mike Johnson warned his members, "This is an election about competing policies. It's not about personalities."

Even folks on Fox News, where original birtherism was crafted, hosts were bearish on the approach, saying the DEI attacks will "tick voters off."

For his part, Trump is running the usual playbook, doling out childish nicknames like "Lyin' Kamala" and "Laffin' Kamala," again, designed to amp up his fans, not draw in new voters.

In a show of real desperation, Rep. Elise Stefanik called for an emergency meeting of the House Rules Committee to take up a resolution to, essentially, let everyone know they don't like Harris.

As Dem Rep. Jim McGovern said, "This is an emergency! Not an emergency meeting to fix the border, but an emergency meeting to bash Kamala Harris. That's the emergency. Are you kidding me? The emergency is that Donald Trump is losing and they're in a panic."

Panicking indeed. Republicans and the Trump campaign are all over the map, simultaneously insisting that Dems are so incompetent that Biden should resign the presidency, while also insisting that they cleverly masterminded a coup.

They don't have a long time to rejigger their campaign, especially if the GOP remains divided and undisciplined on how to run against Harris.

Gone is the giddiness. Gone are the good old days. As Biden might say, "Miss me yet?"

Is Donald Trump really the threat to democracy?

Glendale: It now appears that some of your readers suffer from divine delusions. To suggest the violence being committed in America has anything to do with Donald Trump is beyond ridiculous.

The Dems have perpetrated a mass slaughter of our country's democracy. Millions of undocumented immigrants are crossing our borders and are bused to sanctuary cities across America. Criminals are set free hours after conducting heinous crimes. There are acts of violence and rioting conducted by anti-American groups like Antifa. Did pallets of bricks during the summer of 2020 fall out of the sky? Is that the kind of divine intervention these people are seeking?

Let's not forget the people who grumble over the attempted assassination. People calling the wound superficial or just a scratch suffer from delusions that defy definition. Worst of all is the ignorance of individuals saying things like they're sorry the assassin missed. How do these people sleep at night with so much hate in their empty brains?

If unity is to happen in our lifetime, it stands to reason it can only happen if we embrace a united stand. Those people unable to rationalize the three-ring-circus tactics of the left must enjoy tricks being played on them, tricks that in time will sink every dream they ever had of waking up in a free society. To give voice to such delusional ideas represents the ultimate failure of our country ever again feeling safe and secure. Wake up or resign yourselves to watching democracy collapse. Jonathan Kiddrane

GETTY

Illiberal liberals

Ormond Beach, Fla.: The Democrats ran the least democratic primary in history and then tell us they are protecting democracy. With the Democratic Party, it looks like donor money trumps democracy and votes. What a bunch of hypocrites. They resemble more of an oligarchy of big money, Wall Street, the media and Hollywood, not a political party in a democratic republic. They are exactly what they accuse the Republicans of being: a threat to democracy. Charles Michael Sitero

Party mutiny

Syosset, L.I.: For years, we have listened to the Democratic Party tell us that Donald Trump is a major threat to democracy. We have just witnessed the Democratic Party remove a democratically elected nominee for president (disenfranchising 14 million primary voters), with no explanation. Anyone who believes that this was President Biden's decision is either very naïve or very ignorant. This man was threatened by party elites with the 25th Amendment if he continued to refuse to drop out of the election. The Democratic Party has just trampled on the very democratic process it claims to uphold. The hypocrisy is mind-boggling! Laurence Haynes

Lame-duck danger

Oceanside, L.I.: Regarding President Biden's pulling out of the presidential race – most unwillingly, I'm sure – I am wondering what might this person not used to not getting his way do? I'm afraid he has the degraded mentality to unleash great harm to America in a revengeful moment. I believe he should be removed from office before he causes any harm. John F. Rossano

Reading time

Blairstown, N.J.: Orangehead is selling Bibles, but he either can't read or won't read. Just ask John Bolton, the author of "The Room Where It Happened." Trumpty's own niece said the only time he has been in a church was for a wedding or a funeral service. Will someone from the radical right-wing so-called evangelicals please read him the Bible? Will someone from MAGA, QANON or the Proud Boys please read him the U.S. Constitution? He still doesn't know that this country was founded on separation of church and state. Ron Cristi

Disreputable

Whitestone: To Voicer Nicholas Maffei, who said Trump showed courage, deserves respect and that God protected Trump from that bullet: A draft-dodger who claims he had bone spurs doesn't have an ounce of courage in his fat, orange body. A person who calls our fallen war heroes suckers and losers, cheats on his wives, praises dictators and incites an insurrection deserves zero respect. Do you really believe God found the time to protect a deviant like Trump, yet was too preoccupied to save the lives of 6 million Jews who were being exterminated in World War II? Robert LaRosa Sr.

Sharp turnaround

Brooklyn: I read war veteran and Voicer Frederick R. Bedell's statement about his admiration of the vice presidential candidate Sen. J.D. Vance. I waited with baited breath hoping to read other war veterans' reactions since then, but alas, not one. I hereby announce a Korean war veteran, me, will have that honor. I wonder if Bedell read or heard what Trump said about veterans – we're "losers"? This coming from a well-known draft-dodger. As for Vance, he once called Trump "Hitler." In recent interviews, when confronted with that statement, his only reply was, "He changed my mind." Wow, what an epiphany that must have been. Does that not make you wonder what could Trump have said that would make Vance go from calling him another Hitler to His Highness? Anthony Bruno

Identity politics play

Staten Island: Dear Kamala Harris, please pick a white guy as your VP. One from the Midwest might be even better. Oh, but not Pete Buttigieg. I'm sorry to say, even though it is 2024, the U.S. could never handle a woman and another minority on the ticket. Gina Ottrando

Decisions, decisions

Warwick, R.I.: With our current president withdrawing from the election, we may have our first female president. Our choice will then be a 78-year-old former president versus the 59-year-old Democrat, where not only age, gender, race and experience will compete for voters. Vice presidential candidates will have a strong influence on both tickets. The obvious contrast between the candidates will be exploited in the months ahead and many voters will wait longer before making their choice. How it all plays out should make for an exciting campaign and one worth following as we can expect a few surprises before Nov. 5. Bob Sweeney

Next to go?

Bridgewater, N.J.: Now that the president has ended his reelection campaign, can The News do the same with Mike Lupica? He may think he's Larry King but he is really a modern-day Suzy – a practitioner of fake news. Charles Everett

Cruddy commute

Spotswood, N.J.: Both of my sisters were stuck at horrible train stations. Everything broke down. NJTransit is a horrible mess. Are we a Third World country? I travel to Japan often. Their trains are beautiful, clean, on time and fast. They are comfortable and safe. The bathrooms are clean and there is no graffiti or smell of urine. The train stations are very nice with places to eat and shop. Why can't we have this? Tom Scott

Bully boy

Bronx: I am a person who stutters. I was energized to read "Boss in Queens DA's office mocked prober's stutter, heritage: lawsuit" (July 21). Three cheers for Jason Robles, who states that he has been bullied his whole life due to his stutter, for standing up to bully Assistant Chief Daniel O'Brien. People who stutter have accomplished great things, and one only has to look at the amazing list of "Famous People Who Stutter" on the website of The Stuttering Foundation to see names like Marc Anthony, Bruce Willis, Marilyn Monroe, Peggy Lipton, Emily Blunt, B.B. King, Noel Gallagher, Nicole Kidman, Prince Albert of Monaco, and so many others. The abuse and ridicule must stop. Several years ago, the foundation put out a 37-page book, "Trouble at Recess," which is a guide for kids on how to handle bullying and teasing. What a shame that an assistant chief of detectives in New York City is accused of such terrible behavior. Colm Ruane

Expanded land

Massapequa, L.I.: Your editorial "From landfill to housing" (July 23) was mostly correct. The Port Authority would give the city 23 acres of landfill if it could dump the excavated debris from the World Trade Center site in the Hudson River so they would not have to truck the material to a further location just across West St. Later, the Battery Park City Authority built a bulkhead and sand was pumped in to create the 92-acre area that is now housing and Battery Park City's World Financial Center. Ron Boehning

B'klyn Council pol shakes up staff in wake of protest cop-bite arrest

BY CHRIS SOMMERFELDT
NEW YORK DAILY NEWS

Councilwoman Susan Zhuang is arrested on July 17 during a protest against a homeless shelter on 86th St. near 25th Ave. in Brooklyn. OBTAINED BY DAILY NEWS

Brooklyn Councilwoman Susan Zhuang is shaking up her communications staff in the wake of being arrested for allegedly biting an NYPD chief during a tumultuous protest against a homeless shelter in her district.

