Schools chief David Banks, saying he plans a "big announcement," indicated Wednesday students could lose their cell phone access during regular school hours.

Chancellor hints at cell phone ban during school day

BY CAYLA BAMBERGER
NEW YORK DAILY NEWS

The city is poised to impose strict limits on cell phone use in public schools, as restrictions on their use gain traction across the country, Schools Chancellor David Banks indicated Wednesday.

The head of the nation's largest school district said he plans to make a "big announcement" on the matter in about two weeks. While details of the policy are under wraps, Banks signaled students could travel to and from school with their devices – but would lose access during regular school hours.

"We want you to be able to bring your phone to school, because the minute that school is over, you need to be in communication with your family," he told NY1. "So you will be able to do that, but we're going to look to have a system when you can't use it during the school day."

If that is what Banks announces, New York would become the latest in a string of cities and states taking action against phones in schools, which the chancellor described as not only a distraction but harmful to kids' well-being. Youth mental health has deteriorated, and conflicts that started on phones have spilled over to violence during dismissal.

The school board in Los Angeles – the nation's second-largest school district – approved a cell phone ban this month. And following new limits on teen social media use, Gov. Hochul is also planning to introduce statewide school smartphone restrictions that would prohibit devices with internet capabilities.

"We've been talking to the medical doctors. Dr. [Ashwin] Vasan, the city's medical doctor's been talking about the mental health impacts on kids," Banks said. "Our kids are fully addicted to these phones. We've got to do something about it."

"Overwhelmingly, for the last three months I've been talking about this, everybody has been saying, 'Take the phones.' It is a major problem," he added.

New York hasn't had a citywide ban since former Mayor Bill de Blasio lifted the policy in early 2015, before the rise of TikTok and the pandemic forced young people inside with few other means of socializing than on their devices.

Since then, the absence of a standardized policy has left it up to principals to design their own, and teachers and staff to apply it.

The result has been a hodgepodge of approaches, varying among the city's 32 community school districts, individual schools and even classrooms. While some schools collect phones at the start of each day or require students place their devices in locked pouches, others have implemented general bans that teachers may enforce differently.

Any citywide policy would have to account for challenges with implementing a ban, United Federation of Teachers President Michael Mulgrew told the Daily News.

"You know, they've done it, tried it twice, years ago. It was never successful. It wasn't successful because the city never had a plan for it. They basically left it up to the schools and teachers to figure it out on their own," the teachers union boss said. "Phones have become more and more of an issue inside of the schools," he added. "But the real issue is if we're going to do this, then we have to have a plan for the largest school system in the country."

On NY1, Banks suggested he's learning from the past. When lifting the ban, de Blasio described his decision as a matter of equality, saying the policy was mostly enforced at schools with metal detectors in low-income neighborhoods. Meanwhile, a cottage industry of cell phone storage crept up at businesses near schools, costing families.

"We don't want kids to have to pay $1 to leave their phone at a bodega across the street," the chancellor said.

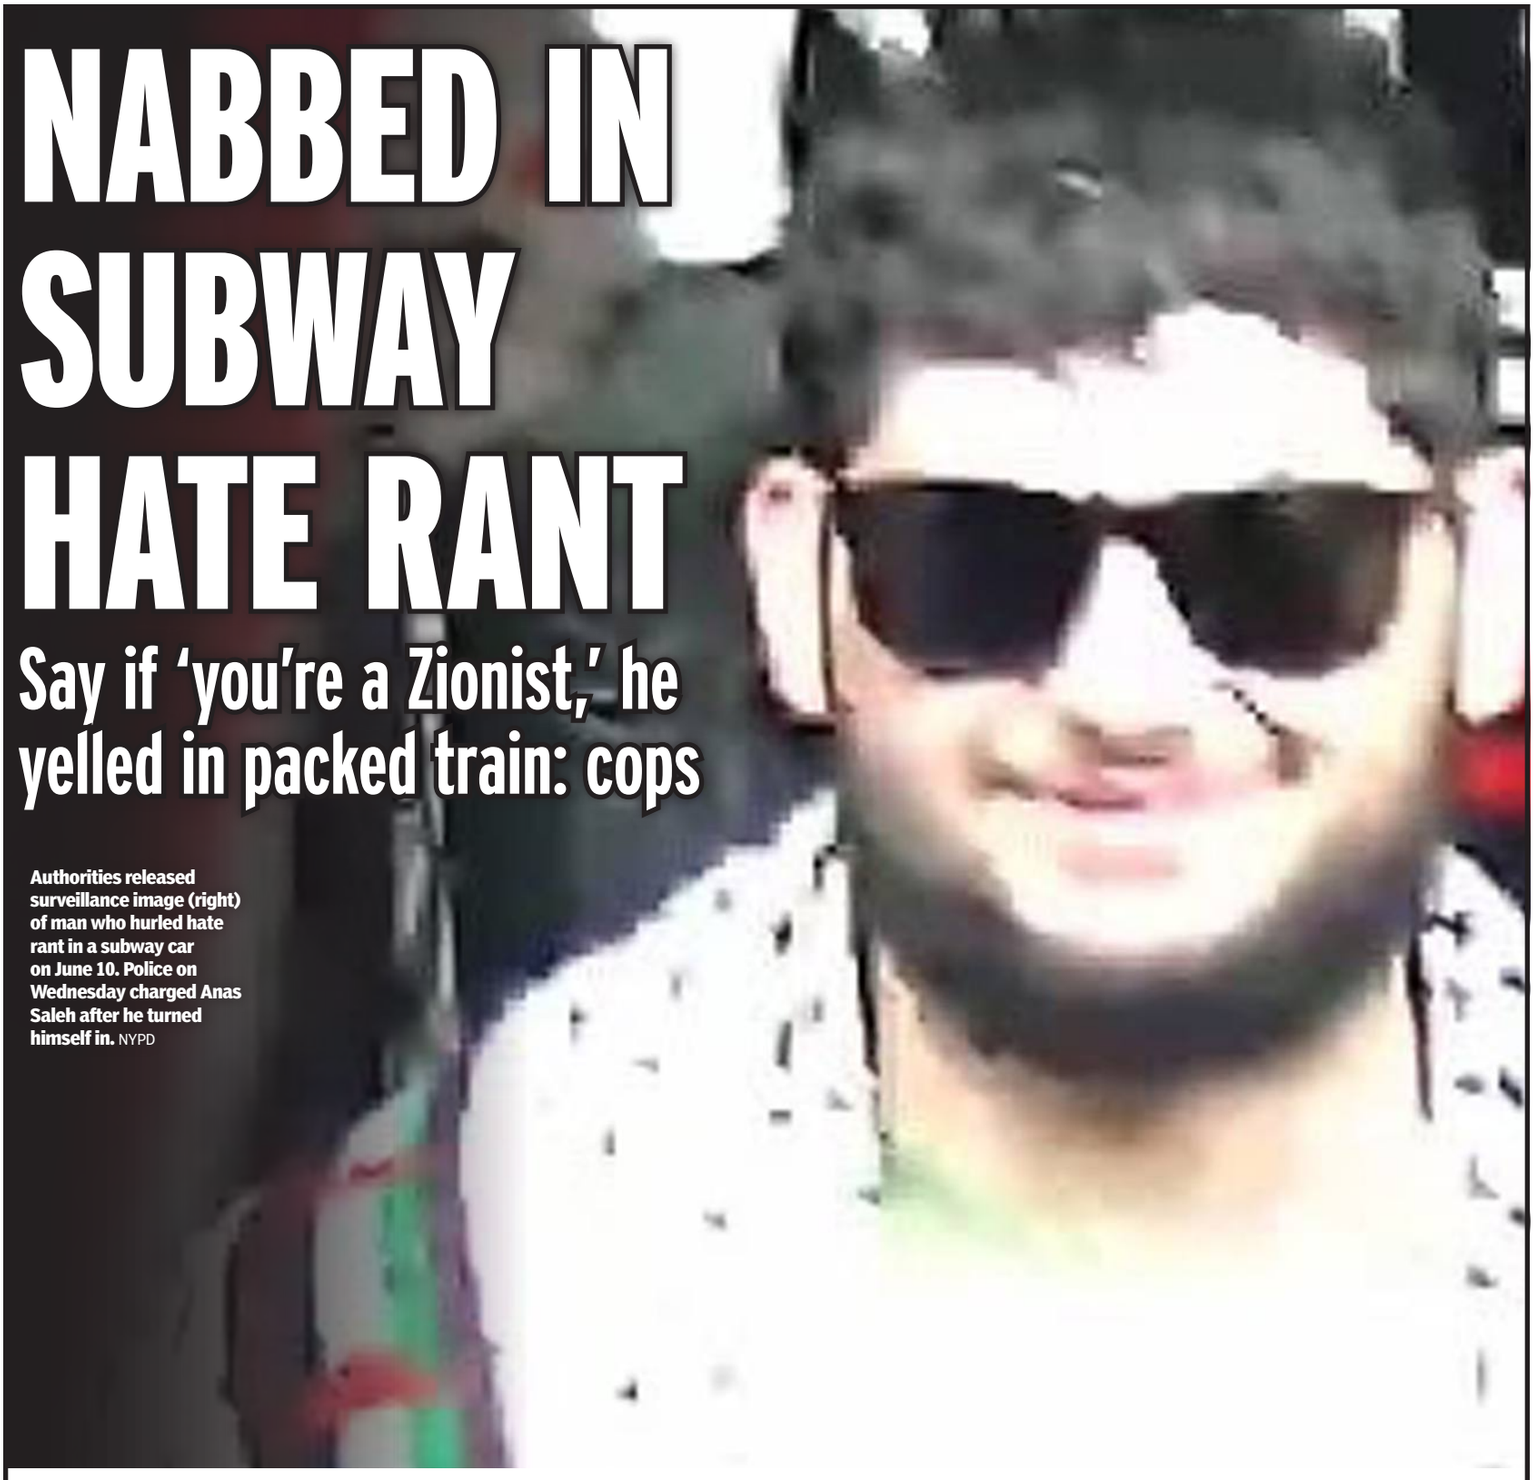

Mayor Adams, at a news conference at City Hall on Tuesday, said he was in touch with former Mayor Mike Bloomberg, who implemented the school cell phone ban, and agreed the devices are a distraction. But not everyone's onboard with a total ban.

"One of the biggest pushbacks, believe it or not, are parents. Some parents really want to have accessibility to their children throughout the day," Adams said, adding that "9/11 changed the game. A lot of parents were really afraid when they couldn't reach their children during 9/11."

"We just have to find a sweet spot. I think we can find that," he added.

NABBED IN SUBWAY HATE RANT

Say if 'you're a Zionist,' he yelled in packed train: cops

Authorities released surveillance image (right) of man who hurled hate rant in a subway car on June 10. Police on Wednesday charged Anas Saleh after he turned himself in. NYPD

NEW YORK DAILY NEWS

A masked pro-Palestinian protester recorded terrorizing a crowded Manhattan subway train by screaming "Raise your hand if you're a Zionist!" surrendered to police Wednesday, officials said.

After seeing wanted posters seeking his arrest, Anas Saleh, 24, surrendered to NYPD transit cops at the Canal St. station with a lawyer in tow.

He was charged with attempted coercion, a misdemeanor, and given a desk appearance ticket. He's expected to answer the charges in Manhattan Criminal Court in a few weeks.

His face covered with a black-and-white headscarf, Saleh allegedly stepped on a crowded subway train at the 14th St.-Union Square station on June 10 and started chanting, "Raise your hand if you're a Zionist! This is your chance to get out!"

When no one responded, Saleh said, "OK, no Zionists. We're good!" before stepping off the train.

The train was held in the station as cops cleared protesters from the platform.

Saleh was part of a protest in Union Square where footage posted to social media shows a small group of demonstrators holding up a flag saying, "Long live October 7th."

Protesters then flooded into the subway and rode down to Wall St., where they staged a larger action outside the Nova Exhibition, a memorial to the victims of Hamas' Oct. 7 attack that killed some 1,200 Israelis. Hundreds were taken hostage.

"The Manhattan DA's office and NYPD have been actively investigating this incident since it occurred," a spokesman for Manhattan District Attorney Alvin Bragg said of the subway incident. "We encourage anyone with additional information to call (212) 335-9040."

At the Wall St. protest, footage shows a protester waving a flag with Hamas' logo on it and another with the emblem of Hezbollah, a Lebanese militant group also labeled a terrorist organization by the U.S. Someone else is seen holding a sign saying Zionists are "not human."

The next day Mayor Adams joined relatives of the victims of the Oct. 7 terror attack to condemn the protesters, calling their actions "despicable."

"Hamas is a terrorist organization," Adams said. "Hezbollah is a terrorist organization. … Is this what New York represents? I say no."

The word "Zionist" means someone who supports Israel and believes in the creation of a Jewish state, but during the many protests over the Hamas war in the city since Oct. 7 some activists have been equating the term with simply being Jewish.

"Among too many activists, it's now socially acceptable code for 'Jewish,' " the New York Daily News Editorial Board wrote after the incident. "See, the defense goes, we're not going after Jews because of the God they pray to; we're going after people because they believe in Israel's right to exist as a Jewish state.

"Any Jew on such a car would have good reason to feel intimidated, just as if someone chanted 'Raise your hand if you're gay,' or 'Raise your hand if you're Republican,' or 'Raise your hand if you're Black,' followed by, 'This is your chance to get out,' " the June 14 editorial continued. "Every responsible New York leader should stand up against such vile behavior."

$16.5B DEVASTATION TO

Officially end work on 2nd Ave. subway extension, elevators

METROPOLITAN TRANSPORTATION AUTHORITY; GARDINER ANDERSON, SHAWN INGLIMA FOR NYDN

BY EVAN SIMKO-BEDNARSKI
NEW YORK DAILY NEWS

The brutal reality of Gov. Hochul's congestion pricing kibosh came clearly into focus Wednesday, when MTA brass officially delayed the extension of the Second Ave. subway into East Harlem, the construction of elevators at 23 subway stations, the addition of new subway cars on the numbered lines, repairs to the Verrazzano Bridge and a slew of other projects.

Tim Mulligan, the MTA's deputy chief development officer, laid out $16.5 billion in cuts to the agency's current capital plan.

"Plans are exactly that – they're a plan, and they have to respond to reality," Mulligan said. "Our reality for the capital plan changed dramatically 21 days ago."

"We're hopeful that resolution in one form or another is on the horizon," he added. "But we have to operate the system, we have to protect the system, and we have to provide for the transition to the next capital plan."

Following the presentation, the MTA board voted, 10 to 1, to approve a resolution delaying the congestion pricing plan's previously approved June 30 start date "until after such time as the execution of the legally required tolling agreement" can be signed off on by the state. The resolution also reaffirmed the MTA's willingness to implement a congestion pricing plan should Hochul's holdup abate.

Hochul has said she is looking for ways to replace the lost revenue but has failed to deliver any concrete plans.

In a statement sent to reporters during the MTA's Wednesday board meeting, Hochul sought to assure New Yorkers that the MTA "is now in a strong financial position" after she secured a higher payroll tax and other funding sources for the agency's operating budget last year.

That money, she continued, "will allow it to continue to meet its responsibilities to its millions of riders to provide safe and timely transport."

While the governor's support did help fill a $1.2 billion hole in the MTA's day-to-day budget for payroll and other operating expenses, her move this month to pause the state's congestion pricing plan effectively pulled $15 billion from the capital budget meant to fund large-scale system repairs, improvements and expansions.