Felix Tager, Zhuang's communications director, confirmed Wednesday he's resigning from her office.

Tager, who has worked for Zhuang since February, told the Daily News his last day is Friday, but declined to offer a reason for his departure or say whether it's related to the lawmaker's recent arrest.

Meantime, Zhuang's campaign has hired Actum, a global consulting firm, to handle all communications for her related to the alleged cop chomp, said Esther Jensen, a vice president at the New York-based outfit.

Zhuang didn't return a request for comment on the staff shakeup.

In a sign of her shifting communications strategy, Zhuang did her first sitdown media interview Wednesday since she was arrested in the alleged bite attack. In the appearance on Fox5, Zhuang said she was trying to help an elderly woman during last week's protest in her Bensonhurst-based district when she got into a scuffle with cops.

"I will never apologize to protect 80-years-old woman," Zhuang said in the interview, breaking into tears.

Zhuang, a first-term conservative Democrat who has portrayed herself as a pro-police lawmaker, allegedly bit an NYPD chief in the arm so hard it drew blood in the early morning hours on July 17 while protesting a planned homeless shelter in Bensonhurst with dozens of local residents.

Zhuang was arrested and charged with felony assault and other criminal counts for the alleged attack. She has pleaded not guilty.

Zhuang's neighborhood currently has no homeless shelters.

The planned 32-room shelter would house adult men, and Mayor Adams' administration has touted it as a much-needed addition to the community. Zhuang and other anti-shelter advocates have claimed it would jeopardize safety.

The mayor, who has defended the shelter development, condemned Zhuang's alleged attack on the chief as "unfortunate" earlier this week, but also described her as a "real partner" to the NYPD.

On Friday, the mayor, who's politically aligned with Zhuang, met with her privately at City Hall. It's unclear what they discussed, but the mayor has said he hopes to help her " resolve this issue."

Bomb scare at E. Harlem cop stationhouse

BY SHEETAL BANCHARIYA
NEW YORK DAILY NEWS

A suspicious device discovered outside an East Harlem NYPD stationhouse sparked a bomb scare Wednesday, officials said.

The device found outside the 25th Precinct stationhouse on E. 119th St. near Lexington Ave. prompted an immediate response from the NYPD Emergency Service Unit and the bomb squad, authorities said.

The incident began at 11:50 am when two uniformed cops were approached by two men in a vehicle. The driver claimed he was the victim of a domestic assault, stating the passenger had attacked him with a machete inside the vehicle, said Assistant Chief Ruel Stevenson of NYPD Patrol Borough Manhattan North.

BARRY WILLIAMS FOR NYDN

The driver told the officers about the machete's location within the vehicle, and the cops took the passenger into custody and secured the weapon. But during that process, the driver revealed an explosive device was also inside the vehicle, Stevenson said.

Emergency Service Unit and bomb squad personnel were immediately called to the scene (photo).

"We did locate and recover what I'm going to describe as a potentially viable improvised explosive device," Mark Torre, commanding officer of the. NYPD bomb squad, said during a press conference at the scene.

He added that the device's outward appearance makes it look like a bomb, but it was uncertain whether it would have exploded.

"Following a technical investigation, it will be definitively described as either capable of functioning as designed, capable of exploding, or something made to look like a bomb but isn't really a bomb," Torre added.

A suspect was arrested in connection with the incident. Charges were pending.

The area was quickly cordoned off as a precaution, though no evacuation of the stationhouse was deemed necessary.

JFK terminal evacuated for escalator fire; 4 injured

Nearly 1,000 travelers were evacuated from a JFK Airport terminal after a fire broke out inside an escalator Wednesday morning, FDNY and Port Authority officials said.

The blaze erupted in the escalator at Terminal 8's Concourse C at about 7 a.m., Port Authority officials said.

As smoke spewed out of the escalator, Port Authority police evacuated 960 passengers, bussing them to another section of the terminal.

The FDNY put out the fire in a matter of minutes.

Four people were hospitalized with minor injuries, officials said.

Terminal 8 returned to normal operations within an hour, a Port Authority spokeswoman said. Departing flights were briefly impacted but have since resumed.

The cause of the fire was under investigation.

Terminal 8 is the arrival and departure points for 11 U.S. and international airlines, including American Airlines, British Airways and Quantas.

Your HOROSCOPE
BY TAROT.COM

For Thursday, July 25

We're making dreams real. With the emotional Moon working hand in hand with dreamy Neptune, our emotions may fluctuate, but our intuition expands. The Moon then moves into fiery Aries, activating the turbo drive for motivation. When communicative Mercury jogs into its home sign of meticulous Virgo, we're able to organize our thoughts. Later on, the confident Sun supports driven Mars to make it obvious that we're on a beeline for progress. No more waiting!

ARIES
MARCH 21-APRIL 19
Creativity can get you out of a bind. You might have been stumped by a problem that you needed to solve for quite some time, but you've likely been thinking about it in a rigid way. When you get out of the box, you'll be able to see more pathways to a brighter future and better solutions.

TAURUS
APRIL 20-MAY 20
Friendship makes it easier to pick yourself up. You may have been feeling listless lately, but the people who love you can lift you up. Even if you're in a place where you feel alone, look back on past messages or cards from friends. Keep in mind that genuine friendship will always find you again if you seek it out.

GEMINI
MAY 21-JUNE 20
Hopes and dreams aren't as far from reality as they may seem. You're letting yourself open up to past ambitions you once held for yourself, now that certain people, places or situations are no longer holding you back. This clarity can carry you to amazing heights. Don't hold yourself back.

CANCER
JUNE 21-JULY 22
Let your inspiration become part of your surroundings. There's a strong benefit to creating personal vision boards at this time, as they're a great way to manifest a more positive lifestyle, remind you of your goals and invite inner change. Get creative!

LEO
JULY 23-AUG. 22
Show the world what you're capable of. You may have known what you wanted to do for a while but were scared of what might happen if you opened yourself up to criticism after being seen for the genuine person you are. Don't live with regret. Get out there.

VIRGO
AUG. 23-SEPT. 22
New knowledge is on the way. Whether you're studying for a class for school, for fun or to learn a life skill, it's important to give it your full attention. There's no need to waste your time worrying about being immediately good at what you learn. Give yourself grace when you fall, and allow yourself to try again.

LIBRA
SEPT. 23-OCT. 22
Preserving your energy can protect you from chaos. You might be promising a lot to others or spreading yourself too thin. Either way, the time has come to focus your energy into one area. Figure out your priorities for success and make a game plan to tackle them.

SCORPIO
OCT. 23-NOV. 21
Other people may be the key to your inspiration. There might be something you're missing right now, whether it's sprucing up your resume, decorating your house, or getting involved in any project where you're too close to see what's not right. Two heads would probably be better than one.

SAGITTARIUS
NOV. 22-DEC. 21
Routine might be providing space for freedom. It may feel unnatural for you, trying to squeeze yourself into a schedule to make more time for you to be creative or to rest, but sometimes setting up a pattern is necessary before you can freestyle. Take charge of your day.

CAPRICORN
DEC. 22-JAN. 19
Your family may inspire you to make moves you've been hesitant about. It might have been some time since you began dreaming of certain milestones. Pay attention to advice from loved ones — they could remind you you still have time to become the person you want to be.

AQUARIUS
JAN. 20-FEB. 18
Let your heart lead you. Your mind may be racing at a million miles per hour with fresh ideas at the moment, but you can't do everything at once. What could offer you the direction you're seeking is the compass within your heart, telling you to go the way that makes you feel alive.