Mulligan and other MTA officials said Wednesday that the loss of funds effectively created a $16.5 billion hole in the budget, when the loss of certain federal grant money was factored in.

Mulligan's bare-bones budget puts off $5 billion in system expansion, a figure that includes grants from Phase 2 of the Second Ave. subway. The plan also delays $2 billion in accessibility projects, $3 billion in modern subway signaling systems, $3 billion in repair work, $1.5 billion in new rolling stock purchases, $500 million in electric buses, and $1.5 billion in other infrastructure upgrades.

Under Mulligan's plan, the MTA will potentially forfeit $2 billion of the federal government's $3.4 billion grant to support Phase 2 of the Second Ave. subway – the remaining $1.4 billion is secured against the agency's 2019 capital plan.

The decision effectively kicks the '70s era subway line plan down the road once again, allowing some $3 billion in MTA funding to be shunted toward repair and maintenance projects.

Still, MTA Chairman Janno Lieber said discussions with federal transportation officials were ongoing in an effort to buy time to save the federal funds.

"There is no intention to abandon that grant," Lieber said.

MTA'S PROJECT PLANS

and new cars on numbered lines in wake of congest collapse

The tunnel isn't going anywere and neither are many other projects after Gov. Hochul (with MTA boss Janno Lieber) killed the program that was supposed to fund the work. After 17 years of planning, Hochul curbed congestion pricing with just days to go before it was to start.

Accessibility and elevator upgrades at 23 subway stations required under the terms of a 2022 settlement will also be put off.

Mulligan said the MTA would be making "limited" rolling stock purchases to replace "the least reliable rolling stock on subways and commuter railroads."

As previously reported by the Daily News, three major rolling stock purchases made up the bulk of the MTA's outstanding capital budget: An order of R211 subway cars to continue replacing the aging R46 on the A, C, N, Q and W lines with an option to purchase more to replace R68s on the B, D, N, Q, W and Franklin Ave. Shuttle lines; M9A cars meant to replace the LIRR's obsolete M3s; and funding to purchase an eventual replacement for the 40-year-old R62 on the No. 1 and 3 lines of the subway system's A-division.

Mulligan said the $1.1 billion A-division car purchase would be cut, leaving riders on those lines reliant on cars that average a failure every 100,000 miles or less. New locomotives on the commuter rail lines will also be delayed.

It was expected that the LIRR's M9A would continue to funded, as would the in-process R211 order to replace the bulk of the remaining R46s in the system.

But the MTA will pass on an option to purchase additional R211s to replace the obsolete R68s, which average a breakdown every 130,000 miles.

In total, the $4 billion initially slated for new rolling stock will be winnowed down to $2.5 billion.

Money set aside to repair train yards and bus depots will also be reallocated to other projects, Mulligan said – meaning the facility where the aging R68 and R62 fleets will need to be maintained will themselves see maintenance deferred.

Other deferred projects include PA system replacements in 70 subway stations and dehumidification of the main structural cables on the Verrazzano Bridge.

"As we're headed in a slightly grim direction, I just want to emphasize one thing," Lieber said.

"Our obligation as fiduciaries and professionals is to work with everybody, however we feel at this moment, to try to be ready that when that financial solution that is being talked about arrives – God willing – that we will be ready to put Humpty Dumpty back together again as quickly as possible," he said.

"We can't give up hope and plan for a permanent deferral."

Hochul sought to offer that hope Wednesday.

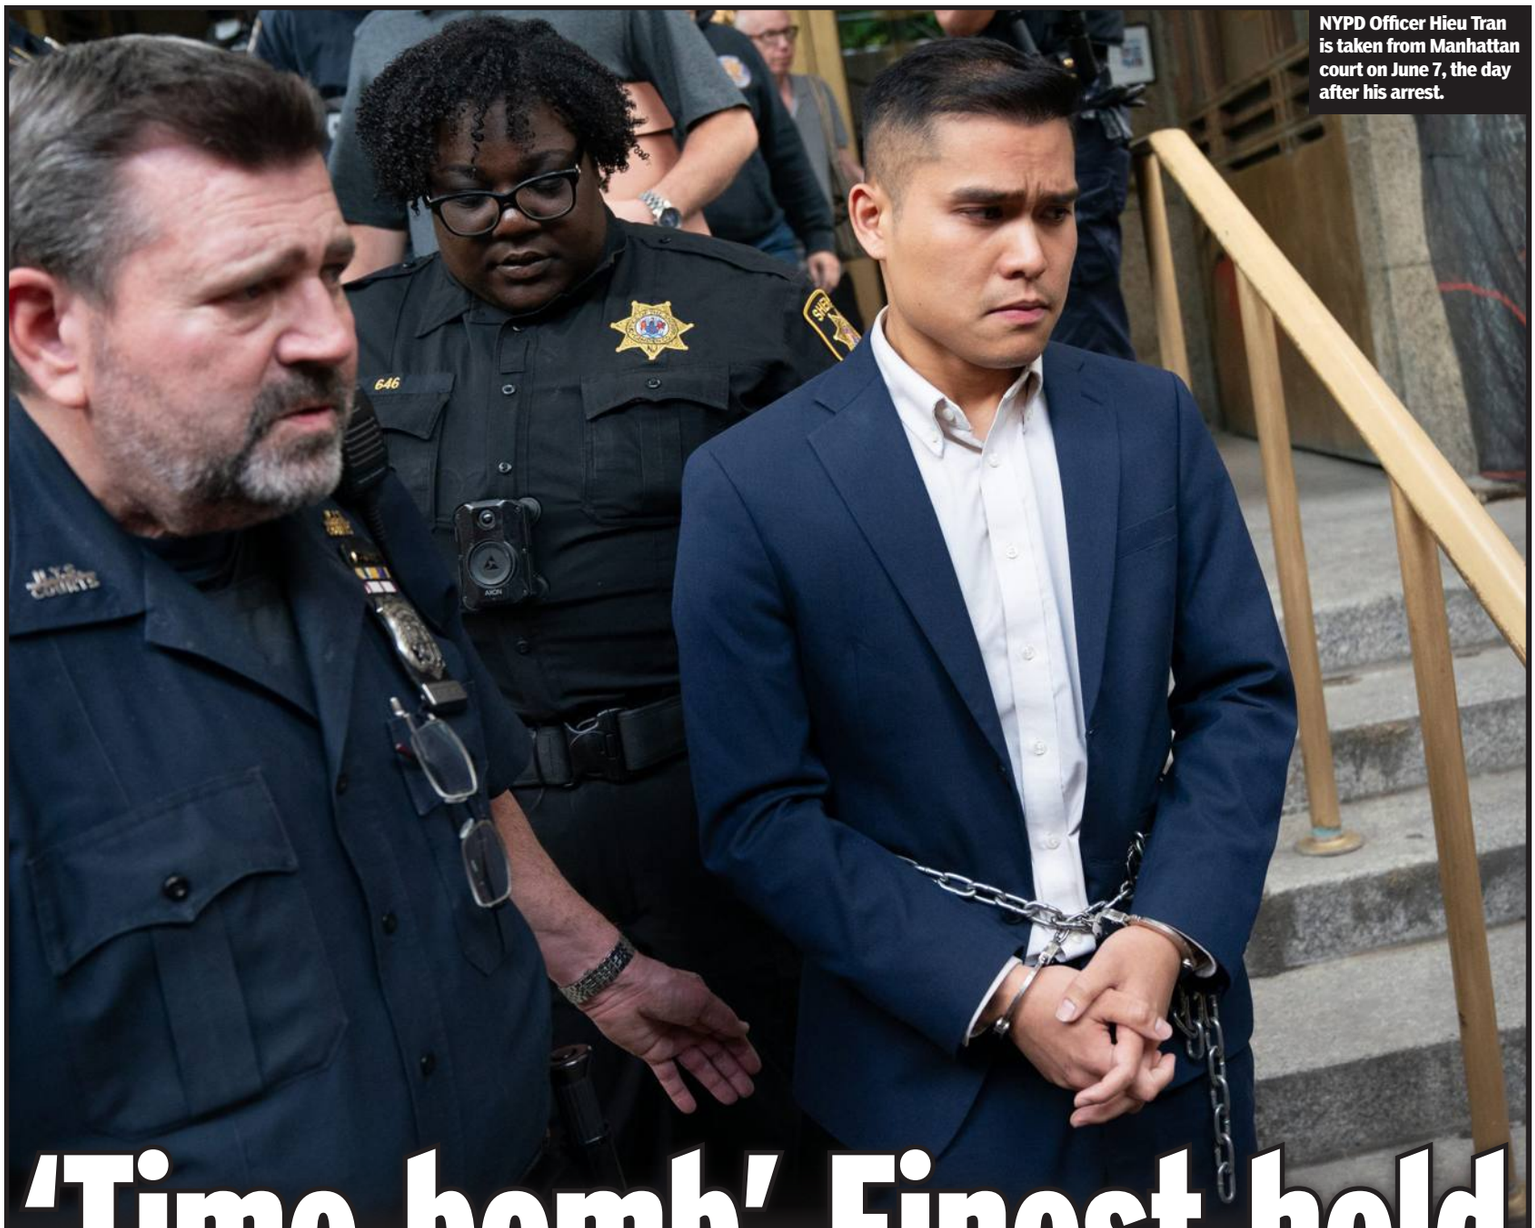

"This administration's proven commitment to the MTA, as well as my record of delivering resources for critical priorities in the state budget, should provide the MTA with full confidence in future funding streams," she said in her statement. "While the timing of the next budget may necessitate temporary adjustments to the timeline of certain contracts, there is no reason for New Yorkers to be concerned that any planned projects will not be delivered."

But the governor's statement said any additional funding might not come until next year.

"[T]he MTA has committed to direct all available resources to ensure the system remains in a state of good repair and continue to advance priority projects, and prepare to activate new contracts immediately following the designation of new revenue sources in next year's budget," she said.

Asked about Hochul's statement, Lieber said he took the governor at her word.

"We're expecting that there will be a solution to the [missing] $15 billion," Lieber said.

NYPD Officer Hieu Tran is taken from Manhattan court on June 7, the day after his arrest.

'Time bomb' Finest held

No bail in N.J. road rage shooting that left vic quadriplegic

BY THOMAS TRACY
NEW YORK DAILY NEWS

An NYPD cop who shot a driver in a road rage confrontation in New Jersey and then fled the scene is a "time bomb" who left his 30-year-old victim a quadriplegic, prosecutors charge.

Officer Hieu Tran was ordered held without bail following a Tuesday hearing at the Camden County Hall of Justice. He's accused of firing at another motorist as the two waited at a light near Route 73 and Cooper Road in Camden County on May 17.

Video surveillance of the 11:15 p.m. shooting shows the victim's yellow truck speeding away from Tran's white SUV, which had rolled up alongside the victim, the Courier Post reported.

"The yellow truck accelerated through the red light into oncoming traffic, colliding with other vehicles," police said in court papers.

A few moments later, Tran's white SUV is seen speeding through the light, court papers note.

First responders quickly realized that the crash victim had been shot. Three spent shell casings were found at the scene.

"While the paramedics were responding [to the victim], the defendant was speeding up the turnpike," Assistant Prosecutor Peter Gallagher told Superior Court Judge Michael Joyce during the hearing, according to the Courier Post. "[Tran] used [his weapon] to gun down an unarmed man who was just trying to get home from work."

"[He's a] time bomb," Gallagher added.

Tran, 27, worked in the social media unit for the NYPD's press office. He was suspended without pay earlier this month when he was arrested for the shooting.

Tran was off-duty returning home alone from a wedding when he got into a road rage incident with the victim, who was left a quadriplegic and is "still on life support," Gallagher said.

New Jersey police managed to track the white SUV that fled the scene to a Wawa in Mount Laurel, where Tran used his credit card to buy gas.

Investigators later determined the gunshots came from Tran's service weapon.

Tran was arrested on June 6, charged with attempted murder, aggravated assault and weapons possession. Besides the man he shot, a woman in another car was injured in the multivehicle crash that followed.

His attorney Ross Gigliotti said a psychiatric examination showed the cop suffers from post-traumatic stress disorder, depression and an alcohol-abuse issue. He asked that his client be released with monitoring so he could get the treatment he needs, but Joyce denied the request.

"My client stands behind his plea of not guilty," Gigliotti told the Daily News Wednesday. "We felt there were significant psychiatric issues he's been experiencing for some time and substance abuse issues that should be handled at a treatment facility.

"I thought that was a good set of restrictive conditions, but the judge didn't agree," said Gigliotti, who said Tran is "frightened."

"He's very frightened for a lot of reasons," he said.

Gallagher said if Tran is released he would be "a grave risk to the community."

Tran, his hands shackled, said nothing at the hearing. More than a dozen of Tran's family and friends watched from the gallery. One woman cried when Tran was ordered back to jail.

Girl, 16, killed, 8-yr.-old sister critically hurt in last-day hit-run

BY KERRY BURKE AND ELIZABETH KEOGH
NEW YORK DAILY NEWS

A 16-year-old girl was killed and her 8-year-old sister was critically injured in a hit-and-run outside a Queens school on Wednesday – the last day of the school year – police said.

The girls were in the crosswalk outside Intermediate School 125 Thom J. McCann on 47th Ave. near 46th St. in Sunnyside around 3:25 p.m. as the driver of a white Ford truck headed west on the avenue, according to cops.

As the driver made a left turn onto 46th St., he slammed into them and ran over the 16-year-old, police and sources said.

The teen's younger sister suffered head and leg trauma and was rushed to New York-Presbyterian Hospital Weill Cornell in critical condition, according to NYPD Chief of Transportation Philip Rivera.

There was no crossing guard on duty as students were released at 1 p.m. for the last day of school before summer break, the chief said.

As new graduates filed out of the middle school, the teen lay dying in the street with her mother by her side, according to a 15-year-old student who had just received his diploma.

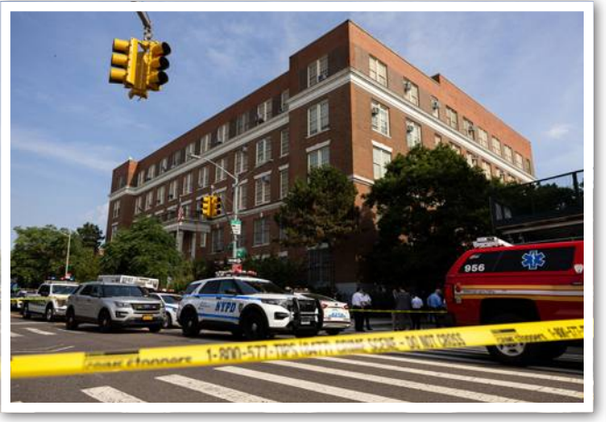

"When I came out, she was on the ground," Justin Castillo told the Daily News. "She was still alive but she looked like she lost a part of herself."

The teen, whose name was not immediately released, died in the street after suffering severe body trauma.

"Her mother was trying to be strong, but she was about to lose her mind," said Castillo. "It was terrible."

Police later recovered the truck about a block from the intersection and took the driver into custody, according to Rivera.

Charges against him were not immediately filed, and police are investigating the possibility that sun glare impaired his ability to see the kids, police sources said.

Cops (also top) investigate at Intermediate School 125 after two girls were hit on 47th Ave. near 46th St. in Sunnyside Wednesday afternoon.

N.J. mom held in drowning of her 2 daughters

BY JESSICA SCHLADEBECK
NEW YORK DAILY NEWS

A Lakewood, N.J., mother has been arrested for the killings of her two young daughters, both of whom were allegedly drowned in the bathtub of her Ocean County home, officials announced Wednesday.

Naomi Elkins, 27, was taken into custody Tuesday night and charged with two counts of murder, possession of a weapon for an unlawful purpose and unlawful possession of a weapon, according to a press release from Ocean County Prosecutor Bradley Billhimer.

Police were called to Elkins' home in Lakewood, along Shenandoah Drive, late Tuesday afternoon to investigate reports of two children suffering cardiac arrest.

When officers arrived around 4:50 p.m., first responders from Hatzolah Medical Services were already working to resuscitate two unresponsive little girls, ages 1 and 3. Despite their efforts, both children were pronounced dead at the scene a short time later, according to the release.

An investigation "revealed that both victims were Elkins' children," Billhimer said.

Authorities concluded the girls were drowned, and that the 1-year-old had also been stabbed.

"Continuing investigation revealed that Elkins was responsible for the deaths of both of her children," the prosecutor added.

Billhimer did not provide further details, but a source told NBC Philadelphia that Elkins drowned her daughters in the bathtub.

Elkins (r.) was taken into custody without incident and remains behind bars at the Ocean County Jail. She appeared virtually before a judge Wednesday afternoon.

A detention hearing is scheduled for Monday, and an investigation into the matter is ongoing.

'Common' to shoot cops in Venezuela

Gangbanger migrant says group also slips guns into shelters: DA

Bernardo Raul Castro Mata, who told prosecutors he's a member of notorious Venezuelan gang Tren de Aragua, is arraigned in Queens court Wednesday in the June 3 shootings of NYPD Officers Richard Yarusso and Christopher Abreu (below, with Yarusso pushing Abreu in wheelchair).

SHAWN INGLIMA, LUIZ C. RIBEIRO FOR NYDN

BY SHEETAL BANCHARIYA AND THOMAS TRACY
NEW YORK DAILY NEWS

A migrant accused of shooting and wounding two NYPD cops in Queens told authorities firing at police was "common practice" back home in Venezuela – although he claimed he didn't mean to open fire, prosecutors said Wednesday.

Bernardo Raul Castro Mata, who prosecutors say shot the officers after being caught zipping the wrong way down a one-way Queens street on a scooter back on June 3, admitted to authorities he is a member of the violent Venezuelan gang Tren de Aragua.

While he said it wasn't a big deal for gang members and police in his native country to swap shots, he claims his gun just "went off" when Officers Richard Yarusso and Christopher Abreu tried to stop him on 82nd St. near 23rd Ave. in East Elmhurst, prosecutors said.

"My friend Jose might have given me a bag with a gun in it and asked me to keep it for him," the 20-year-old Castro Mata, a deliveryman for Door Dash, told investigators. "I knew there was a gun in the bag. When the cops stopped me, I ran because I was scared. I stopped and took out the gun to show the officer, and the round went off."

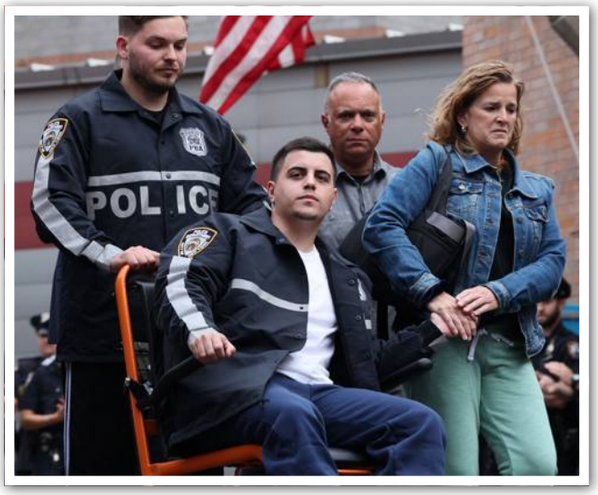

"I did not pull the trigger," he added. "The gun was ready when my friend gave it to me. The gun went off once."

Castro Mata's claims were recounted in Queens Criminal Court on Wednesday, where he was arraigned on a 20-count indictment of attempted murder and other charges. If found guilty, he could spend the next 80 years in prison.

Judge Kenneth Holder ordered Castro Mata held without bail at the close of the proceeding. More than 100 cops sat in the gallery as the charges were read, all glaring at Castro Mata, who sat quietly in a wheelchair.

When cops approached Castro Mata, the migrant pulled the gun from a cross-body bag and shot one cop in the stomach and the other in the upper right thigh, Queens Assistant District Attorney Lauren Reilly said.

The officers fired back, striking Castro Mata in the ankle. He dropped the gun only after he had been wounded, Reilly said.

When he was being questioned at the hospital, Castro Mata said he had come to the United States through Eagle Pass, Texas. He lived in a shelter in Queens as Tren de Aragua recruited him to do robberies, he said.

"It's common practice for Tren de Aragua gang members to shoot at police because Venezuelan police officers shoot at gang members for minor infractions," Castro Mata told NYPD investigators, according to prosecutors. "Venezuelan police officers get shot often in my home country because criminals feel there is a chance of getting away."

Gang members get tattoos of the number 23 and sports stars to show their "loyalty to the gang," he said. Tren de Aragua is the largest criminal organization in Venezuela, with more than 5,000 members. Members have been linked to human trafficking, extortion, drug crimes and murder.

"Tren de Aragua members smuggle firearms into city shelters inside food delivery packages," Castro Mata told authorities. "That way they don't have to go through the metal detector."

Officers Yarusso and Abreu were investigating a robbery pattern involving crooks on mopeds and scooters when they spotted Castro Mata, prosecutors said.

"These police officers were just doing a traffic stop," Queens District Attorney Melinda Katz said at the courthouse Wednesday. "[Castro Mata] was driving up the wrong way on a one-way street. He did not have a helmet. It is one of the dangers of unregistered scooters – if they had not caught him, there would be no way to find him."

"An attempt on the lives of two police officers simply making a traffic stop should offend every New Yorker," Katz added.

Speaking outside court, Police Benevolent Association President Patrick Hendry called Castro Mata "a dangerous individual [who] wasn't afraid to shoot at New York City police officers because he thought he was going to get away with it."

"Not in this country," Hendry added. "We need anyone who attacks a police officer prosecuted to the fullest extent, and then they need to be deported."

Colorado GOPer Boebert cites 'morals' in win

BY BRIAN NIEMIETZ
NEW YORK DAILY NEWS

Colorado Rep. Lauren Boebert credited God and her strong "Christian morals" for her primary victory in the state's 4th District on Tuesday.

"Glory to God!" she shouted at the start of her acceptance speech in Windsor, Colo. "Glory to God!"

Boebert (photo) announced in late December she'd be leaving Colorado's 3rd District, which she served since 2021, to compete for "the trust of grassroots conservative voters in the 4th District."

Among the many obstacles the MAGA firebrand faced while running in a new district was a minor but humiliating sex scandal that played out in a Denver theater during a live performance of "Beetlejuice."

Audience members complained the recently separated, 37-year-old grandmother was vaping and engaging in heavy petting with her date during the show, which Boebert denied before security video proved she was lying.

Boebert's campaign also saw the bombastic lawmaker deal with serious domestic issues including public spats with the ex-husband she divorced in October and the February arrest of her 18-year-old son, who faces a handful of felony charges in connection to a "string of vehicle trespass and property thefts."

But on Tuesday night, Boebert urged her supporters to be "happy joyful warriors" as she now campaigns against Democrat Trisha Calvarese, who won her party's primary for the 4th Congressional District.

"God has given us a weapon and that weapon is what gives us our strength – that weapon is called joy," Boebert said. "And that joy is not a suggestion, it is a battle plan, it is our strategy to victory."

Boebert's 29-point landslide win over former state Sen. Jerry Sonnenberg followed a watch party where she spoke about "conservative values" and "Christian morals," according to Colorado Public Radio.

She's endorsed by Republican presidential candidate and former New Yorker Donald Trump. A New York City jury found the Queens native guilty on 34 felony counts of falsifying business records to cover up a hush money payment to porn star Stormy Daniels.

LOOKING TO SCORE

Big questions loom as Biden and Trump gear up

BY DAVE GOLDINER
NEW YORK DAILY NEWS

President Biden and former President Donald Trump will clash Thursday night in their crucial first presidential debate of the 2024 election, a potentially defining early moment in their White House rematch.

At a time of year when reruns should be ruling the airwaves, the televised CNN debate is likely to attract the biggest single audience of the entire campaign up to Election Day in November.

The debate comes as the two men are locked in a neck-and-neck race for the presidency, with polls showing a virtually deadlocked contest and voters saying they wish both parties would have picked other candidates.

That dynamic raises the stakes even higher: If either man can make a breakthrough with even a relatively small group of voters, it could change the entire course of the race.

A disastrous slipup, on the other hand, would likely be magnified and live on in the electorate's imagination for months.

Here are some key things to know about the debate:

When and where is the debate?

The 90-minute debate will be held at CNN's studios in Atlanta, starting at 9 p.m. The moderators will be Jake Tapper and Dana Bash.

There will be no studio audience, eliminating the possibility of cheering or booing by supporters.

The candidates' microphones will be muted except when it's their turn to speak, potentially preventing Trump from continually interrupting Biden or the moderators like he did in 2020.

There will be two commercial breaks, but the candidates won't be permitted to confer with aides.

Why is the debate happening so early in the campaign?

Both campaigns believe their candidate benefits from debating as soon as possible.

Trump spent months saying Biden was too old to debate and predicted he would seek to avoid a face-to-face confrontation. The former president repeatedly vowed to debate anytime and anywhere.

Biden's team has long believed his poll numbers will improve when voters start to focus on the race as a binary choice between the incumbent and Trump, instead of a referendum on his handling of issues like the economy or immigration.

So when CNN proposed the summer debate, both sides quickly agreed in a matter of hours. Trump surprised some observers by agreeing to the conditions demanded by Biden, especially the muted microphones and no audience.

Both campaigns also want to reach voters early because tens of millions of voters will start casting mail-in votes soon after Labor Day, earlier than ever before.

What Biden wants to achieve

Biden hopes to remind America why they elected him four years ago, and why they voted against Trump.

Saddled with widespread concerns about his age, Biden's first goal is to show voters that he is capable of running the country for four more years after months of attacks from Republicans that he is senile or worse.

He also needs to aggressively defend his record on issues like the economy and immigration, topics that many voters give him poor marks for.

Biden also wants to use the debate to draw an unflattering contrast with Trump, whom many

EARLY POINTS

to clash in 1st presidential debate

President Biden and former President Donald Trump (opposite page) will debate at 9 p.m. in CNN's Atlanta studios.

voters now view more favorably than they did when he left office.

He will surely try to exploit Trump's mercurial personality by baiting him into damaging statements, perhaps about his support for the Jan. 6 attack on the Capitol, or his New York felony conviction and ongoing criminal trials.

How Trump could win

Trump first and foremost wants to appear more vigorous and dynamic than Biden.

The former president regularly brags to his crowds of loyal supporters of his mental sharpness, which he compares with Biden's supposed decline, and he will want to showcase that perceived edge.

Trump will also hope to mock Biden's ability to handle key problems faced by the nation, like immigration and inflation.

He could shock the world by delivering an even and controlled message that America needs a change after four years of Biden.

What could go wrong?

For Biden, a senior moment could dramatize his age in the worst possible way. It might harden the popular image of him as far past his shelf life for the White House.

Trump might lose his temper or lash out at Biden in an unpredictable way. A volcanic outburst would remind millions why they voted to remove him four years ago, and shouldn't be trusted with the nuclear codes.

Why the debate might not matter as much as you think

The earliest previous presidential debate took place in mid-September.

It's unknown whether this year's first debate will have the same outsized impact on public opinion, because it is taking place so early in the political season.

The political party conventions will take place in July and August, giving both sides a chance to reset their pitches to voters.

Unless there is some kind of dramatic defining event, the debate might fade in voters' minds by November.

Will there be more debates?

A second debate is scheduled to be hosted by ABC on Sept. 10. Trump has demanded more face-to-face jousts but Biden hasn't agreed.

There is expected to be a debate between Vice President Kamala Harris and whomever Trump picks as his running mate, but the campaigns have not yet agreed on dates or details.

What about RFK Jr.?

The vaccine-skeptical independent candidate didn't win enough support in polls to qualify and has not qualified for the ballot in states comprising a majority of Electoral College votes.

Moderate Democrats take victory lap after Latimer beats Bowman

BY DAVE GOLDINER
NEW YORK DAILY NEWS

Moderate Democrats were taking a victory lap Wednesday after ousting progressive Rep. Jamaal Bowman and plotting more efforts to move the party toward the middle in a bid to retake Congress and reelect President Biden in the fall general election.

With George Latimer (photo) celebrating a solid win over Bowman in the Westchester County-based 16th Congressional District, moderates boast their wins will position the Democratic Party closer to the political center as they try to win over swing voters, especially in the suburbs.

"This is a victory for mainstream Democratic values, the values of the broad Democratic coalition that has been so critical for our nation," Latimer said Wednesday. "Real results-driven governance is how we will win the House, make Hakeem Jeffries Majority Leader and reelect President Biden."

John Avlon, a former CNN anchor, also credits his moderate message with helping him win a 2-1-landslide Democratic primary win over a more progressive rival on Long Island.

He says it will help him battle Rep. Nick LaLota in an East End swing district, one of five GOP-held districts in New York that Biden won in 2020.

"In the math of politics, the vital center is the best place to be … especially in a swing district like mine," Avlon told the Daily News. "I'm a common sense Democrat and to me, that's the sweet spot between the head and the heart."

Latimer won by an impressive 58%-42% margin over Bowman overall in the district and romped to a landslide 26% win in the suburban Westchester County portion of the district.

Bowman, 48, a charismatic former Bronx middle school principal, became the first incumbent member of Congress to lose a primary this year. He fell to defeat despite racking up an impressive 86%-14% margin in the sliver of the Bronx that remained in the district after a controversial redistricting effort.

Latimer's big win amounts to a political earthquake in Democratic circles with moderates claiming the upper hand over progressives in New York and beyond.

To moderates and pro-Israel Democrats, that's a road map for uniting the party to win swing seats in suburbs and swing districts across the state.

"Replacing more extreme candidates with mainstream people … improves the party's image and will help Democrats from top to bottom of the ticket," said Mark Mellman of the Democratic Majority for Israel. "We are a bigger tent and we need to tell voters that."

Not all Democrats agree.

Progressives like the Working Families Party and Justice Democrats say pro-Israel groups, including some bankrolled by right-wing Republicans, effectively engineered Bowman's defeat to punish him for his outspoken criticism of Israel's war in Gaza.

The American Israel Public Affairs Committee alone pumped more than $15 million into ousting Bowman, they note.

Supporters of Israel counter that they have every right to express their views and put their money where they please. They say claims of "foreign meddling" are antisemitic tropes.

The stakes could hardly be higher. Republicans hold a slim six-vote majority in the House, meaning Democrats need to flip just four seats to likely win back the chamber.

Democrats have targeted five blue-leaning seats in New York, including those held by Rep. Mike Lawler and Rep. Anthony D'Esposito, along with one in suburban New Jersey. There are several similar districts in deep-blue California.

If Democrats win, Rep. Hakeem Jeffries would almost certainly become House Speaker.

Pundits who don't have a dog in the race say managing the tensions between moderates and progressives will be a crucial and tricky task for party leaders and stakeholders as the fall campaign looms.