PISCES
FEB. 19-MARCH 20
Your mind is more powerful than you may know. That said, your mindset might need a bit of recalibrating, especially if you've been hard on yourself lately. This self-criticism could be valid, but don't let it linger in your mind just to punish yourself. Be true to yourself — and avoid comparing your progress to that of people around you.

Davis gets another shot at No. 7 spot

J.D. Davis has some more runway.

The veteran infielder served as the Bombers' cleanup hitter in Tuesday night's loss to the Mets, a decision that received plenty of backlash given the results – Aaron Judge was walked all three times with Davis hitting behind him – and circumstances considering he hadn't had an at-bat since July 4.

Despite an 0-for-3 with two strikeouts and a double play on Tuesday, Davis was back in the lineup Wednesday as the DH, hitting seventh in favor of rookie first baseman Ben Rice.

insider
BY JAMES O'CONNELL

With a lefty on the bump, Aaron Boone preferred the right-handed hitting Davis in the lineup, however, he added that he wasn't sure if he viewed Rice strictly as a platoon player.

"We'll see, not necessarily, we'll see what happens here over the next week," said Boone. "We just haven't played a lot of lefties lately and with (Rice) going through it a little bit here this last week – although I feel like he continues to have really competitive at-bats even where he's gone through a stretch where the numbers haven't been great. I thought his at-bat off the bench (Tuesday) against (Dednial) Nunez was outstanding. Unfortunately he hit it to the biggest part of the park the other way.

"I feel like he's doing some good things, but want to try and get him in a situation where he can be successful, too."

Rice is 3-for-37 over his last 10 games.

Entering Wednesday, left-handed hitters have faired significantly better than right-handers have against Mets southpaw Sean Manaea this season. Lefties are slashing .275/.333/.425 in 80 at-bats whereas righties are posting .213/.300/.331 in 296 at-bats. However, Boone added that he looked at numbers beyond this season when deciding to go with Davis over Rice as the splits are opposite to what Manaea has produced this season.

Righties post a .743 OPS and lefties post a .609 OPS against Manaea in his career.

"Also want to get where you try and leverage situations, you look at Manaea, too – pretty small sample (this season) – you look at his career and it's pretty stark the other way," Boone said. "You kind of peel the onion back a little bit and is that what he's going to be moving forward? We're not trying to predict what happened yesterday, we're trying to predict what's going to happen moving forward.

"And the reality is we brought J.D. Davis in – especially when (Anthony) Rizzo went down – to be this kind of (lefty masher). And this is a guy that recently has had a good amount of success."

Davis is slashing .063/.167/.125 in six games for the Yanks this season.

GLEYBER'S TURN

The Yankees' revolving door of leadoff hitters continued on Wednesday.

Gleyber Torres was the latest to get a crack at jump-starting the Bombers' offense after Jahmai Jones was tasked with doing the same in Tuesday's loss. Torres has swung the bat better of late, slashing .281/.356/.406 in his previous 18 games.

"I sent the lineup out last night and I've talked to Gleyber a little bit over the last week and just reminded him who he is and things like that," said Boone. "Thought he put some good at-bats together last night. I feel like he's had some good at-bats even over the last week and two weeks and had some at-bats where he's pressing for a result too intermixed with those.

NO STANTON NEWS

Boone added that there still has not been a decision made on Giancarlo Stanton regarding a rehab assignment. The designated hitter continues to do work on the field and take batting practice, however, the Bombers will remain patient with the slugger despite their struggles after Aaron Judge and Juan Soto in the lineup.

The manager didn't rule out seeing Stanton return this coming weekend in Boston, but he doesn't expect that to happen.

The 34-year-old is slashing .246/.302/.495 with 18 homers and 45 RBI in 69 games this season.

Contract extension set to keep Thibs on Knicks bench until 2028

KRISTIAN WINFIELD, PAGE 39

BY GARY PHILLIPS
NEW YORK DAILY NEWS

The first time Gerrit Cole faced the Mets this season, the Yankee ace was making just his second start of the year after elbow inflammation delayed his 2024 debut.

Pitching at Citi Field on June 25, Cole surrendered four home runs in a Yankees loss. But he was still building up as the Mets pounced on his lacking fastball that night, so the poor start wasn't necessarily as important as the pitcher's progression.

"He's kind of finding his gauge out there," Aaron Boone said that evening. "He's not all the way built up out of spring, and he is coming back from an injury and being down. So the buildup matters."

No such grading curve or excuses existed on Wednesday night at Yankee Stadium, where Cole took the mound fresh off the two best starts of his young season. Still, the Mets pummeled the reigning Cy Young winner for the second time in as many months while sweeping the season's Subway Series with a 12-3 win.

METS	12
YANKEES	3

This time, the Mets only hit three homers off of Cole. Number 9 hitter Tyrone Taylor started the Amazin' onslaught with a solo shot in the third to tie the game, 1-1. Pete Alonso then gave the Mets a 3-2 lead with a two-run blast, his 20th of the year.

Francisco Lindor matched that figure with his own two-run homer in the fifth frame. That ball landed in the second deck out in right field.

The barrage didn't end there, as Taylor added an RBI single off Cole in the sixth. That knock ended Cole's night after 5.2 innings, eight hits, six earned runs, two walks, four strikeouts and 100 pitches.

Boos soundtracked the righty's trip to the dugout, where he could also be seen expressing his frustration.

The Mets scored six more runs in the eighth, as Mark Vientos homered off Tim Hill to start the inning. Jeff McNeil then doubled on a ball Aaron Judge misread. With Caleb Ferguson on the mound, the Mets then scored another run on an Oswaldo Cabrera throwing error before Lindor homered again. This time, he produced a three-run shot.

A Vientos sac fly off Yoendrys Gómez gave the Mets a 12th run for good measure.

Prior to that, Sean Manaea enjoyed a shorter but more successful night than Cole.

The Mets starter logged 4.2 innings, three hits, two earned runs, four walks, four strikeouts and 103 pitches. While Manaea wasn't perfect, the Mets' decision to throw a lefty at the Yankees worked for the fourth time this season.

The Bombers actually took an early lead against Manaea, as Gleyber Torres hit his first-career leadoff homer in his return to the one-hole. Juan Soto provided another jack in the third, taking a 443-foot trip to Monument Park with the bases empty.

Upon making contact, Soto immediately turned toward Mets catcher Francisco Alvarez. The two have gotten to know each other well over the years, and so Soto smiled at the backstop before trotting around the bases.

An Austin Wells single gave the Yanks an extra run in the ninth, but it was the Mets who were grinning at the end of the night after taking two games in the Bronx. They swept the Subway Series for the second time after also doing it in 2013.

With the loss, the Yankees are now 15-25 since June 7. They had baseball's best record before that, but only the woeful White Sox have been worse since.

With the Orioles enduring a skid as well, the Yankees are lucky to only be 1.5 games out of first place. However, they've been playing brutal baseball for well over a month.

Boone and players have repeatedly expressed faith in the team's ability to turn things around, but those sentiments are becoming harder to believe with each new ugly loss. Upgrades could come before the July 30 trade deadline, but even then, the Yankees have more holes than they can realistically fill in just a few days.

KINGS OF THE CITY

Lindor blasts pair as Mets clout 5 homers in taking all four games from Yanks in '24

Francisco Lindor celebrates after hitting two-run home run during fifth inning Wednesday night. He would add another before night was over. AP

BY ABBEY MASTRACCO
NEW YORK DAILY NEWS

If you ask Francisco Lindor what his favorite part of baseball is, he'll probably tell you it's defense. There are few things the shortstop loves more than making barehand flips and spinning throws across the diamond.

Somewhere further down the list might be hitting home runs and stealing bases, yet he's doing both of those things at a high rate.

Wednesday night at Yankee Stadium, Lindor teed off on the first pitch he saw from Gerrit Cole in the fifth inning and sent it into the second deck of right field for his 20th of the year. He hit a towering, three-run shot off left-hander Caleb Ferguson in the eighth as part of a six-run inning. Again, he swung on the first pitch and didn't miss, sending it 432 feet to the left side, prompting a mass exodus of fans in pinstripes.

With 20 stolen bases already, Lindor has his fourth 20-20 season and is on pace to reach the 30-30 mark for the second time in as many years.

It's almost tough to remember that fans booed him during a slow start to the 2024 season. It's even more unbelievable that he wasn't named an All-Star.

In yet another OMG-worthy win for the Mets, Lindor went 3-for-6 with two home runs and five RBI.

Pete Alonso and Tyrone Taylor also homered off Cole, who has now given up 36 earned runs to the Mets in his career. Taylor played a solid game on both sides of the ball, going 3-for-5 with a home run, two RBI and two runs scored, and made a fantastic diving catch in center field to rob Alex Verdugo of extra bases in the sixth inning.

Mark Vientos cracked his 13th of the season and Jeff McNeil nearly hit his fifth in his last six games. Juan Soto caught his fly ball at the wall in the second inning, but McNeil still went 2-for-5 with two doubles and a run scored.

After a so-so weekend against the cellar-dwelling Marlins, the Mets returned to the Big Apple and made a statement with two wins over their crosstown rivals at Yankee Stadium.

This game wasn't all about Lindor, but it illustrated his impact on the Mets. Only four other players in franchise history have logged multiple seasons with at least 20 home runs and 20 stolen bases: David Wright, Howard Johnson, Darryl Strawberry and Carlos Beltran.

Flipping Brandon Nimmo and Francisco Lindor at the top of the order not only sparked the Mets lineup almost overnight, but it seemed to spark Lindor as well. He's hit 14 homers in the leadoff spot this season and has consistently had an OPS over .900 when hitting there this season. He hit second in only 13 games this season and only hit .093, though he did better in the No. 3 spot in 29 games (.235 average with a .697 OPS and five home runs).

Since last season, Lindor is the only player to hit at least 50 home runs and steal at least 50 bases. With the position he plays and the defense he provides, it's not a surprise that his fWAR of 4.6 is the seventh-best in baseball.

Plus, there are the leadership qualities and his durability. Lindor's teammates have immense respect for how he is available for every game.

Lindor's daughter's, Kalina and Amapola, were featured prominently on the ESPN broadcast Wednesday night. Fitting, since if you ask him what his favorite thing is outside of baseball, he'll probably tell you it's being a girl dad.

Scott won't need elbow surgery

The Mets avoided another pitching disaster Wednesday when they received more clarification on Christian Scott's sprained ulnar collateral ligament. Though the club did not elaborate on the severity of the sprain, the good news is that the rookie right-hander will not need surgery on his injured elbow.

Scott will be shut down for two weeks and then he'll ramp up for game action again. He has every intention of pitching again this season.

"It's better than the worst-case scenario, which is awesome," Scott said Wednesday at Yankee Stadium. "It's a sigh of relief right now. I definitely felt a little tight after the Marlins outing, but the team has done an unbelievable job of testing me out and being able to talk to doctors and the training staff. I feel really comfortable about the position I'm in right now."

Having sprained his UCL last season in the minor leagues, the 25-year-old is undaunted by the prospect of another one. He returned to pitch again after 21 days last season and expects the time period to be about the same again this year, but at the moment it's tentative.

"We have to weigh the next two weeks and see how he progresses when we start building him back up," said manager Carlos Mendoza. "But from what I was told talking to the trainers and even to Scottie, we feel pretty good with him being back here at some point before the year's over."

Scott has gone 0-3 with a 4.56 ERA over nine starts this season. At times, he's been dominant; other times, it's clear that a learning curve still exists. The Mets optioned him to Triple-A Syracuse earlier this season to be able to manage his innings, but when Edwin Diaz was suspended and Tylor Megill struggled, a transaction was necessary and the Mets called him back up.

He pitched 4 ⅓ and 4.0 innings in each of his last two starts, giving up three earned runs on seven hits in both. His last time out he pitched in Miami, near where he grew up, for the second time this season, which is when he felt the familiar tightness in his elbow.

The Mets sent him for imaging Tuesday when the team returned home from Miami. He's thrown 89 ⅔ innings this season, the most he's ever thrown as a pro. The Mets have been adamant about making sure they manage his workload without putting a hard cap on his innings.

With Kodai Senga returning Friday to face the Braves, the Mets will expand the rotation to six starting pitchers. That leaves a hole in the schedule Saturday, when Scott was supposed to take his next turn. Right-handed long reliever Jose Butto could get a start, but the Mets can't commit to using him at the moment since they might have to use him out of the bullpen this week.

Calling up Megill from Triple-A Syracuse is the most likely option.

As for whether there is concern about Scott injuring his UCL for the second summer in a row, the pitcher himself doesn't seem worried. It's a sad reality of today's game that Tommy John is almost an expectation at some point.

The Mets already lost relievers Drew Smith and Brooks Raley to UCL correction surgery (internal brace).

"I don't know for sure," Scott said. "Last year it happened and I didn't have any problems with it afterward. This time, it happened again at the same time, which is obviously frustrating. I want to be able to to come out and help this team compete and win a World Series. I can't do that throwing eight innings and being shut down in August."

TRAINER'S ROOM

Right-handed reliever Sean Reid-Foley (shoulder impingement) will throw live batting practice today at Citi Field before beginning a rehab assignment Sunday. He was previously slated to pitch today for High-A Brooklyn, but the Mets decided to push the assignment back after he struggled with his mechanics when throwing to hitters for the first time.

LOCKING IT UP

Carson Benge, the two-way sensation out of Oklahoma State the Mets drafted in the first round last week, signed his contract Wednesday and will visit Citi Field today. Benge was drafted No. 19 overall. The slot value at 19 is $4.22 million, but his signing bonus is not yet known.

Sevy still mentor to Gil despite move to Mets

BY PETER SBLENDORIO
NEW YORK DAILY NEWS

Luis Severino is no longer teammates with Luis Gil, but he remains a mentor for the young Yankee starter.

That much was clear after Tuesday night's Subway Series opener in the Bronx,when Gil was asked about why he reached out to his former teammate, now of the Mets, to help him with his slider.

"Severino is someone that I've always looked up to ever since he was here, came up through this organization," Gil said through an interpreter.

"He's a pitcher with more experience than me. He has some knowledge to offer, and I took it into consideration and put it in practice here with our pitching coach. I'm getting really good results with that pitch."

Severino, 30, pitched for the Yankees from 2015-23, earning back-to-back All-Star selections in 2017 and 2018 before dealing with a rash of injuries.

The Yankees acquired Gil as a minor-leaguer in a 2018 trade that sent outfielder Jake Cave to the Twins. Severino – who, like Gil, hails from the Dominican Republic – took the right-hander under his wing.

"People from D.R., if you know somebody's from D.R. on my team and I'm the veteran, I'm going to look out for my guy," Severino told the Daily News on Wednesday. "If they need anything, I'm there for them."

Gil, 26, made his MLB debut with the Yankees in 2021 and underwent Tommy John surgery the following season. This year, he made the Yankee rotation out of spring training as the fill-in for ace Gerrit Cole, who missed the first three months of the season with elbow inflammation.

The hard-throwing Gil, who is still classified as a rookie, got off to a torrid start to 2024, pitching to a 9-1 record with a 2.03 ERA through his first 14 games.

But a rough patch followed. Gil posted a 14.90 ERA over his next three starts, which included a June 26 outing against the Mets in which he allowed five runs over 4.1 innings at Citi Field.

It was amid those struggles that Gil reached out to Severino about his slider, the latter revealed to MLB.com this week.

Gil's slider has since transformed into a weapon for him. He threw 40 sliders – more than any other pitch – in Wednesday's 3-2 loss to the Mets, recording four strikeouts and five swings-and-misses with it.

"I just shared a couple tips that I have, a couple grips that have been working for me," Severino said. "For me, it took me a month to get it good, and he just needed one bullpen (session)."

Severino has also stayed in touch with Clarke Schmidt, saying last month that he advised the Yankees right-hander after he was diagnosed with a lat strain. Severino dealt with lat strains in 2019, 2022 and 2023.