"Democratic moderates emphasize two things: party unity amid Republican chaos, and policy cohesion despite glaring differences on some of the most pressing issues," said Basil Smikle, a Democratic strategist and Columbia University professor. "The hope is that this strategy … may be just enough to beat Trump and take back the House."

Sis rips man held in 2021 Queens hit-run death

BY ELLEN MOYNIHAN AND ROCCO PARASCANDOLA
NEW YORK DAILY NEWS

A hit-and-run driver who fatally struck a pedestrian crossing a notoriously dangerous six-lane Queens street nearly three years ago has been busted, police said Wednesday.

Andre Dweyer, 34, indicted for leaving the scene of a fatal accident and failure to exercise due care, surrendered to police on Tuesday, police said.

Dweyer was driving a 2014 Infiniti when he allegedly struck Dimitry Maneiro, 38, who was crossing Rockaway Blvd. at Brookville Blvd. near Kennedy Airport at 1 a.m. on Sept. 27, 2021.

"Dimitry would give you the food out his mouth, the shirt off his back," his sister Trisha Maneiro, 39, told the Daily News Wednesday. "I don't think I know anybody whose heart is bigger than his. He always put others before himself."

Dimitry Maneiro, who was living at a nearby hotel, died at the scene.

Dweyer, who lives in Jamaica, has no previous arrests, police said. He was arraigned in Queens Supreme Criminal Court Tuesday and released on $100,000 bond. He's due back in court next month.

"It's unfair," the victim's sister said of Dweyer making bail. "You was on the run for three years – so when you do turn yourself in and get caught you have enough money to get yourself out and get yourself a lawyer."

"I'm happy that he turned himself in, but he's still home and he's still free," she added.

Meanwhile she has been suffering for the past three years.

"It's been hard," she said. "I went into a deep depression. My business failed because I wasn't mentally there, I stuck myself in a financial hole because I was depressed and I'm just coming out of that," she said.

Her brother was on the autism spectrum, but despite his difficulties he was a caring person who loved kids, especially his niece.

"He played sports, he loved music, he loved exploring. He would just get on the train, the bus, and go from every borough exploring," Trisha Maneiro said. "He just liked his own space and [to] go off and do his own thing. He would call me and let me know he was OK."

The still-grieving sister said she was grateful to the NYPD detective who never forgot her brother and spoke to her about the case over the years. Though cops had Dweyer's car in custody and knew who he was, it still took time to solidify the evidence, the sister was told.

"He had lied and said that someone had stolen his car," Trisha Maneiro said. "They knew it was him."

"[The detective] explained that when they do arrest him they want to have enough evidence to keep him," she added.

"It's not OK to do a hit-and-run and not call for help, even if you're scared, even if you're in shock. It's not OK to take another life, take a mother's child, take a brother and uncle and go on with your life."

"How are you a human and you killed someone and didn't turn yourself in?" she added. "You didn't call an ambulance, you didn't call 911, you just left my brother there. To wake up and go to sleep every morning and every night for three years knowing that you killed an innocent person and not care is inhumane."

Trisha Maneiro said she didn't wish to see Dweyer come to any physical harm but does "wish that his conscience eats his soul while sitting in jail," she said.

The intersection has been the scene of numerous crashes including several fatal wrecks in recent years.

Almost exactly a year before, on September 26, 2020, 32-year-old passenger Jolenna Favor was killed when driver Nicholas Thompson, speeding and drunk, crashed through a fence at 97 mph, according to cops.

"She was just a real beautiful soul," Favor's older sister, Jovanna Young, told the Daily News after her death. "She didn't deserve that."

In June 2020, a 36-year-old pedestrian was killed, with the driver remaining at the scene.

Less than a year earlier in October 2019 a 65-year-old homeless man, Olig Korablev, was on his way to get on a bus to work when he was fatally struck by a hit-and-run driver. The suspect was arrested hours later.

And in September 2014, a 24-year-old man was fatally struck as he and three pals loaded a motorcycle onto the back of their truck.

Terror scheme feared after 8 men are busted

BY THERESA BRAINE
NEW YORK DAILY NEWS

Eight men from Tajikistan who were arrested this month over alleged ties to ISIS had reportedly sparked suspicion they were plotting a potential attack on U.S. soil, according to sources with knowledge of the investigation.

While there was no evidence confirming a specific terrorist attack had been planned, the chatter was troubling, CBS News reported Wednesday, citing sources who spoke on condition of anonymity.

As of Wednesday, the men were still in the custody of U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE), facing removal proceedings.

They were arrested over the course of multiple days on immigration charges and have not been charged with terrorism-related offenses, according to The New York Times.

When they originally crossed into the U.S. over the southwest border in 2023 and 2024, nothing connected them to the Islamic State terrorist group, officials said. After ICE arrested them for entering the country without legal documents, they were released and given a hearing date.

But when intelligence information came through of possible ISIS ties, an FBI Joint Terrorism Task Force began investigating. By then, the men were residing in New York, Philadelphia, Los Angeles and other major U.S. cities.

After months of surveillance, they were taken in as part of a joint operation between ICE and the task force.

"The individuals arrested are detained in ICE custody pending removal proceedings," the FBI said in a email statement to the Daily News. "As the FBI and [the Department of Homeland Security] have recently described in public and partner bulletins, the U.S. has been in a heightened threat environment."

Just days before, FBI Director Christopher Wray said the bureau had "disrupted multiple terrorist attacks in cities and communities around the country" during his tenure and that the "heightened risk of violence" in the U.S. before Hamas' Oct. 7 attack on Israel had only increased in the ensuing months.

"Since then, we've seen a rogues' gallery of foreign terrorist organizations call for attacks against Americans and our allies," Wray said during a congressional appropriations hearing.

He added that this has raised concern on a number of fronts, from small groups or individuals carrying out attacks on their own, to "the potential for a coordinated attack here in the homeland, akin to the ISIS-K attack we saw at the Russia concert hall in March."

At long last, new chapter for Inwood library

BY TÉA KVETENADZE
NEW YORK DAILY NEWS

The revamped Inwood public library, along with new affordable housing in the same building, had its long-awaited debut Wednesday after being closed for more than three years – a rare moment of celebration for the New York Public Library, which is currently battling deep cuts as part of Mayor Adams' pending budget deal.

The branch reopened at 4790 Broadway in upper Manhattan in a new 14-story building – dubbed "The Eliza" after the wife of Alexander Hamilton – with 174 units of affordable housing. The library occupies the bottom two floors and had a soft opening last week. It features community rooms, a children's area, a STEM center, a skylight and a universal pre-K set to open in the fall.

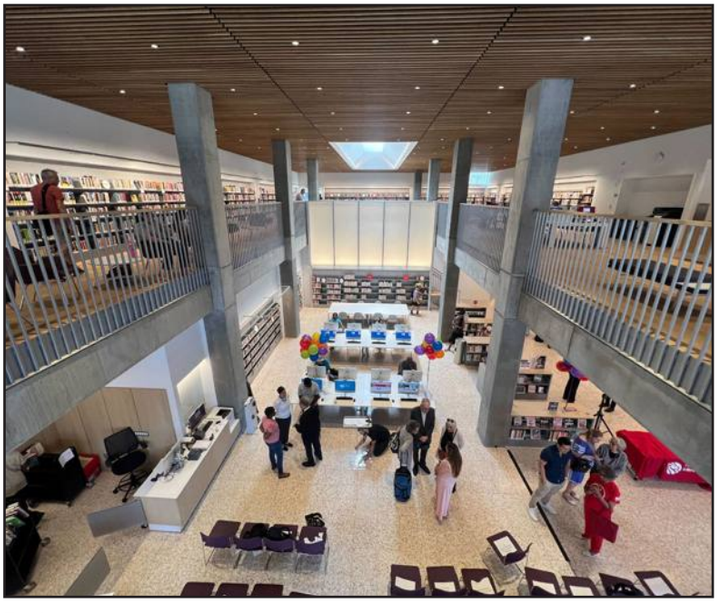

"This innovative public-private partnership demonstrates the power of city government, philanthropy, and community partners working together," said New York Public Library President Anthony Marx. "The end result is not just a state-of-the-art library for Inwood, but also desperately needed affordable housing and community space."

The new library replaces the stand-alone one that was on the same spot until it was demolished in 2021 as part of the controversial neighborhoodwide Inwood rezoning, which received significant community pushback when it passed in 2018. Residents had access to a temporary library across the street while awaiting the opening of the new site.

Apartments in The Eliza range from one to three bedrooms, with approximately 15% of units set aside for the formerly homeless. Rents go from about $397 to $1,066 for a studio and $683 to $1,841 for a three-bedroom. More than 80,000 households applied for the 174 spots through the NYC Housing Connect lottery, echoing the affordable housing shortage throughout New York.

The city has been turning to hybrid public library-affordable housing redevelopments to address the shortage, given the opportunity to build on land that's already publicly owned. The first of its kind was opened in Sunset Park, Brooklyn, in November and another is in the works for the Bronx's Grand Concourse branch.

Stephanie Herrera, 28, was one of many locals who flocked to the reopened space. The Inwood native said she is looking forward to bringing her 9-month-old daughter to the new branch. "It's really exciting to have somewhere else to take her," Herrera said. "It's a great space, and we need more spaces like this here."

The Inwood public library and new accompanying affordable housing had its long-awaited debut on Wednesday, after being closed for more than three years.

PARIS' ABUSE HORROR

Tells Congress she suffered at youth-treatment centers, urges reform

BY JESSICA SCHLADEBECK
NEW YORK DAILY NEWS

GETTY

Paris Hilton called for the modernization of child welfare programs in testimony before Congress on Wednesday, citing the horrors she herself faced while she was institutionalized as a teenager.

"When I was 16 years old, I was ripped from my bed in the middle of the night and transported across state lines to the first of four youth residential treatment facilities," she told the House Ways and Means Committee.

"These programs promised growth, healing and support, but instead did not allow me to move freely, or even look out a window for two years," the socialite and activist continued. "I was force-fed medication and sexually abused by the staff. I was violently restrained and dragged down hallways, stripped naked and thrown into solitary confinement."

Hilton (at mic above) went on to describe such treatment facilities as a $23 billion industry – which has spawned so-called therapeutic boarding schools, military-style boot camps, juvenile justice facilities and behavior-modification programs – that views troubled teens and children "as dollar signs and operates without meaningful oversight."

Hilton added that her own experience was "isolating and traumatic," especially given that her parents – Rick Hilton, co-founder of real estate agency Hilton & Hyland, and "Real Housewives of Beverly Hills" star Kathy Hilton – were "completely deceived, lied to and manipulated by this for-profit industry about the inhumane treatment I was experiencing."

The hotel heiress initially opened up about her trauma in the 2020 documentary, "This Is Paris," and then in an op-ed published by USA Today in 2022, in which she specifically referenced the Provo Canyon School in Utah. She said she faced verbal, emotional and physical abuse during her 11 months at the boarding school for troubled teens.

Similar programs have been the focus of recent Netflix documentaries, including "Hell Camp: Teen Nightmare" and "The Program."

A cause of death was revealed this week for a 12-year-old New York boy who died in February from asphyxia while trapped in a bivouac at a North Carolina wilderness camp for kids with emotional or behavioral difficulties.

Hilton ended her testimony by directly addressing those who now suffer in similar programs.

"If you are a child in the system, hear my words: I see you, I believe you, I know what you're going through, and I won't give up on you," she said. "You are important and your future is important and you deserve every opportunity to be safe and supported."

"Congress, please join me in creating a world where all children have a right to family love, education and the support they need," she concluded.

Plea nix in July 4 slays

Man held in Illinois parade shootings rejects life-term deal, faces trial

BY DAVID MATTHEWS
NEW YORK DAILY NEWS

The Illinois man accused of killing seven and wounding dozens of others in a mass shooting at a Fourth of July parade in 2022 rejected a plea deal during a hearing Wednesday.

The deal, which lawyers said he was expected to accept, would have put 23-year-old Robert Crimo III behind bars for the rest of his life on seven counts of murder and 48 counts of aggravated battery, Lake County Assistant State's Attorney Ben Dillon said.

The sentence would have called for no possibility of parole and a concurrent 30-year sentence for each aggravated battery charge. Illinois does not have the death penalty.

However, during Wednesday's hearing, Crimo did not respond when asked if he agreed to the plea as described by prosecutors, according to the Chicago Tribune. After a short recess, he returned to the courtroom and replied "no" when asked again if he agreed.

Crimo, who had been sitting in a wheelchair, was rolled out of the courtroom and proceedings ended.

Accused Highland Park shooter Robert Crimo III appears Wednesday in Waukegan, Ill., court where he refused to accept plea deal, setting stage for a February trial in the 2022 attack that left seven people dead (memorial to victims, top). AP; GETTY

The case remains set for a February trial. If convicted, Crimo would face an automatic sentence of life in prison without parole.

Less than a week ago, the Lake County state's attorney's office announced that Crimo was expected to change his plea from not guilty at Wednesday's hearing.

Family members of the victims were set to give statements before the sentencing, which would have occurred eight days ahead of the two-year anniversary of the massacre.

"We have worked closely with the victims over the last few days and weeks in anticipation of today. We will continue to support them," Lake County State's Attorney Eric Rinehart said in a statement following the hearing. "The entire trial team and group of victim support specialists met with victims and survivors for as long as they wanted today, and we will be ready for trial."

Crimo was charged with 117 felony counts related to the Highland Park mass shooting, during which he allegedly climbed onto the roof of a building overlooking the parade and opened fire with a high-powered rifle on the crowd gathered below.

According to investigators, he escaped in the ensuing chaos while wearing women's clothing and briefly hid out in Wisconsin – and contemplated a second shooting in Madison – before returning to Illinois and being arrested in North Chicago after a pursuit. He's been behind bars ever since.

Robert Crimo Jr., the accused's father, co-sponsored his son's gun license application despite various red flags. He pleaded guilty in November to seven misdemeanor counts of reckless conduct. He was sentenced to 60 days in jail but was released early for good behavior.

Highland Park, an upscale suburban community about 27 miles north of downtown Chicago, plans to resume its Fourth of July parade next week after skipping the event last year.

5 staffers at juvie lockup are charged in smuggling

BY LEONARD GREENE
NEW YORK DAILY NEWS

Five youth development specialists at a Brooklyn juvenile detention center were charged Wednesday with smuggling weapons, drugs and other contraband in exchange for bribes, officials said.

By sneaking in and distributing the dangerous contraband into the Crossroads Juvenile Center (photo) in Brownsville, the city employees violated their sworn duty and destabilized the detention center while putting at risk the lives of youth and other adult staff members.

"These so-called 'youth development specialists' violated their duty to the city and the residents at Crossroads by smuggling in weapons, drugs and other contraband in exchange for bribes, placing young people and other staff members at an alarming risk of serious harm," said U.S. Attorney Breon Peace. "Today's arrests demonstrate that this office remains committed to rooting out corruption and cleaning up our city's jails and juvenile detention facilities."

Youth development specialists, who work for the city's Administration for Children's Services, operate in roles similar to those of a correction officer at a jail facility, officials said.

Prosecutors said the staffers raked in thousands of dollars in exchange for smuggling in razor blades, prescription pills, alcohol, marijuana and phone accessories.

Nearly 120 residents between the ages of 14 and 20 are housed at the detention center, and are prohibited from any access to drugs, weapons, alcohol, cigarettes and cellular phones, among other items.