Aaron Rodgers lets fly on first day of Jets training camp Wednesday in Florham Park. AP

Rodgers says he knew deal with Egypt trip and missed minicamp, is ready to go to work

BY ANTWAN STALEY
NEW YORK DAILY NEWS

Last month, Aaron Rodgers created quite a stir when he missed two days of mandatory minicamp due to a preplanned vacation to Egypt.

Finally, on Wednesday, the first day of training camp practices, Rodgers addressed his unexcused absence and how the Jets fined him more than $50,000 for being a no-show.

"It's obviously more of an issue outside of the building than there was inside the building," Rodgers said. "Robert and I are great. We had a great conversation throughout the offseason. (We) had a fun one last night in his office till later on. It is what it is.

"I'm an adult. I knew what I was getting into. I knew the fine was coming and also knew how much I wanted to be in Egypt."

Rodgers said he planned the Egypt trip for June 9-10, thinking the Jets would be done with their offseason program based on their 2023 offseason schedule. However, the Jets canceled their mandatory minicamp that year partly because they reported for training camp early due to the Pro Football Hall of Fame Game in early August.

The story of Rodgers missing the two days of mandatory minicamp became a firestorm around media circles. However, the four-time MVP downplayed the importance of mandatory minicamp and basically said it's an extension of OTA practices.

"It's not the same as it was in 2005 or 2010," Rodgers said. "The schedule is an OTA day. It's labeled as many camps.

"So you can try and get anybody who hasn't been around to be there. I had a great talk with Robert. Obviously, he wanted me to be there and I knew the consequences if I wasn't going to be there. The reaction is what it is."

Saleh said he and Rodgers had cleared the air about his unexcused absence and it appears both sides are ready to move forward.

"I've had dialogue with Aaron throughout the summer," Saleh said. "I got some cool pictures from him.

"(We) had our normal conversations. Nothing has been broken, but the minicamp stuff, we talked beforehand, so we are on the same page with everything that has happened. "

The Jets again enter training camp with high expectations, partly because of Rodgers' return.

A year ago, after the Jets acquired Rodgers in a trade with the Packers, some analysts expected the Jets to contend for a Super Bowl in a loaded AFC.

Rodgers' Achilles tear nixed all hopes, and the team finished 7-10 for the second consecutive season. Although there's less hoopla this year, the Jets are expected to contend for the AFC East crown.

However, Rodgers' aspirations go further than winning division championships. That's why he has been a big part of setting a certain standard for the team.

"I think it is important that you have to bring the energy, the enthusiasm every single day," Rodgers said. "I think you have to set the standard by the way you show up every day. You have to be active in meetings, you have to be attentive. You have to be tapped into the energy of the team.

"The goal is New Orleans. That's got to be the focus, got to be the manifestation through our words and our actions. Everything has to be intentional that we do on the field, in the meeting rooms.

"There's a lot of room for fun and hanging with the guys and joking and stuff at the hotel. But when we are practicing and in drill work, it needs to be intentional."

Rodgers didn't mention the city of New Orleans by accident. He knows Super Bowl LIX will be held at the Superdome on Feb. 9.

The Jets will first have to contend in a loaded AFC that features the back-to-back Super Bowl champion Chiefs. In addition, the Bills have won the AFC East four years in a row, and the Dolphins have made the playoffs in back-to-back seasons.

With the hopes of contending for a Super Bowl, the Jets fortified their offensive line during the offseason by signing left tackle Tyron Smith and left guard John Simpson. Right tackle Morgan Moses landed with the Jets via trade.

They also added wide receiver Mike Williams and selected Malachi Corley in the third round of the 2024 draft. Gang Green hopes the return of Rodgers, along with the additions, will help its offense improve from 31st in yards (268.6) and 29th in points scored (15.8).

"The beauty is every single year, there are eight to 12 teams, maybe probably less," Rodgers said. "But eight to 12 teams that can actually do it. We're one of those eight to 12."

Jets coach Robert Saleh says he's focused on the players in camp, not the one holding out. AP

Jets start without Reddick

JETS insider
BY ANTWAN STALEY

The Jets held their first training camp practice of the summer on Wednesday morning, and one of the central storylines continues to be the absence of pass rusher Haason Reddick, who is in a contract dispute with the team.

"It is what it is," Robert Saleh said about Reddick not reporting with the rest of the team. "That's the business part of it. Have 89 other guys that we have to prepare."

After the Jets traded for him during the spring, Reddick skipped all the offseason programs, including OTAs and mandatory minicamps. Because of that, Reddick forfeited a $250,000 workout bonus and was fined over $50,000 for missing two minicamp practices.

It is unclear if and when Reddick will show up. According to the NFL collective bargaining agreement, Reddick will be fined $50,000 every day he misses training camp. His fine cannot be waived under current CBA rules.

Reddick, 29, is in the final year of a three-year, $45 million contract he signed with the Eagles in 2022. The Jets attempted to negotiate a contract extension with Reddick before the trade with the Eagles, according to sources. The two-time Pro Bowler rejected the offer, but the Jets still acquired him, believing Reddick would play on the final year of his contract.

"When you deal with contracts and things like that, it doesn't really get to the locker room because we don't control that," Jets linebacker C.J. Mosley said Tuesday. "When he does get here, then we'll have our two cents to say.

"We know he's a pro. He's been at the highest level of competition. Whenever that gets worked out, he'll be here, ready to roll. When he gets here, it's just another great player on the line."

Reddick's absence puts him behind since he has to learn new defensive coordinator Jeff Ulbrich's system.

"He's a veteran," Saleh said. "He has been with multiple teams, he has played multiple positions, he has had success multiple different ways.

"At this point in his career, I'm sure he knows exactly what he needs to do to prepare himself to play football. I'm not overly concerned."

In Reddick's absence, more practice snaps were given to second-year defensive ends Will McDonald and Takkarist McKinley. Gang Green selected McDonald in the first round of the 2023 draft. However, as a rookie, McDonald registered just 14 tackles and three sacks in rotational duty.

"He's like Gumby," Saleh said about McDonald. "He's athletic, he's quick twitch, he's super long, explosive. The thing for him is going to be the power aspect of football and in winning the power battle especially in pass rush."

RED ZONE 'O' STRUGGLES

Due to CBA rules, the first day of training camp is always one of the lightest. However, the Jets and Aaron Rodgers participated in both 11-on-11 and 7-on-7 drills.

Rodgers' first day of training camp was up and down.

During red zone work, he completed two of his seven passes. One of those completions was a touchdown to wide receiver Allen Lazard, who had a good day, bringing down two difficult catches. However, Jets receivers had problems separating from defenders, and one of Rodgers' passes was almost intercepted when he threw it a bit behind Xavier Gipson.

"He looked good," Saleh said about Rodgers. "He can still sling it. He moved around really good, too,."