ACS staffers are supposed to confiscate any contraband and must notify a supervisor if they find any banned items, officials said.

Employees are also required to be screened whenever they enter the facility. Even so, a significant amount of contraband has turned up among Crossroads residents, officials said.

That includes at least 75 cell phones, more than 340 scalpels or blades as well as narcotics and tobacco between March 2022 and May 2024.

One of the suspects, former ACS worker Octavia Napier, 26, even allowed a Crossroads resident to use her Cash App account to run his contraband distribution business from within the center in exchange for $2,000 in bribes,

Also arrested were Da'Vante Bolton, 31; Roger Francis, 58; Christopher Craig, 37, and Nigel King, 45. They were charged in Brooklyn Federal Court with conspiracy to commit travel act bribery.

If convicted, they each face a maximum sentence of five years in prison.

Bolton appeared to be the biggest moneymaker of the group. Officials said he accepted more than $20,000 from Crossroads residents or their associates, and smuggled in razor blades and marijuana in exchange for those bribes.

Don't bake false claims into your labels, FDA warns top bread & cake manufacturer

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

AP

Federal food safety regulators said Tuesday that they have warned a top U.S. bakery to stop using labels that say its products contain potentially dangerous allergens when they don't.

U.S. Food and Drug Administration inspectors found that Bimbo Bakeries USA – which includes brands such as Sara Lee, Oroweat, Entenmann's, Thomas' and Ball Park buns and rolls – listed ingredients such as sesame or tree nuts on labels even when they weren't in the foods.

Under FDA regulations, such products are "misbranded," FDA officials said in a warning letter sent to officials at the company's Horsham, Pa., headquarters this month.

"Food labels must be truthful and not misleading," officials said. The warning followed inspections late last year at Bimbo plants in Phoenix and Topeka, Kan., that make Sara Lee and Brownberry breads.

In addition, FDA officials indicated that allergen labeling is a "not a substitute" for preventing cross-contamination in factories.

Advocates with the nonprofit group Food Allergy Research & Education said such labeling "does a disservice" to the estimated 33 million people in the U.S. with food allergies. Those consumers have to be constantly aware of foods that can cause potentially life-threatening allergic reactions, said Sung Poblete, the group's chief executive.

"Our community relies on accurate product labeling for their health and safety," Poblete said in an email. "These findings about Bimbo Bakeries' products undermine their trust and further limit their choices."

Bimbo, a Mexico City-based food giant, bills its U.S. operations as the largest commercial baking company in the country. In an email, company officials said they "take their role in protecting consumers with allergen sensitivities very seriously" and that they are corresponding with the FDA to resolve the issue.

Concerns over labels at Bimbo and other companies followed a law that took effect in 2022, which added sesame to the list of major allergens that must be listed on packaging.

Because it can be difficult and expensive to keep sesame in one part of a baking plant out of another, some companies began adding small amounts of sesame to products that didn't previously contain the ingredient to avoid liability and cost. FDA officials said that violated the spirit, but not the letter, of federal regulations.

Some companies, including Bimbo, began listing allergens such as sesame on labels as a "precaution" in case of cross-contamination.

FDA officials acknowledged Tuesday that statements that a product "may contain" certain allergens "could be considered truthful and not misleading." Bimbo officials have until July 8 to identify steps taken to remedy the issue – or to explain why the labeling doesn't violate FDA standards.

NYC HIDDEN DINING GEMS

Fine-dining delights in an unexpected venue, Noksu in the 34th St.-Herald Square station. KAITLYN ROSATI FOR NYDN

UNDERGROUND GOURMET

You can be one at Noksu in 34th St.-Herald Square subway station

BY KAITLYN ROSATI
NEW YORK DAILY NEWS

When I heard there was a fine-dining restaurant in the 34th St.-Herald Square subway station, part of me was excited about the concept, but I have to admit that I was skeptical of Noksu, too.

I briefly lived in Tokyo, where I found solace in restaurants in subway stations. Though I briefly wondered why New York hadn't adapted a similar concept, a laundry list of reasons why not immediately followed. Tokyo subway stations are a bit cleaner than New York's, to understate things. And, speaking in generalities, Japanese commuters tend to be more orderly than New Yorkers, so Tokyo's subway stations generally feel safe and calm, whereas here ... well, need I say more?

Aside from being in a New York City subway station, Noksu chose the old barbershop space at the 34th St.-Herald Square station, adding slight insult to injury. My experience at Noksu, however, turned out to be a friendly reminder that jumping to conclusions too soon can lead you to deny yourself something great.

Getting a reservation at Noksu is slightly challenging, so when I saw one up for grabs, I snagged it. Fine dining isn't typically my jam, but the reservation happened to fall on a night I was celebrating, so I concluded the universe was telling me to treat myself. Twist my arm, universe.

My friend and I walked down the 32nd St. stairs and immediately saw a black door with simple gold letters reading: Noksu. A code is required to enter, which diners receive in a text the day of their reservation. Though it adds to the Hidden Dining Gems experience, it's also for security. Call it a gimmick or not, but it absolutely adds to the exclusive experience.

On the other side of the door is a full-service restaurant that feels like a secret, chic club – the polar opposite of the rat race in the subway station (no pun intended). If you don't gasp a little or at the very least smile upon going from the station to Noksu, you might be dead inside.

Noksu is run by Chef Dae Kim, a 29-year old Korean native who moved to Chicago when he was 14, and got his first job in the kitchen at 17 as a dishwater at Ria in Chicago's Waldorf Astoria Hotel. There, he eventually worked his way up to line cook, before graduating to work for Chef Thomas Keller at Per Se.

From there, he moved on to Silver Apricot before finally opening Noksu in October 2023.

Chef Kim's tenacity and precision shows in every meticulous plate at Noksu. The bar was set high with my first bite of the night, which was brown crab. Not only was the presentation almost too delicate for someone as clumsy as me, but the crab was so buttery it hardly required chewing.

With a total of 11 courses, naturally, some dishes weren't as memorable as others. As someone who doesn't frequently attend tasting menu-styled dining, I wanted to preserve the memory of each dish to ensure I got the most out of my time there. Instead, I chose to relax. I recommend experiencing Noksu the way I did: enjoying the ride, savoring every dish without reservation and letting Chef Kim guide the journey from course one to 11.

For me, that paid off, especially with the broken rice course. It was so creamy, I was convinced it was inspired by Italian risotto, but was promptly corrected that it is more like congee, or Chinese rice porridge. It's covered in a veil made with Parmesan and potato that makes it resemble a black truffle.

A dish I was particularly excited to try was the squab, one of the few nonseafood dishes on the menu. The meat is glazed, dry aged, smoked, then basted with hot oil and fried. All parts of the squab are served, including the gizzard and head, which you're encouraged to consume. The meat itself is rich, almost like duck, but gamier. If you've ever walked through Chinatown, the presentation of this dish is clearly inspired by the hanging ducks of Canal St., and the glistening glaze is unmistakably akin to that of a Peking duck.

While the pretty plates and delicate fish made me a fan of Noksu, the squab is what made me understand Noksu. It's immigrant food meets New York sophistication ... all behind a closed subway station door.

Congestion pricing countdown

We can only hope that Gov. Hochul tried to delay congestion pricing in response to some political calculation instead of her ridiculous claim that it was because of complaints of diner patrons, but whatever the very bad reason, her illegal and reckless move is stabbing New York, and not just the millions of people who ride the subway and buses and commuter rail lines.

The coming pain was made formal Wednesday when the MTA Board voted to recognize the reality that the June 30 start of the tolling program for vehicles traveling south of 60th St. is off and with it the $3 million a day in cash revenue. That $3 million a day would generate a steady stream of $1 billion in new money every year. And then the MTA could sell bonds off the income, yielding $15 billion for the capital plan. At least that was the plan for the current capital plan.

But Hochul's rash decision means otherwise and transit officials laid out the wreckage of what's not to be: No bringing the Second Ave. subway up to 125th St; no elevators at 23 subway stations for people who can't use stairs; no new subway cars on the lines and on and on. For everyone who likes delays and breakdowns and lousy service, Hochul is delivering.

In total, goodbye to $16.5 billion in investment in the city's lifeblood. And for what? A chat in a diner with someone who doesn't pay a few bucks to bring a car into the most congested part of the most congested city in America?

There are no surprises in the list and the wholesale slashing is what state Comptroller Tom DiNapoli predicted in his report published a day before the MTA meeting. If the money's gone, there go the improvements.

Beyond the suffering of straphangers, even non-riders will be hurt because the MTA moves millions and those folks will be late to get to jobs and schools and other appointments. As for drivers, the terrible congestion will keep getting worse. Hochul didn't leave anyone out.

And even far from the five boroughs and its suburbs, there will be pain as the nonprofit group Reinvent Albany lays out in a new study. You see the factories that build the subways are upstate, so when those contracts get canceled, there goes the only customer and layoffs loom.

That $16.5 billion was not only to buy us better transit, but the money would be injected into the state's economy. That must have been some chat in the diner.

Shortly after the MTA voted, Hochul issued a statement that began: "Since the moment I was sworn in as governor, I have demonstrated unwavering support for the MTA," with a litany of her good works, including saving the agency from the post-COVID "fiscal cliff" shock of missing farebox income that had been cushioned by the feds but is ending.

She also attempted to put a cheery face on the capital cuts carnage that "there is no reason for New Yorkers to be concerned that any planned projects will not be delivered." Maybe she didn't see the MTA meeting as it wasn't being shown on the diner's TV.

Lawsuits are brewing against Hochul or the state Department of Transportation for refusing to sign a federal form certifying that congestion pricing is ready to proceed. So who will step up first to make Hochul carry out the law she is sworn to obey?

Debate night in America

Tonight's general election debate faceoff between President Biden and former President Donald Trump breaks with tradition in many ways. It is very early in the year. It is also not happening under the auspices of the Commission on Presidential Debates, which has run these events since 1988.

CNN is putting on the show, airing it on cable and free online. And thankfully, CNN is offering the program to anyone else who wants to broadcast it, as PBS is doing for those people who watch TV the old fashioned way without cable or internet. There is also no live audience.

Almost all of this is for the best. The general election is underway, so voters may as well have a chance to see Biden and Trump engage with one another, and hopefully with tough and intelligent questions from moderators Jake Tapper and Dana Bash.

Live studio audiences work fine as stage-dressing, but it adds no value when they applaud or react in any other way. They're mostly a burden to keep quiet, so good riddance to them.

Speaking of riddance, it's also a very good thing that a crank named after Sen. Robert F. Kennedy won't be present to take time and attention and scrutiny away from these two men, one of whom will win in November.

Polls show intense interest in the debate, which is healthy. This being a representative democracy, we can't dictate how viewers will react. But we have an obligation to share our five cents.

Trump will lie and lie, and then he will lie and lie some more. We hope Biden or the moderators set him straight, but they may not – so it's essential for those who watch to remember that the former president started abusing and then got divorced from the truth many years ago, and that's assuming they were ever in a relationship.

The candidates' microphones can be turned off if someone tries to egregiously break the ground rules of the debate, but the mute button is not there to squelch mistruths. That will be up to the listeners to hear and make their own best judgment.

It's impossible to guess everything that Trump will lie about, but there will be a lot.

Biden has his own issues, not so much with the truth, but frankly to find a way to dispel any idea that he is too old and feeble. He garbles some sentences and often comes off as stiff, while Trump is more charismatic, as his legions of fans prove.

He has to defend the last four years, some things that have gone well and some things that have left Americans disappointed. As an incumbent, the election is a referendum on his performance.

In a debate against Hillary Clinton eight years ago, Trump was asked if he would accept the results of the election. He did not lie. Indeed, he was very honest and gave no commitment to a long-standing American political tradition, astonishing the moderator and Clinton. He did accept the result when he won that year. But in 2020, he lost and falsely claimed it was rigged. Trump has already made it clear that if he doesn't win this time, the election was stolen.

We will find out tonight if there are such clarifying moments during the 90 minutes.

Bowman's ideology defeated Bowman

BE OUR GUEST

BY LLOYD GREEN

On Tuesday, Westchester Democrats sent two-term congressman Jamaal Bowman, a member of the so-called "Squad," to early retirement. George Latimer, the 70-year-old Westchester County executive, triumphed by nearly 20 points in a brutal primary contest. The takedown of Bowman marks a stinging rejection of left-wing politics and a reaffirmation of suburban centrism.

Since first taking office in January 2021, Bowman refused to internalize that his district was not a bastion of ideological extremism or a demographic monolith. His constituency includes Yonkers and a section of the Bronx, but also Winged Foot Golf Club, a frequent home of the U.S. Open.

On the job, Bowman kept shooting himself in the foot. He pulled a fire alarm in a congressional office building and attacked Israel for highlighting that on Oct. 7 Hamas had made rape a weapon of choice. He passionately displayed bad judgment.

Just days before the primary, Sen. Bernie Sanders, the socialist from Vermont, and Bronxite Rep. Alexandria Ocasio-Cortez, the leader of the Squad, rallied to his side. With everyone watching, Bowman directed an obscenity-laced rant against AIPAC, the American Israel Public Affairs Committee. In the end, even J Street, the progressive pro-Israel counter to AIPAC, had walked away from him.

For the record, Bowman also favors defunding the police and Medicare for All. He acts as if Sanders were president and Republican control of the House was unrelated to Democratic excess.

Along with AOC, Bowman was one of two New York Democrats to vote against the infrastructure bill. He also opposed raising the debt ceiling and the 2024 bipartisan budget deal. He offered Democrats plenty of reasons to sour on him, not just Israel.

Technically, Bowman will appear on the November ballot as a candidate of the Working Families Party. But the shouting is over. The most he can do is plot his return and struggle for continued relevancy. Whether there are any takers is debatable.

On Election Night, he appeared livid, unbowed and unrepentant. He referred to his opponents, plural, and claimed that the primary was about a "battle for humanity and justice." He added that he would continue to fight for the rest of his life.

Days before the polls closed, reports surfaced of a circular firing squad within his campaign. Blame-game anger is misdirected. The congressman's record and persona are the very reasons he lost. Whatever his staff got wrong was incidental to defeat.

It was Bowman who pleaded guilty to pulling the fire alarm and earlier, as a school principal, promoted 9/11 conspiracy theories. He suffers from a gravitas deficit.

Bowman rose to prominence against the backdrop of the murder of George Floyd and the outbreak of COVID-19 in 2020. He defeated Eliot Engel, 16-term congressman and chair of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, in a primary.

Unfortunately, he treated his win as a mandate to go off the rails. Instead of building bridges to the more moderate and affluent segments of the district, he elected to alienate them. In a four-way primary in 2022, Bowman scored little more than half the vote and underperformed in Westchester. The writing was on the wall, but he chose to ignore it.

His loss should serve as a reminder that even in a strongly Democratic district that went for Joe Biden by more than 50 points, the appeal of unvarnished left-wing politics remains limited. Voters commute to work; crime remains a concern.

Liberalism in Westchester is defined by support for Planned Parenthood and gun control. Heated rhetoric from a member of Congress scares people.

Meanwhile, Missouri's Aug. 8 primary may see a rerun of what happened in Westchester. In St. Louis, second-term Congresswoman Cori Bush, another Squad member, faces a primary challenge from Wesley Bell, a more moderate Democrat. The latest poll shows Bell surging, holding a one-point lead.

Like Bowman, she is plagued by self-inflicted woes. Bush is presently under investigation for misuse of campaign funds.

Looking forward, Israel and the Mideast will retain their potency as both news sagas – and wedge issues. Regional war remains a possibility as the Jewish state and Hezbollah continue to skirmish.