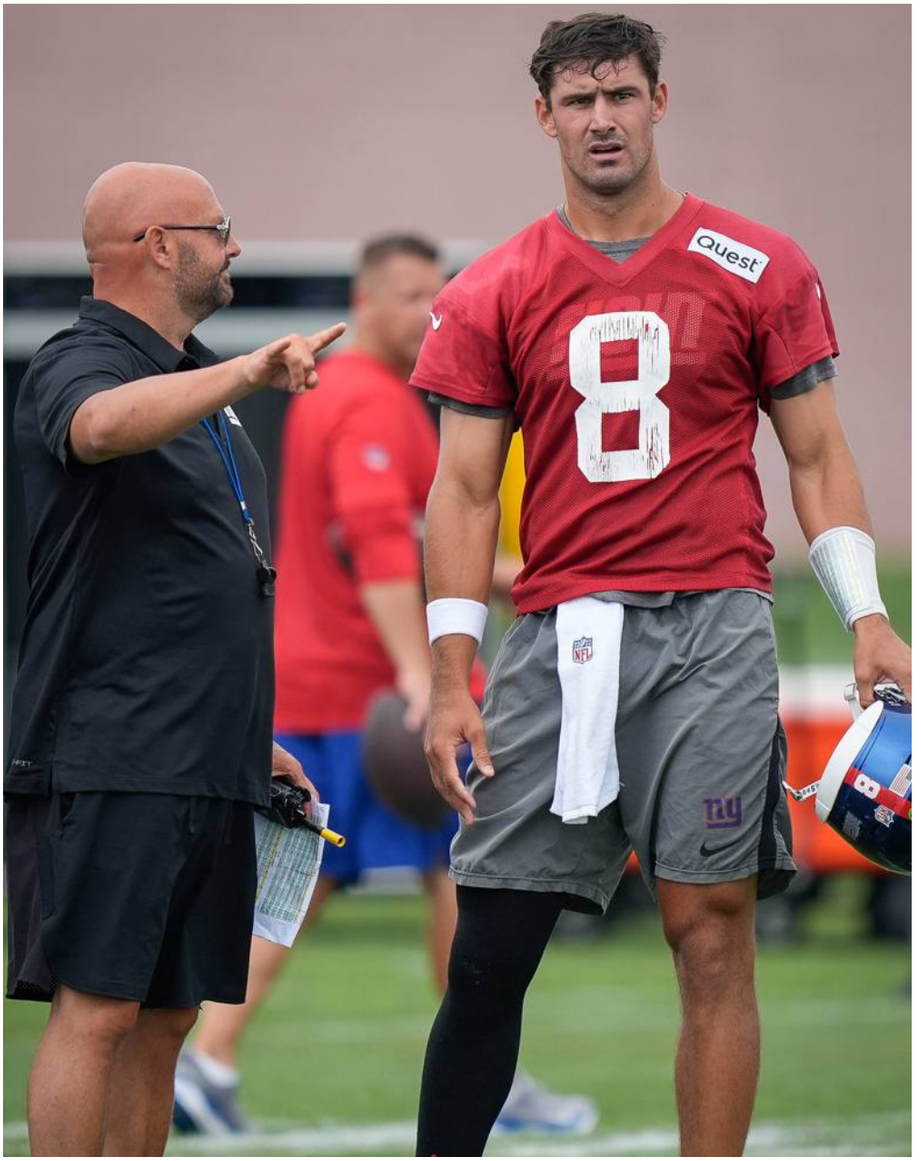

Offensive linemen Alijah Vera-Tucker and Morgan Moses did not participate in team drills. Vera-Tucker, who is returning from a season-ending Achilles tear he suffered last October, did individual work on the side. Moses was working off to the side with a trainer.

Wide receiver Mike Williams, who the Jets signed to a one-year contract in March, was also working on the side. Williams is rehabbing from an ACL tear.

Jones sees part of protection detail hurt as camp opens

Brian Daboll and Daniel Jones discuss matters as Giants training camp opens Wednesday. AP

ny insider
BY PAT LEONARD

Joe Schoen said Wednesday that "we need better" from Daniel Jones in 2024. But Jones and this Giants franchise need better from the GM and coach Brian Daboll, too.

Jones, who is practicing in full only eight months after surgery to repair a torn right ACL, needs a baseline of competence from the front office and coaching staff to assemble a reliable starting five on the offensive line.

What Jones does not need are injuries to two projected starting linemen through one day of training camp and flashbacks to a 2023 season from pass protection hell.

That's what Jones got on Wednesday, though, when top free-agent signing Jermaine Eluemunor got hurt while playing in place of injured right tackle Evan Neal (ankle).

Now there is no telling how long it will take for Jones' true starting five to get on the field together entering a pivotal season for this QB, this team and this regime.

This offense ranked 30th in scoring and allowed the second-most sacks in NFL history last season. Wednesday was not a good start.

"I think that's important," Jones said of a quarterback's need to get his O-line set. "The chemistry of those guys together, playing together, getting on the same page, communicating, me communicating with them, and them communicating with me is important."

"Injuries are part of the game, and I understand that," Jones added. "But obviously, you want to stay as healthy as possible, and the health of that group can help everybody. So that's important, but I know those guys are working hard to get back."

The Giants can't get out of their own way when it comes to building a line and keeping it healthy, however. Take Wednesday, for example.

Eluemunor was the Raiders' starting right tackle last season. The Giants made him a priority free-agent signing, practiced him primarily at left guard all spring, and then moved him to right tackle for their first training camp practice due to Neal's absence.

Promptly, a player who had been preparing to play on the left side got hurt one hour into his first practice on the right.

The severity of the injury wasn't immediately known after practice. It took Eluemunor a while to rise up off the grass. He appeared to be grabbing at his oblique or ribs, and he only stood up with the help of head athletic trainer Ronnie Barnes and left tackle Andrew Thomas.

But this was reminiscent of how training camp rotations have backfired on Schoen and Daboll before.

Just last year, they rotated guards Josh Ezeudu, Ben Bredeson and Mark Glowinski at the two starting positions on every single snap during camp, creating no continuity for rookie center John Michael Schmitz and the line.

Then they kicked Ezeudu out to left tackle with Thomas and Matt Peart injured, despite all of that guard work, and he was predictably not prepared to protect Jones' blindside.

Not to mention that Neal's absence, which prompted Eluemunor's move to right tackle on Wednesday, is connected to the Giants' mismanagement of their line, too.

Neal originally injured his ankle on Nov. 5, 2023, in Las Vegas, the same day Jones tore his right ACL. But the injury was initially misdiagnosed and rehabilitated as a sprain.

Eventually it was discovered to be a fracture, and Neal had surgery in late December. Still, when he got back on the field in the spring, it seemed clear that he suffered some sort of setback.

The Giants backed off his workload dramatically late in their offseason program, and then he was placed on the physically unable to perform list on Tuesday when he reported for camp.

Schoen and Daboll couldn't even keep their stories straight on Neal's timeline. Schoen said Neal is "not far off" from coming back. But Daboll said: "I can't tell you. It could be sooner, it could be later for Evan."

Schoen did have another free-agent signing, former Buccaneer Aaron Stinnie, prepared to slide into the left guard spot vacated by Eluemunor's move to the right. So that reflects the GM's plan to try to avoid a disaster of last season's proportions.

Still, it's unthinkable that Schoen's stated priority this offseason was "we gotta protect (Jones)," as he said in HBO's "Hard Knocks," and yet this is where the Giants stand: unsettled, unhealthy and unreliable up front, with Schoen poking around for late free-agent plug-ins like Dave Gettleman used to do. Carmen Bricillo is the Giants' eighth offensive line coach in the last 10 years. Maybe it's not all on the position coaches.

"He didn't have much of a chance this year," Schoen said of Jones' 2023 season in "Hard Knocks." He won't have one in 2024 either if Schoen and Daboll don't figure this out.

NO SYMPATHY FOR SLAYTON

Schoen had a piercing response to wide receiver Darius Slayton's admitted desire for a trade this spring. The GM was asked if he and Slayton had resolved that issue or if a trade is still a potential consideration.

"When he came in, we had a conversation, and that was never an option," Schoen said. "He was a free agent two years ago, and 32 teams had a chance to get his services, and he came back here. And I believe we gave him the best deal at the time, and it was a two-year deal. And we had a good conversation, and he understood where we were, and I understood where he was coming from. And we put it to bed when he showed up in the spring."

PRACTICE NOTES

Tight end Lawrence Cager made the leaping catch of the day deep down the left sideline on a throw from No. 2 quarterback Drew Lock. Lock later threw an interception off defensive tackle Jordan Phillips' helmet that D-end Boogie Basham caught and returned.

… First-round pick Malik Nabers dropped a pass downfield that hit him right in the chest with coverage closing in. … Jones connected on a bunch of short routes, but showed his rust. He overthrew running back Devin Singletary in the flat against a blitz from corner Dru Phillips and sailed one over undersized slot receiver Wan'Dale Robinson over the middle. Jones also scrambled a few times on his surgically repaired knee, showing some encouraging – but not full – mobility.

… Players like second-year corner Deonte Banks and inside linebacker Bobby Okereke were already on snap counts to manage their workloads on the first day.

Three-year extension for Thibs

BY KRISTIAN WINFIELD
NEW YORK DAILY NEWS

Tom Thibodeau helped pry open the Knicks' championship window.

The franchise rewarded his efforts with the opportunity to see the job through.

The Knicks and Thibodeau, who had one year left on his deal, agreed to a three-year extension on Wednesday that will keep the culture-driving workhorse coach in town through the 2027-28 season.

The extension is well-deserved: Thibodeau is fresh off of one of the best seasons in Knicks history.

Despite losing Julius Randle to a late-January season-ending shoulder injury, losing Mitchell Robinson for the majority of the regular season and half of the playoffs, a mid-season trade sending R.J. Barrett and Immanuel Quickley to the Raptors for OG Anunoby and Precious Achiuwa, and a barrage of injuries the Knicks were forced to address in a trade deadline deal for Bojan Bogdanovic and Alec Burks, Thibodeau's Knicks still finished with 50 wins, the Eastern Conference's No. 2 seed, and a Game 7 appearance in the second round of the playoffs.

The Knicks lost that game with Randle, Robinson, Bogdanovic and Anunoby out due to injury, and both Jalen Brunson and Josh Hart playing hurt.

It was a commendable job from the man in charge, and entering the final season of his contract, the Knicks rewarded Thibodeau with an extension, giving the coach who put in place the blue-collar culture an opportunity to see it through. This time, he has a roster – after the re-signing Anunoby and the trade for Mikal Bridges – better-positioned to compete with the Bucks and 76ers for a shot at the Celtics' Eastern Conference crown, and ultimately an NBA title.

The Knicks have made the playoffs three times in the four seasons since Thibodeau took the job after a three-year stint with the Timberwolves and a five-year run with the Bulls.

He boasts a 175-143 record with the Knicks, a 527-389 record all-time, and a Coach of the Year Award in 2021.

With this extension, Thibodeau will see through this Knicks' championship window.

Brunson recently signed a four-year contract extension worth $156.5 million and has the ability to decline the player option on the final year of his deal to test free agency in 2028.

Anunoby's five-year, $212.5 million contract also has a player option in 2028, and if Randle were to sign a four-year extension (he becomes eligible for a $181.5 million max extension on Aug. 3), his would expire in 2028, as well.

Bridges will also become eligible for a two-year extension on Oct. 1 – which will expire in the summer of 2028. Thibodeau's deal projects to keep him in town for the same amount of time as the pillars on which the franchise has built its title-contention hopes.

Three-year extension could keep Tom Thibodeau in town until 2028. AP

In the second-to-last year of his deal, Thibodeau maintained his desire to remain with the Knicks. He addressed a potential extension after Game 7 of the Eastern Conference Semifinals.

"That's something that my agent will take care of," he said. "The Knicks have been great to me. This is where I want to be."

With this extension, Thibodeau can continue calling MSG – or the Knicks' Tarrytown training facility – home, and he has an opportunity to see through something he's only done as an assistant.

The ever-so elusive trip to the NBA Finals evaded Thibodeau in his five years coaching the Bulls, his closest shot derailed via gentleman's sweep in a conference finals loss to LeBron James and the Heat in 2011.

He has since suffered four second-round playoff exits, though the back-to-back appearances are promising given the injuries threatening to derail the Knicks' success last season.

The Knicks are hoping injuries are a thing of the past, and with a deep rotation only in need of a backup center behind the oft-injured Robinson, Thibodeau is in position to replicate the success he enjoyed as a member of Doc Rivers' staff when the Celtics defeated the Lakers for the 2008 championship.

This time around, however, the road to a title inevitably runs through Thibodeau's old stomping grounds, and now armed with the stability of an extension set to run in line with the contracts of his star players, Thibodeau can see through something that hasn't happened in over 50 years.

France blanks U.S. for Olympic soccer starters

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MARSEILLE, France – On a wild opening day for the Olympic men's soccer tournament, the United States came within the width of the crossbar from taking the lead against host nation France.

Within moments, Alexandre Lacazette had the ball in the back of the Americans' net – and when Michael Olise added a second for the French, they were on their way to a 3-0 win.

"It was unfortunate – on another day maybe it goes in," said Djordje Mihailovic, whose long-range effort came back off the bar when the Group A game in Marseille was still goalless in the second half. "I think most importantly, (we need to) emotionally recover because we were in the game for the first 70 minutes, even after they scored, we responded very well."

For a time, the U.S. looked like it could produce an upset when repeatedly opening France up in the first Olympic game for American men since 2008.

"I can't say anything to the players. They were in the right spot," U.S. coach Marko Mitrovic said. "I have that feeling inside that we didn't deserve to lose this way."

The United States never came closer than Mihailovic's effort, and France made the most of its fortune – responding with stunning strikes from Lacazette in the 61st minute and Olise in the 68th.

Loic Bade added the third with a header in the 85th.

"I knew it was going to be tough. You guys never give up," France coach Thierry Henry told American reporters. "That fighting spirit is always in you. You always believe that you can come back. I know that. I played in MLS, I coached in MLS, so I know that's something that you have."

It was two moments of quality that ultimately put France in control, with former Arsenal striker Lacazette driving low from 20 yards past U.S. goalkeeper Patrick Schulte.

New Bayern Munich signing Olise curled a shot from distance into the same corner.

Bade's header effectively put the game away and saw France move to the top of Group A.

"There was definitely stuff to make us feel good going into the next two matches," Mihailovic said.

SPAIN 2, UZBEKISTAN 1

Sergio Gomez scored the winning goal in Spain's victory over Uzbekistan to open Group C.

The match at Parc des Princes in Paris was the first official competition of the Olympics and drew some 35,000 fans.

Marc Pubill scored in the 29th minute for Spain, which won the gold medal at the 1992 Olympics. The team has won silver twice since then, most recently at the Tokyo Games.

Eldor Shomurodov converted on a penalty kick in first-half stoppage time to tie it for Uzbekistan, which was making its first Olympic appearance.

NEW ZEALAND 2, GUINEA 1

Ben Waine scored the go-ahead goal and New Zealand won its Group A opener over Guinea in Nice.

New Zealand was awarded a penalty in the 24th minute, but Guinea goalkeeper Soumaila Sylla dove to punch away captain Matthew Garbett's attempt. New Zealand quickly recovered and Garbett scored a minute later for a 1-0 lead.

EGYPT 0, DOMINICAN REP. 0

Egypt and the Dominican Republic played to a scoreless draw in Group C in Nantes.

Peter Gonzalez's apparent goal for debutant Dominican Republic early in the match was called back because of a foul in the run-up.

JAPAN 5 PARAGUAY 0

Shunsuke Mito and Shota Fujio scored two goals each in Japan's rout of Paraguay in Group D.

IRAQ 2, UKRAINE 1

Substitute Ali Jasim came on to seal a comeback win for Iraq against Ukraine in Group B.

Ukraine had led through Valentyn Rubchynskyi's opener in the 53rd in Lyon, but Iraq was quickly given the chance to level from the penalty spot.

MALI 1, ISRAEL 1

Mali came back from a goal down to tie Israel at Parc des Princes in Paris in Group D.

Israel took the lead through an own goal from Mali defender Hamidou Diallo before Cheickna Doumbia headed into the bottom corner to even the game.

Morocco fans storm field, then find out all is well in win over Argentina

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAINT-ETIENNE, France – Morocco fans crashed the pitch to protest a late goal by Argentina at the opening match of the Paris Olympics men's soccer tournament, an angry and bizarre scene that left the game suspended for nearly two hours with only minutes remaining.

Moments before play resumed, the goal was disallowed by VAR for offside. Morocco held on for a 2-1 victory.

But not before a furious reaction from Morocco fans who thought they'd been denied a critical win.

Objects were thrown and invading Morocco fans were tackled by security on the field at Stade Geoffroy-Guichard in Saint-Etienne after Argentina tied it, 2-2, with a goal from Cristian Medina the 16th minute of added time.

There were images of some Argentina players flinching when what appeared to be a flare was thrown. Bottles and cups were strewn over the field by the end.

MOROCCO	2
ARGENTINA	1

It was initially thought that the full-time whistle had been blown. Even FIFA's website declared the game over. Video boards informed fans the match was suspended and they had to leave the stadium.

About an hour after the incident, organizers at the venue said the match was not officially over and VAR was reviewing whether the goal would stand.