On July 24, Benjamin Netanyahu is set to speak to a joint session of Congress. The protests that are soundtracks to his latest, disastrous stint as Israel's prime minister will also continue as accompaniments to his visit to D.C.

Similar fractures will also appear at the Democrats' August convention. What lessons the Democrats learn from all this remains to be seen. Ghosts of Chicago 1968 will definitely hover.

Green, a lawyer, served as staff secretary to the Bush 1988 campaign's Middle East Policy Group and in the Justice Department.

BRAMHALL'S WORLD

Jews used their votes to be heard loud & clear

BE OUR GUEST

BY MAURY LITWACK

The results are in. George Latimer, who Tuesday unseated incumbent Jamaal Bowman in the Democratic primary, is now the overwhelming favorite to be the new congressman representing southern Westchester and the north Bronx.

This victory was made possible by the significant mobilization of Jewish voters across the district, particularly in Westchester. As a bellwether suburban county where Jewish voters make up roughly 9% of the electorate, Westchester offers a model for other key races across the country.

As of 4 p.m. on primary day, 50.6% of all Jewish voters turned out in the primary, compared to 18.05% of non-Jewish voters. It's no secret why: From conflict abroad to rising hate right in our backyard, to many other pressing issues affecting voters, the stakes of this contest could not be overstated.

Those who turned out in this pivotal contest have sent a clear message to politicians in Washington that their voices cannot be overlooked – and will not be ignored.

Our campaign, Westchester Unites, was proud to encourage voters in this district to make their voices heard. We didn't aim to elect a particular candidate; only to empower voters through sustained education and engagement efforts to maximize turnout among this crucial bloc.

This dynamic of an engaged Jewish electorate is playing out in other states and we have been proud to support these efforts. In April, we launched Pennsylvania Unites to get Jewish voters to cast their ballots in the presidential primary, which fell on the same day as Passover – one of the most important Jewish holidays.

We targeted 38,000-plus likely Jewish voters, deployed 155,000 pieces of mail, 43,000 text messages, and blanketed the counties with digital advertising. The results: 81% of Jewish voters returned their mail-in ballots by the deadline, compared to 77.5% from the broader population in the state.

We are also taking an aggressive approach in Nevada, a swing state that could determine the outcome of the presidential election. We are opening a voter center in Clark County, recruiting volunteers for grassroots outreach, and engaging Jewish voters through November.

One statistic stood out as we began our engagement in Westchester: In polling, 93% said this message made them more likely to vote: "Antisemitism reaches dangerous levels when elected officials seek to minimize it, normalize it, and perpetuate it. Not voting allows this to take root."

When we launched in January the initial focus was on educating voters about the upcoming primary and encouraging them to register as Democrats. With the primary winner likely to win the general election, we made the argument that their votes would carry more weight in the primary.

We opened up a center in New Rochelle to centralize our efforts and between Jan. 25 and Feb. 14, the state's deadline to change parties before the election, we were able to re-enroll more than 2,000 voters as Democrats. That's 15% of the targeted group of voters; our goal was 10%. It's also a significantly higher conversion rate than other re-enrollment campaigns around the country, which – on the high end – might see a 2% conversion rate.

Then, we pivoted to ensuring every targeted voter to cast their ballot, focusing on getting them to request mail-in ballots. By the end of May, we crunched the numbers and found that 38% of Westchester ballot requests came from Jewish voters, which are only 9% of the district. Jewish voters in the area requested ballots at a rate 4.9 times of non-Jewish voters.

As the race went into the final stretch, more than 25 synagogue communities mobilized their members to vote, with emphasis on getting Jews to vote at the first opportunity.

We flooded the area with more than 200 volunteers who knocked on doors, phone banked, tabled at community events, and marshaled personal networks. Just as we did in our early mail-in ballot push, we encouraged voters to make their voices heard early, driving voters to begin voting in-person on Shabbat on the first weekend of early voting.

During our campaign, we sent out 76,000 pieces of mail and 102,752 text messages. We recruited an army of local volunteers to conduct grassroots outreach, making more than 50,000 calls and knocking on 12,500 doors.

This significant display of electoral power from Jewish voters is a testament to the power of grassroots organizing and is a model for similar efforts in local, state, and federal contests across the country. When we mobilize around a set of shared values, we can shape our collective political destiny.

This is what democracy looks like.

Biden is selling us all out to fund endless war

Port Orange, Fla.: Sleepy Joe AKA Genocide Joe is getting handled by a cabal of neo-con morons! He is continually sending hundreds of billions of dollars to the Ukrainian government. This has absolutely nothing to do with aiding Ukrainian democracy! It is part of our nation's economic rivalry with Russia. Republicans, meanwhile, have set their sights on going after China, which will be a major mistake.

Since Oct. 7, Joe the idiot, along with his Republican counterparts, with Donald Trump as leader of that band of wolves, is going all-out to subsidize the Zionists who control Israel in their quest to ethnically cleanse the Palestinian people! How much of the world has to say "No, Joe" before he ceases this madness? Most Americans polled say what Israel is doing is hideous (they killed nearly 300 Palestinians in Gaza and wounded hundreds more to free four hostages, and now place the remaining hostages in a tough spot if Hamas decides to do the full monty).

If Biden and those who whisper in his tired ears want to defeat the MAGA machine, he needs to act, and damn fast! After what the IDF has done to destroy thousands of Palestinians, Biden and his minions need to stop all funding and weaponry to Israel. At the same time, he needs to push for UN-sponsored peace negotiations between Ukraine and Russia. Remember this, Sleepy Joe: The majority of Americans are not happy with our involvement in that war or with the Zionist machine.

For Biden to seal the deal in November, he needs to sell to Americans the idea of a universal basic income. Philip A. Farruggio

President Biden prepares to speak to graduating cadets at the U.S. Military Academy last month. AP

Winds of war are blowing

Clifton, N.J.: All these people who are mouthing off and demonstrating for other countries should stop. Hasn't anyone heard that North Korea joined forces with Russia? This could be World War III approaching us. If New York gets hit with a nuke, I don't think I will survive. It has been reported that a Russian submarine was seen 100 miles off the Florida coast. This is serious. Whatever happens, happens? I'm 73 and have lived a decent life, but these people should stop complaining and look at what's ahead for our country: a war! Maybe the end of the world! Steve Farawell

Foreign interests

Bedford, N.Y.: No, George Latimer did not win. Special interests – in this case, the interests of a foreign country – won. What would have happened if Latimer's entire campaign had been paid for by, say, a lobby group representing Egypt, Russia, China or even the U.K.? Would that be fine? It's so troubling that people representing a foreign government would so openly buy a candidate! We can not afford to have any foreign interests pay for our elected officials. We already had Russia's influence in presidential elections and look what happened! We need election reform legislation that would prohibit the purchase of political candidates if our democracy is to stay alive. But of course, election reform is a pipe dream since 99% of our elected officials who could enact such reforms have already been paid for by the lobby for a foreign government and wouldn't want anything to change the status quo. Céline Secada

Upending agenda

Ormond Beach, Fla.: The ideas that underpin our modern world, such as meritocracy, equality under the law, property rights, religious tolerance, modern secular education, sound finances, rational and efficient government and the encouragement of science and the arts, are under serious threat, as are our liberties. They are threatened by a woke progressive liberalism, identity politics, a socialist movement to redistribute wealth and guarantee equal outcomes rather than equal opportunity, the use of race and sexual identity to polarize us, the use of social and news media to suppress free speech and constructive debate, and by the weaponization of our justice system to control and defeat those who hold opposing views. The choice this November is bigger than any in my lifetime. Charles Michael Sitero

Moderate sensibility

Utica, N.Y.: We disrespectfully object to Voicer James Hyland's smearing of MSNBC hosts Nicolle Wallace and Michael Steele. While Hyland drones on about Trump's election lies, which have failed in more than 60 court cases, he also beats up on Wallace and Steele because they are Republicans who have dared to question the Big Lie. Hyland embodies one of the Republicans' most defining attributes, something that differentiates Wallace and Steele from the MAGA lemmings: the absolute refusal to learn. Quoting the iconic words of Stephen Colbert, said right in front of Wallace's former boss, Hyland "believes the same thing on Wednesday that he did on Monday, no matter what may have happened on Tuesday"! This is reason enough to vote Democrat in November. Joan and Jeff Ganeles

Fashion policing

Working hours

Malverne, L.I.: Here we are, just days after the summer solstice, and sweltering heat has enveloped North America. Common sense says we have to get up early to get things done during the coolest part of the day. However, waiting for the bus at 7:30 a.m., you can feel the heat of the sun. By midday, the sun is high in the sky and the scorching heat radiates from the black asphalt of roads and roof tar of buildings, concrete sidewalks, brick buildings and shimmering glass towers hot enough for fried eggs and melted American cheese. By the time the evening rush starts, the sun is still high at 4 p.m. Societal norms have to change. Instead of moving the clocks forward, maybe we should move the clocks back one hour and take advantage of working hours during cooler temperatures. Kosmas Patikoglou

Not so cool

Monroe, N.J.: This is my favorite season. No, not summer – I mean hypocrite season! All of the "green" environmental zealots have their air-conditioning cranking in their green vehicles. Don't they know this causes a lot more fossil fuel consumption? This includes electric cars that are powered by fuel-burning power plants. The chemicals that are used to run the A/C at home and at work are also bad for the planet. So, don't be a hypocrite: Turn off your A/C. Tom Scott

Sneaky stinkers

Queens Village: What gets me about these companies claiming that odor-free deodorants last up to 72 hours is that they are obviously geared toward people who hate to shower! I am actually more concerned about the possible harmful additives and chemicals that might be in these products. Lawrence Krasner

Farm cruelty

Forest Hills: Last month, the U.S. House Agriculture Committee advanced a version of the farm bill that hurts animals, undermines states' sovereignty and ignores the will of the electorate. The committee-approved bill contains a slew of problematic language, including an extremely harmful provision that would preempt critical state laws like California's Proposition 12, a ballot measure approved by voters in 2018 to outlaw the sale of certain products from animals raised in the cruelest forms of confinement. But this is not the only way the House's farm bill fails animals. It also weakens protections for dogs in puppy mills and other animals in federally licensed facilities by diluting enforcement measures under the Animal Welfare Act, and it passes up a valuable opportunity to incorporate the Save America's Forgotten Equines (SAFE) Act, which would prevent the inherently inhumane slaughter and export of tens of thousands of American horses for meat. Kathleen Fischer

Start fresh

Rego Park: Re "Congestion pricing remains the best way forward" (op-ed, June 25): So, "congestion pricing was intended to fill a gap" in the MTA's 2020-24 capital plan? Had congestion pricing been in place already, the MTA knew it'd be "back to Albany next year looking for new funding" for the 2025 capital plan. The plan Gov. Hochul shelved would have brought total MTA debt to $60 billion and that's still not enough? There's a mass transit infrastructure problem, alright, and it's the MTA itself! This unaccountable, mismanaged behemoth must be torn down and rebuilt from scratch! Send congestion pricing and the MTA back to the drawing board, governor! Arthur L. Miller

Day of homecoming & freedom for Assange

WikiLeaker-in-chief Julian Assange hugs his wife, Stella Assange, after arriving (inset, raising a celebratory clenched fist) in Canberra, the capital of his native Australia, on Wednesday following five years in a British prison fighting extradition to the U.S. on charges of publishing American military secrets, including details of wrongdoing. A plea deal with the Justice Department, disclosed Monday night, set him free.

JFK bomb threat by laid-off worker – sources

A disgruntled former JetBlue employee called in a bomb threat to Port Authority police Wednesday after planting a cell phone labeled "explosive device" at the onsite TWA Hotel at Kennedy Airport, sources said.

The laid-off employee, identified by sources as 32-year-old Dillon Vista, was in a parking lot near JetBlue's Terminal 5 at the Queens hub when he called Port Authority police stationed at the airport around 11 a.m., according to Port Authority sources.

Vista allegedly told cops that there was a cell phone bomb in the lobby of the hotel before hanging up and getting on the AirTrain toward Jamaica station.

A manager at the hotel (photo), which is connected to the JetBlue terminal, alerted authorities to the cell phone, which was found in the lobby and had a note attached that read, "This is an explosive device," sources said.

The JetBlue terminal was shut down as the bomb squad investigated the phone, which was determined to not be a threat.

Police reviewed surveillance footage and tracked Vista to Jamaica station, where he was arrested.

Sources told the Daily News he was laid off in 2020 as the pandemic disrupted air travel.

Charges against him were pending late Wednesday afternoon.

Your HOROSCOPE

BY TAROT.COM

For Thursday, June 27

The mood truly is all over the place today. The gentle Moon in encouraging Pisces begins with an energizing sextile to fiery Mars in Taurus, before moving on to conjoin patient Saturn, setting us up for a day of slow but steady progress. Luna will then trine Mercury in Cancer, helping us think clearly and productively. On top of that, a spark of originality or eccentricity should really pay off when the Moon finally sextiles rebel Uranus, also in Taurus.

ARIES

MARCH 21-APRIL 19

You may feel a strong urge to disappear from the world for a bit. It wouldn't be one bit shocking if you feel like keeping yourself separated from the rest of society. That isn't to say you're an antisocial creature by nature, but alone time will be especially restorative for your well-being.

TAURUS

APRIL 20-MAY 20

Some people will tell you "yes," whether it's for better or for worse. This shines a light on people who may not have your best interest at heart. Just because they tell you what you want to hear doesn't mean they're a good friend, so don't get sucked into false positivity or saccharine quips.

GEMINI

MAY 21-JUNE 20

Beep, beep! Slow down! It's better to move at a steady pace than sprint after finish lines. You can accomplish everything you need to in due time, but if you race ahead of schedule, then you risk tripping into a mistake. Avoid forcing yourself toward a hurdle before you're prepared to leap over it.

CANCER

JUNE 21-JULY 22

The world is full of opportunities, but at present, you may have to work harder than you'd like to reach it. Today could feel like any limitations and barriers are larger than normal. No one is going to come rescue you, so be willing to climb over those fences yourself.

LEO

JULY 23-AUG. 22

Avoidance isn't a very helpful tactic. You can't keep putting things off much longer. This may involve finances, like debts, inheritances or loans. You might have to pay up, or maybe you need to follow up with someone who owes you. It won't be fun, but it will be necessary.

VIRGO

AUG. 23-SEPT. 22

Constant support and adoration sound lovely, but that doesn't mean you're going to get them. Today, in fact, you may undergo a bout of tough love or constructive criticism from someone important to you. The more you expect to be appreciated, the more likely you will be disappointed. It's all in the mind.

LIBRA

SEPT. 23-OCT. 22

You can work hard in order to play hard, but today could just feel like hard work, period. Efficiency is key, whether you're tidying up at home or at the office or running errands around town. Take this as your cue to roll up your sleeves and put your nose to the grindstone. Find your joy in productivity.

SCORPIO

OCT. 23-NOV. 21

Self-expression can be a serious thing at this time. Being authentically yourself is of paramount importance. You can't be your best when you aren't being yourself. Make an effort to find a harmony between being your more mature self and letting it all hang out. It's not impossible when you try.

SAGITTARIUS

NOV. 22-DEC. 21

Your attention is required back home. There is a rather serious energy bubbling up under your roof. Prepare yourself for significant conversations with a roommate or relative. You may also need to deal with issues regarding your physical abode. Take this opportunity to firm up your foundations.