Players eventually re-entered the field after a long delay and began to warm up before the game could be concluded. After warmups, players from both teams stood on the field in the otherwise empty stadium while an official reviewed the video. He offered a brief explanation to Argentina's players after the goal was overturned while players on Morocco's bench celebrated.

Play went on for three minutes after the resumption before the final whistle was blown.

Morocco had led the game, 2-0, before Argentina's fight back.

Giuliano Simeone scored in the 68th minute and Medina leveled the game deep into time added on.

Coco named female flag bearer for U.S.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PARIS – Tennis star Coco Gauff will join LeBron James as a flag bearer for the U.S. Olympic team at Friday's opening ceremony.

Gauff, the reigning U.S. Open champion, is set to make her Olympic debut at the Paris Games and will be the first tennis athlete to carry the U.S. flag. She and James were chosen by Team USA athletes.

"I mean, for me, the Olympics is a top priority. I would say equal to the Grand Slams. I wouldn't put it above or below, just because I've never played before. This is my first time," Gauff said earlier this year. "Obviously, I always want to do well, try to get a medal."

Gauff and James, the 39-year-old leading scorer in NBA history, both compete in sports that are outside the traditional Olympic world and get attention year-round, not just every four years.

The 20-year-old Gauff made the American team for the Tokyo Games three years ago as a teenager but had to sit out those Olympics because she tested positive for COVID-19 right before she was supposed to fly to Japan.

Now Gauff, who is based in Florida, is a Grand Slam title winner in singles and doubles. She won her first major championship in September, defeating Aryna Sabalenka in the singles final of the U.S. Open, then added her first Grand Slam doubles trophy at the French Open this June alongside Katerina Siniakova of the Czech Republic.

The same clay courts at Roland Garros used for the French Open will be where matches are going to be held for the Paris Olympics. The draw to set the brackets is today, and play begins on Saturday.

Gauff is seeded No. 2 in singles, matching her current WTA ranking behind No. 1 Iga Swiatek of Poland, and will be among the medal favorites.

She and her usual doubles partner, Jessica Pegula, are seeded No. 1 in women's doubles. It's possible Gauff could also be entered in mixed doubles, but those pairings have not been announced yet.

"I'm not putting too much pressure on it, because I really want to fully indulge in the experience," Gauff said about her Olympics debut. "Hopefully I can have the experience multiple times in my lifetime, (but) I'll treat it as a once-in-a-lifetime experience."

Brewers fear Yelich may be out a while

The Brewers were bracing for the possibility that Christian Yelich would miss significant time after placing the All-Star outfielder on the 10-day injured list Wednesday because of inflammation in his lower back.

Yelich is scheduled to see a spine specialist today to figure out his next steps, including whether he needs season-ending surgery.

"Everybody plays through stuff, but sometimes, you just can't," he said. "That's kind of where we're at at this point. Your body won't cooperate with you. For me, aside from when I broke my knee, this has been the one thing that I've had to deal with. It's frustrating. I've dealt with it a lot during my career."

Yelich's back has been bothering him for weeks and worsened in recent days. The move to the injured list comes one day after he exited a game against the Cubs.

"He's been an offensive machine, the attitude he brings," manager Pat Murphy said. "He tried like heck to play injured for a while. Hopefully, we can get him back."

Asked how concerned he is that Yelich won't return this season, Murphy said: "Worry is kind of a waste of time, so I'm trying to not worry. You really end up wasting time worrying. Just get busy, get busy living."

The Brewers also reinstated catcher Gary Sánchez from the IL on Wednesday.

OILERS HIRE EX-CHICAGO GM

The Oilers hired Stan Bowman as general manager and executive vice president of hockey operations on Wednesday, making him the first former Blackhawks executive re-hired by an NHL team since the team's 2010 sexual assault scandal came to light in recent years.

The league reinstated Bowman, coach Joel Quenneville and Al MacIsaac, who also worked in Chicago's front office, earlier this month. Bowman resigned as Chicago's GM in 2021 after an independent investigation found the organization mishandled the allegations made by player Kyle Beach that he was sexually assaulted by video coach Brad Aldridge.

Bowman, 51, ran the Blackhawks when they won the Stanley Cup in '10, '13 and '15. He takes over the Oilers following their trip to the finals in which they lost to Florida in seven games.

"I believe his vast experience and proven success in this role, together with the important work he has done in his time away from the game, fits our goal of being best in class when it comes to all facets of our organization," CEO of hockey operations Jeff Jackson said. "Through our many conversations, we share a common vision of where we are as a team and what is required to achieve another Stanley Cup title."

SPORTSwire

Jackson, hired last year after spending more than a decade as Connor McDavid's agent, was asked July 1 about Bowman being a candidate for the job after the team did not renew GM Ken Holland's contract.

"I mean, Stan's obviously a long-time GM, successful, and the NHL reinstated all three of the guys today," Jackson said at the time. "I'm running a bit on fumes here because of the schedule with the playoffs and then the draft, then free agency, so I haven't given any of it any thought, to be honest. I've got to sort of decompress for a couple days, and then I've got to move forward with my GM search."

SKINNER OUT OF OLYMPICS

Top-ranked tennis player Jannik Sinner pulled out of the Paris Olympics on Wednesday because of tonsillitis, meaning Novak Djokovic and Carlos Alcaraz will be the top-seeded men, setting up a potential gold medal rematch of the Wimbledon final.

Sinner, a 22-year-old from Italy, posted on social media that a doctor advised him that he should sit out the Summer Games. Sinner won the Australian Open in January for his first Grand Slam title and moved up to No. 1 in the ATP rankings last month after reaching the French Open semifinals.

The draw for Olympic tennis is today. Matches begin Saturday.

"Missing the Olympics is a big disappointment, given that it was one of my main goals this season," Sinner wrote in Italian. "I couldn't wait to have the honor of representing my country in this extremely important event."

Sinner will be replaced on Italy's team by 207th-ranked Andrea Vavassori in singles and by Luciano Darderi in doubles alongside Lorenzo Musetti.

The Summer Games tennis competition will be held at Roland Garros, the site of the annual French Open Grand Slam tournament.

NBA SIGNS RIGHTS DEAL

The NBA signed its 11-year media rights deal with Disney, NBC and Amazon Prime Video on Wednesday after saying it was not accepting Warner Bros. Discovery's $1.8 billion per year offer to continue its longtime relationship with the league.

The media rights deals were approved by the league's Board of Governors last week and will bring the league about $76 billion over those 11 years.

WBD had five days to match a part of those deals and said it was exercising its right to do so, but its offer was not considered a true match by the NBA. That means the 2024-25 season will be the last for TNT after a nearly four-decade run.

ON THIS DATE

JULY 25

1939: Atley Donald of the New York Yankees set a rookie pitching record in the AL when he registered his 12th consecutive victory since May 9, with a 5-1 victory over the St. Louis Browns.
1941: Lefty Grove of the Boston Red Sox won his 300th and last game, beating the Cleveland Indians 10-6.
1949: Stan Musial of St. Louis hit for the cycle, going 4-5 and driving in four runs to lead the Cardinals to a 14-1 rout of the Brooklyn Dodgers at Ebbets Field.
1956: Roberto Clemente hit a game-winning inside-the-park grand slam to give Pittsburgh a 9-8 win over the Chicago Cubs at Forbes Field.
1961: En route to his 61-homer season, Roger Maris of the New York Yankees hit four homers against the Chicago White Sox in a doubleheader to give him 40 for the year. The Yankees took both games, 5-1 and 12-0, and Maris moved 25 games ahead of Babe Ruth's 1927 pace.
1962: Stan Musial of St. Louis became the all-time RBI leader in the NL. His two-run home run, in a 5-2 loss to Los Angeles, gave him 1,862 RBIs, passing Mel Ott.
1978: Pete Rose of the Cincinnati Reds singled to left off New York's Craig Swan in the third inning to set a NL record of hitting safely in 38 consecutive games. The Mets won the game 9-2.
1990: Kansas City's George Brett hit for the cycle in the Royals 6-1 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays.