CAPRICORN

DEC. 22-JAN. 19

Gossip can be entertaining, but it can also be damaging. Accidentally or purposefully, someone may tempt you into saying something that feels innocent but could turn around to bite you down the line. Remind yourself that if you have nothing nice to say, don't say anything.

AQUARIUS

JAN. 20-FEB. 18

There's more to life than making money, though it may not feel like it today. If your bank account could use some TLC, this is the moment to give it the necessary attention. That said, if you're already in the black, you can still find ways to increase your earnings.

PISCES

FEB. 19-MARCH 20

The weight of the world could seem to rest on your shoulders presently. Life can be relentless, imposing upon challenges and obligations that can't go unanswered. Being serious can assist you in getting a lot of things done in life, but don't ignore the roses just because you can. Life isn't meant to be one big chore. Try to appreciate its beauty.

A LOT OF CHARACTER

Grimace-mania sweeps through Citi Field as purple mascot becomes symbol of Mets' recent success

PETER SBLENDORIO, Page 40

With OG and Bridges deals, they swing for the fences and steal Subway spotlight

MIKE LUPICA

On a Subway Series baseball night when baseballs hit by both the Mets and Yankees were flying out of Citi Field, one a grand slam hit by Aaron Judge, the most important sports business in the city was conducted by the Knicks and the Nets. It was suddenly basketball season on this night because Leon Rose, the guy who runs the Knicks, hit one out of the park by making a trade for Mikal Bridges.

The Knicks were back in season just like that, five weeks after Game 7 against the Pacers ended the most exciting Knicks season in years in the most disappointing possible way, before the Knicks got their chance to go from their Garden to the one in Boston and play Game 1 against the Celtics. Really, the 'Nova Knicks were back in play Tuesday night because now Bridges, who won a college championship with Jalen Brunson and Josh Hart and Donte DeVincenzo, isn't a Brooklyn Net any longer; because he is coming across the river to the Garden and try to win the Knicks their first NBA championship in over half-a-century, since Clyde and Capt. Willis and them.Were the Knicks going to beat the Celtics team that just won it all? They weren't. Could they have gotten a game off them, maybe even Game 1, or two? Yeah, because we all saw how hard the 'Nova Knicks fought in the spring of '24, even as they kept losing one key guy after another.

But Knicks' fans are allowed to think how differently everything might have gone if Bridges had been a Knick across this basketball spring and not a Net, even after Julius Randle was gone and OG Anunoby and Mitchell Robinson, and even before Brunson broke his wrist at the very end. Now those fans will watch the team they embraced in such a full-throated way take their shot with Bridges in a Knicks uniform, and with OG, now that he is going to stay at the Garden.

The old order of things, back in the 90s, back when the Knicks began to matter again and went back to the Finals twice, was that baseball season – and that really meant the Yankees once Joe Torre became manager – didn't begin until the Knicks ended. Only now that changes with the announcement of the Bridges trade on a Mets vs. Yankees night. The Knicks feel as if a season of theirs has finally made it all the way back into June, now that the band has really been put back together with the 'Nova Knicks.

There is no five-year plan now that Rose has spent just about all of his draft capital on Bridges. There is just a next-year plan with the Knicks. Rose has swung this deal – swinging for the fences in the process, you bet – with the belief that the Knicks finally can make it past the second round of the playoffs for the first time since 2000. They won hearts around here last season, you bet. But they were still one round and then a knockout, again.

Always remember the reaction from Brunson, as much an MVP of pro basketball this past season as either Nikola Jokic or Joel Embiid or Luka Doncic or either of the two Jays, Tatum and Brown, in Boston, when he was asked after Game 7 against the Pacers if he thought the Knicks season had been a success.

"No," Brunson said.

He was asked why.

"Did we win the championship?" he continued. "Did we get close?"

He paused and said, "So, no, that's my mindset."

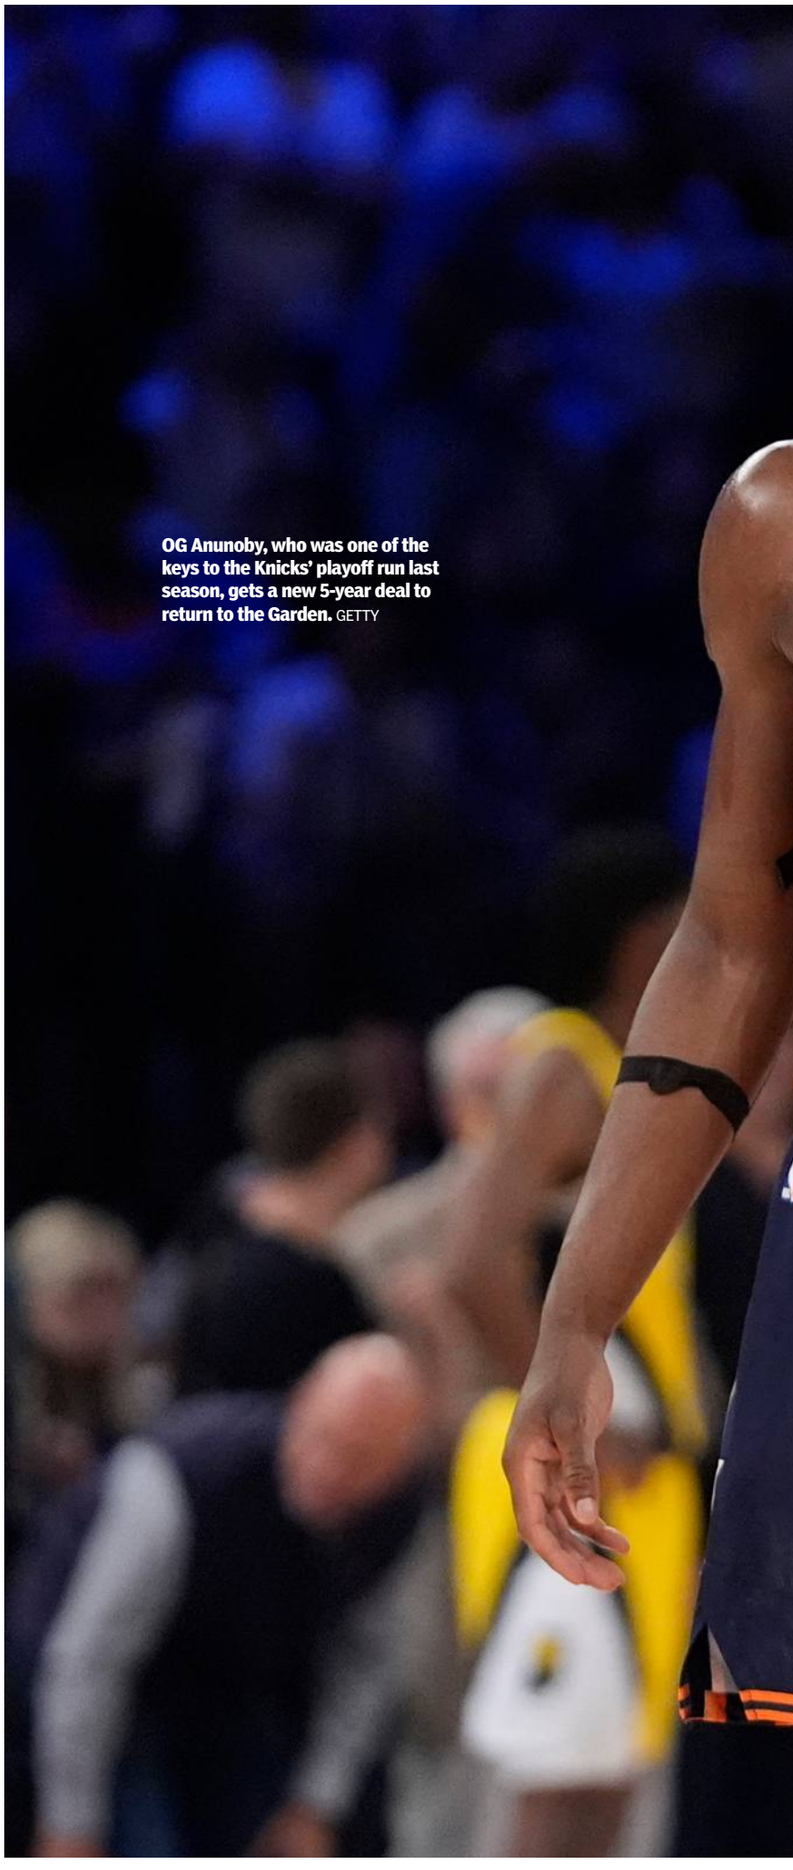

The big basketball boss at the Garden obviously agrees with him. Same mindset. Rose doesn't just speak softly when it comes to his basketball team. He rarely speaks at all. But for now, this week, this trade, he does swing a big stick. He's got a total star in Brunson. He put those two 'Nova sidemen with him, and swung that deal for Anunoby, and we all saw the possibilities for these Knicks in those first bright moments after Anonoby got arrived from Toronto. We saw how Tom Thibodeau, doing the best work of his long basketball-lifer life, coached them up.

But the Knicks didn't have enough, no matter how much we talk about the injuries. They just didn't. And that means enough to really go at the Celtics and think the sides might finally be even, in a world where the Celtics are where the bar is once again set, not just in the Knicks' conference, but in the whole league. The sides aren't even yet, even with Bridges a Knick. But the Knicks got better on Tuesday night, and got closer, as Rose finally took all those draft choices out of his pocket and threw them on the table as he made a big bet on his basketball team, and on himself, too. It's necessary to point out here that Bridges, for whom Rose did spend all those unprotected picks, has never played on an NBA All-Star team. But he is still just 27, has a world of talent, and Rose is clearly betting on upside with him, as he did when he got Brunson from Dallas.

In so many ways, next season, and the season after that, are a reckoning for Rose, even with all the fine work he's done bringing the Knicks back. Because understand something: It's just not the Knicks against the Celtics, if the Knicks can ever make it back to the Eastern Conference finals. It is Rose who needs to show that he has the chops to build a champion the way Danny Ainge did in Boston, before Brad Stevens came along to finish the job.

So it's not just the 'Nova Knicks against the Celtics. Leon Rose, once and for all, has to show his front office can match up against theirs.

Rose sure does take his shot now, because the news for his team just gets better because OG really is staying. In a big baseball week in New York the biggest home run swing belongs to Leon Rose.

OG and Knicks agree to 5-year, $212.5 million deal: report

BY KRISTIAN WINFIELD
NEW YORK DAILY NEWS

Bag secured. Infinity stone collected. Crisis averted.

The Knicks and unrestricted free agent forward OG Anunoby agreed to terms on a five-year contract worth $212.5 million, according to ESPN's Adrian Wojnarowski. The deal keeps New York's floor spacer and defensive stopper at Madison Square Garden for the foreseeable future albeit at a hefty price for a player who projects as the fourth scoring option on a team hoping to compete for a title.

After acquiring Mikal Bridges in a deal with the Brooklyn Nets and re-signing Anunoby to a long-term deal, the Knicks now have a pair of wings they hope can go toe-to-toe with the reigning NBA champion Boston Celtics duo of Jayson Tatum and Jaylen Brown.

Retaining Anunoby as a free agent was priority No. 1 for the Knicks given the cost of acquiring him in the Dec. 30 deal with the Toronto Raptors.

The Knicks traded former No. 3 overall pick RJ Barrett and 2023 Sixth Man of the Year runner-up Immanuel Quickley as well as the No. 31 pick in the 2024 NBA Draft for a package headlined by Anunoby, whose arrival spurred a 12-2 run pushing the Knicks up the Eastern Conference standings.

The Knicks ultimately went 20-3 in regular-season games Anunoby appeared in after the deal and finished with the East's No. 2 seed, an improvement largely attributed to the former Raptor's lockdown defense and floor spacing.

He was a threat, however, to leave as an unrestricted free agent when he declined the $19.9 million player option on his deal on Monday night. And for that reason, the Knicks were left with little choice but to pay Anunoby, who was set to command maximum salary offers from a number of teams with cap space to sign him as a free agent, most notably the Philadelphia 76ers, who were armed both with $55 million in room and Anunoby's former Raptors head coach, Nick Nurse.

Threat neutralized. Anunoby now returns to a reimagined Knicks starting five, set to feature Bridges, All-NBA guard Jalen Brunson, and – for now – All-Star forward Julius Randle, though the Knicks are expected to be more active finding deals to improve the roster in a way that puts them on par with the reigning NBA champions next season.

Anunoby averaged 14.1 points, 4.4 rebounds, 1.7 steals and one block in the 23 games he played following his trade to New York. He averaged 15 points and six rebounds on 41% three-point shooting through nine playoff games as the Knicks' second-round playoff run came to an end in seven games against the Indiana Pacers.

Anunoby comes with notable recent injury history.

He missed two separate stretches during the regular season after discovering inflammation in his right shooting elbow attributed to a loose bone fragment needing surgery that sidelined him for a month and a half.

Three games after returning to the floor, he aggravated the elbow injury and left the team during a five-game road trip, missing another nine games before returning to play the final six games of the regular season.

Anunoby then sustained a significant hamstring strain in Game 2 of the second-round series against the Pacers. He returned for Game 7 but played less than five minutes before checking out of the game for good.

Anunoby is expected to make $36.2 million in the first year of his contract with an eight percent annual raise. He is expected to make just under $50 million in the fifth and final year of his contract.

Claxton is getting 4-year, $100 million deal to stay in B'klyn

BY C.J. HOLMES
NEW YORK DAILY NEWS

Nic Claxton is finalizing a four-year, $100 million deal to return to the Nets, the Daily News confirmed on Wednesday. Brooklyn made retaining the free agent center a top priority entering the offseason and its persistence paid off.

While the exact terms of Claxton's deal have not been disclosed, he is expected to make around $25 million per year over the lifespan of his new deal. Ninety-six million of Claxton's new contract will be guaranteed, according to Shams Charania of The Athletic.

Claxton, who was selected 31st overall by the Nets in the 2019 NBA Draft, has steadily improved at both ends of the court in each of his first five NBA seasons and is now considered one of the better two-way players in the league at his position.

The 25-year-old averaged 11.8 points, 9.9 rebounds, 2.1 assists and 2.1 blocks per game last season, finishing eighth in the league in total blocks (146), 21st in field goal percentage among centers (62.9), 14th in total rebounds collected among centers (706) and recorded 30 double-doubles in 71 games.

Speaking to reporters during exit interviews in April, Claxton admitted that he is far from a finished product. The Nets are banking on that untapped potential and first-year head coach Jordi Fernandez believes he can be a future Defensive Player of the Year winner in the NBA.

After news of him returning to Brooklyn was made public, Claxton shared a message on Instagram that read "I know who I am".

While the Nets appear to be steering toward a full rebuild after trading Mikal Bridges to the Knicks on Tuesday, retaining Claxton's services for the next four years at least gives them a high-upside piece in the frontcourt to build around.

It also means Claxton also has the opportunity to further develop alongside second-year forward Noah Clowney, who impressed down the stretch of Brooklyn's lost 2023-24 season.

An April 11 game against the Toronto Raptors at Barclays Center was the best tease of what that duo could be capable of in future seasons, as they combined for 12 of Brooklyn's 15 blocks in the team's 106-102 win.

Hawks take Risacher at No. 1

BY JAMES O'CONNELL
NEW YORK DAILY NEWS

The pick is in and Zaccharie Risacher was the first name called in the 2024 NBA Draft.

The Atlanta Hawks selected the 19-year-old French forward as the No. 1 overall pick in the draft on Wednesday night. Risacher spent last season overseas with the Mincidelice JL Bourg of Betclic Élite in France.

The 6-9 forward averaged 10.1 points, 3.8 rebounds and 0.9 assists last season on 44% shooting from the field and 35% from deep.

Risacher now joins an Atlanta roster that includes star guards Trae Young and Dejounte Murray. With the Hawks missing the postseason and finishing with a 36-46 record, the franchise hopes Risacher is a beneficial piece as questions loom elsewhere on the roster.

Moments after Risacher's name was called, fellow Frenchman Alex Sarr was taken No. 2 overall by the Washington Wizards. Kentucky guard Reed Sheppard was picked third by the Houston Rockets. The Spurs selected UConn's Stephon Castle fourth while the Detroit Pistons selected G League Ignite forward Ron Holland II fifth overall.

Risacher is the second straight international player to be selected first overall after the Spurs used its top pick on Victor Wembanyama a year ago. The Hawks' selection on Wednesday marks the fourth ever international pick to be picked first.

REAL CONTENDERS

Roster passes championship eye test, but center still a concern

That championship window? It's been pried wide open.

The Knicks have taken their rightful seat at the table, improving a roster that ran out of both gas and able bodies in the second round of the playoffs by agreeing in principle to send Bojan Bogdanovic and five first-round picks to the Brooklyn Nets for a bona fide third offensive option in Mikal Bridges.

It's a trade that signals the Knicks pushing their chips to the center of the table in pursuit of the franchise's first NBA title in 50 years.

After re-signing OG Anunoby to a 5-year, $212.5M deal on Wednesday, the Knicks now have a loaded starting five projecting on par with the best five-man units around the league.

KRISTIAN WINFIELD

The Knicks roster passes the championship eye test, but there's a catch.

Bridges joins the core Knicks group of Jalen Brunson, Julius Randle, Donte DiVincenzo, Josh Hart and Mitchell Robinson.

Brunson, DiVincenzo, Hart and Bridges won the 2016 NCAA title at Villanova as teammates, then won another one in 2018 after Hart left for the NBA Draft.

As it stands, Miles McBride is also coming off the bench for the Knicks, as is fourth-year big man Jericho Sims rounding what projects as an eight-to-nine-man rotation (including Anunoby) with the roster as currently constructed.

The Knicks traded pick No. 24 of the 2024 draft class to the Washington Wizards in exchange for picks Nos. 26 and 51, according to multiple reports. They then traded pick No. 26 to the Oklahoma City Thunder in exchange for five second-round picks between 2025 and 2027.

The Knicks then selected French forward Pacome Dadiet with pick No. 25.

Dadiet is an 18-year-old forward standing 6-foot-9 who averaged 6.6 points on 35.8 percent shooting from three-point range for German club Ratiopharm Ulm last season.

Stacked against previous NBA champions, the Knicks' roster in progress holds strong.

- The reigning champion Boston Celtics, for example, had a rotation stretching eight players deep. Boston boasts a stacked starting five of Jaylen Brown, Jayson Tatum, Kristaps Porzingis, Jrue Holiday and Derrick White with Al Horford, Payton Pritchard and Sam Hauser off the bench. They are the gold standard.
- The previous year's NBA champion Denver Nuggets featured a back-to-back MVP winner in Nikola Jokic, plus a loaded supporting cast of Jamal Murray, Michael Porter Jr., Aaron Gordon and Kentavious Caldwell-Pope with Bruce Brown, Reggie Jackson, Jeff Green and Christian Braun off the bench.
- The 2022 NBA champion Golden State Warriors were equally as deep: Stephen Curry, Klay Thompson and Draymond Green headlined the roster, but Jordan Poole and Andrew Wiggins provided quality firepower as third and fourth offensive options. Golden State rounded its rotation with Kevon Looney, Andre Iguodala, Otto Porter Jr. and a promising young talent in Jonathan Kuminga.
- The championship Milwaukee Bucks also had a rotation featuring seven starting-caliber players, led by an MVP in Giannis Antetokounmpo plus Khris Middleton and Jrue Holiday but supported by Bobby Portis, Brook Lopez, PJ Tucker and Pat Connaughton.
- And LeBron James and Anthony Davis took Alex Caruso, Kyle Kuzma, Rajon Rondo, Markieff Morris, Dwight Howard, Danny Green, Markieff Morris and Caldwell-Pope to a Los Angeles Lakers title in the 2020 Orlando Bubble.

Quality depth is the name of the game.

It's the common denominator between each of the last five NBA champions. Each had at least one All-Star starting-caliber player, but they also each had players coming off the bench who could easily start elsewhere.

The Knicks check both boxes.

They now project to start both Bridges and Anunoby on the wing, plus a pair of All-Stars in Brunson and Randle at the one and four.

This means they will bring both DiVincenzo and Hart off the bench, two players who started the second half of the season and helped the Knicks – without Randle (dislocated right shoulder) – to the Eastern Conference's No. 2 seed and a second-round playoff appearance despite a barrage of injuries to the playoff roster.

CENTER STILL A CONCERN

As it stands, the Knicks are unlikely to retain Isaiah Hartenstein, who is expected to command a salary exceeding the four-year, $72.5 million deal New York can offer in free agency. In fact, due to salary cap constraints, the Knicks will be unable to sign Anunoby to a significant contract while still retaining enough room under the first apron to offer Hartenstein a deal beginning upwards of $16 million in Year 1.

This means barring a second significant trade, the Knicks will start Robinson at the five.

Robinson is a dominant rebounder, rim-protector and finisher who underwent a pair of surgeries on a left ankle sustaining two stress injuries last season alone.

Injuries have been an unfortunate but significant portion of the starting Knicks center's career. He appeared in 31 games last season, 51 games the season prior, 72 games in 2022, then another 31 games in 2021.

If Robinson were to sustain another injury, the Knicks would be left with only Sims, who only saw playoff minutes in garbage time in Round 2 against the Pacers.

If they can shore this position, be it in the draft, through free agency, or via trade, the Knicks will be one step closer to their best shot at winning a title since they made it to the NBA Finals in 1999.

Not Yanks or downpour can stop Mets in Subway rout

BY ABBEY MASTRACCO
NEW YORK DAILY NEWS

The Mets have become a veritable force of nature in June, while the Yankees seem to be thunderstruck.

The hottest offense in baseball showed no signs of slowing down, with the Mets defeating the Yankee, 12-2, on Wednesday night at Citi Field to sweep the first half of the Subway Series.

Francisco Alvarez reached base four times, going 3-for-3 with a walk, a single, a two-run homer and an RBI double that came just seconds before a thunderstorm delayed the game.

Tyrone Taylor hit a three-run homer, Harrison Bader hit his second in as many nights, and left-hander Sean Manaea tossed five shutout innings. Adrian Houser pitched three innings for the save, his first of the season and his career.

Aaron Judge launched his league-leading 30th home run off left-hander Danny Young in the top of the sixth with a 400-foot, two-run bomb. Still, it wasn't enough as the Yankees (52-30) continued their early-summer skid. They've gone 2-8 in their last 10.

METS	12
YANKEES	2

The Mets retaliated after Judge's homer, with Taylor hitting his first in a month off right-hander Yoendrys Gomez in the bottom of the sixth to drop the dagger on the Yankees. They scored another run in the bottom of the eighth for good measure, outscoring their crosstown rivals, 21-9, over two games.

For the second day in a row, the Yankees loaded the bases in the first inning, only to end the inning scoreless.

With one out, Manaea walked Juan Soto, Aaron Judge and J.D. Davis. After a mound visit by pitching coach Jeremy Hefner, Manaea got Alex Verdugo to roll over on the first pitch he threw – a sinker – for a 4-6-3 double play.

Manaea gave the Yankees chances with five walks, but they grounded into three double plays. He gave up two hits and struck out three in the win (5-3).

Right-hander Luis Gil put the first two on in the third inning, then gave up an RBI single to J.D. Martinez to put the Mets on the board. After Pete Alonso grounded into a double play, Alvarez hit an opposite-field blast to right field, giving the Mets a 3-0 lead.

With two on and one out in the fifth, Alvarez flashed more opposite-field power with a double to right to score Brandon Nimmo from second. The timing couldn't have been better. Gil managed only one pitch to Tyrone Taylor before the downpour began.

Gomez replaced Gil when the game resumed after nearly an hour and a half (1:27). He walked the first two hitters to bring in a run, and a fly ball by Jeff McNeil scored another. Bader hit an RBI double against his former team to make it 7-0.

Gil was charged with five earned runs on four hits over 4 ⅓ innings, walking four and striking out two in just his third loss of the season (9-3).

Prior to the game, Mets owner Steve Cohen asked Francisco Lindor if the Mets were going to get back to a .500 record with a win. The shortstop assured him they would.

The Mets (39-39) made good on their promise, winning their third game in a row, their 14th in their last 19 contests and securing New York City bragging rights for another month.

Mets stuck in sticky stuff fallout

Drew Smith, who came to mound cold after Edwin Diaz was thrown out of Sunday's game in Chicago, lands on IL. AP

Right-hander Drew Smith was placed on the 15-day injured list 30 minutes before the start of the second game of the Subway Series with a right elbow sprain, the severity of which is not known.

The transaction is retroactive to Monday and the club called up right-hander Ty Adcock from Triple-A Syracuse to take his place on the roster.

Smith was taken for imaging just after 4 p.m., having alerted the trainers to tightness in his forearm while playing catch. With the move coming so close to game time, it was highly unlikely Adcock would be able to get from Buffalo to Queens in time for the game.

Closer Edwin Diaz was already out, serving the second game of his 10-game suspension for a violation of prohibited substances.

Smith entered Sunday's the game after Diaz was ejected in the bottom of the ninth inning against the Cubs. With Diaz having been ejected before throwing a pitch, Smith was forced to come in cold.

"I threw zero in the bullpen," Smith said Sunday night at Wrigley Field. "It was all on the deal that I had no idea. Going in, nobody was warming up. So I just warmed up entirely on the field."

The league allows unlimited warmup pitches in those situations, but Smith felt the urgency of trying to close out a 5-2 win and rushed through his pitches before the game resumed. He struggled to loosen up his arm and, as a result, his fastball lacked life and velocity.

It raised some red flags for the Mets. Mendoza got left-hander Jake Diekman warm and pitching coach Jeremy Hefner made a mound visit to check on him.

Smith insisted he was fine.

"Just a little stiff," he said. "Just trouble warming up a little bit. I've been throwing a lot this week, and I think I probably could have taken a little more time to warm up out there, to be completely honest. But yeah, it's nothing, nothing major. Just was having trouble getting loose a little bit."

The Mets pulled him after 12 pitches with two out and one on, bringing in a much more prepared Diekman to face left-handed hitter Pete Crow-Armstrong. The Cubs countered by pinch-hitting Patrick Wisdom, a right-handed hitter, but Diekman still struck him out for the one-out save.

It's not clear if Smith's forearm tightness is related to his Sunday outing, but the Mets haven't eliminated the option.

"He didn't pinpoint anything specific on Sunday," Mendoza said. "He was just having a hard time getting warm. And then yesterday, and then today, again there was some tightness there, and so that's what we got."

The schedule works to the Mets' benefit with off days bookending the two games against the Yankees, so relievers got rest Monday and will get rest today. Adcock will be with the Mets by Friday, when they open a three-game series against the Astros.

A 27-year-old out of Oxford, North Carolina, Adcock posted a 3.45 ERA over 12 innings for the Mariners last season and is currently 3-1 with a 5.82 ERA for three Triple-A teams this season.

TRAINER'S ROOM

Right-hander Kodai Senga will throw another live batting practice session today at Citi Field. The Mets will bring hitters from High-A Brooklyn to face the ace in a two-inning simulation.

Gleyber lands on bench

Boone hopes a few days off will help Torres to 'reset'

BY GARY PHILLIPS
NEW YORK DAILY NEWS

When Aaron Boone went to sleep after the Yankees' 9-7 loss to the Mets on Tuesday, he had Gleyber Torres in his Wednesday lineup.

However, the manager changed his mind after sleeping on the decision. On Wednesday, Torres found himself benched.

"Just felt like he needs it," Boone said before the Yankees played a second game at Citi Field. "I might give him a couple days here, just to kind of reset. I just think he's too important, and a guy that I'm confident we'll get going. But it's been a grind. It's been a struggle. I think he's feeling that a little bit. So it's hopefully something that will serve him well mentally and physically to just take an exhale."

Torres has been enduring a brutal platform season, hitting .215 with a .627 OPS, a 78 OPS+, seven home runs and 29 RBI. On Tuesday, Torres went 0-for-4 with one walk and two swinging strikeouts as the Yankees' cleanup hitter.

He also made his made his 12th error of the season and failed to run out a softly-hit ground ball moments after the Yankees had shifted momentum with an eighth-inning grand slam from Aaron Judge.

"You tell me," Torres said Tuesday when asked to evaluate his season. "I think it's bad. I have to figure out how to get better. Working really hard."

Asked what was most disappointing, Torres said, "Everything."

On Tuesday, Torres and Boone mentioned a recent groin injury when explaining why the infielder didn't hustle late in the game. However, Boone said the play was "one of the things that got my attention" on Wednesday.

Boone added that Torres' groin issue is "nothing that's significant."

The skipper said Torres respected the decision to bench him after the two talked in-person on Tuesday night and over the phone on Wednesday morning. As for what's been hindering Torres, Boone said he hasn't talked to the 27-year-old about his impending free agency. Boone also doesn't sense that there's anything wrong with Torres on a personal level.

Boone regularly checks in on his players' lives away from the field.

"I don't think it's anything major other than the stresses of playing this game," Boone said.

Boone wasn't exactly sure what Torres would do with his time off, however long it may be. But he imagined that the player would take things lightly on Wednesday while still being somewhat ready if needed against the Mets.

"The thing is, he's been working really hard," Boone said. "But sometimes a little mental blow can go a long way."

When it came to Torres' glove, Boone defended him, just as he did on Tuesday.

Torres leads all second basemen in errors, and his defensive metrics aren't particularly good. However, Boone insisted Torres has made strides in the field this season.

"He's made too many errors. Those mistakes are certainly part of the story of the season so far," Boone said. "He's also done a lot of things this year that's even moved the needle in a better way. He's getting to more balls than he ever has in his career.

"I know it's easy to pile on him right now. The errors he makes or a mistake that he makes defensively don't look like a lot of people want it to look because he plays the game in a relaxed, kind of casual (way), which is part of the reason he makes a lot of good plays, too."

As for Torres' bat, Boone said he believes he's noticed some "subtle" mechanical issues with him in the box. However, Boone wanted to leave any corrections to the hitting coaches, and he felt Torres' poor offensive production has been more mental than anything.

Sevy enjoys 'calm' time

Ex-Yankee says things just a bit more chill in Queens

As Luis Severino changed by his locker on Wednesday, a large group of reporters crowded around the righty.

After nine major-league seasons with the Yankees, Severino is in his first with the Mets. With the two teams playing the season's first Subway Series at Citi Field, a lot of reporters naturally wanted to speak with Severino.

Asked what the biggest difference is between the teams, Severino said, "Having a beard." He's sporting one now that he's allowed to.

In all seriousness, Severino said the biggest adjustment has been getting to know more people after playing in the Yankees' organization from ages 18-29. He also said things are chiller in Queens than in the Bronx, where fans expect the Yanks to win the World Series every year.

"This is definitely just a little bit more calm," Severino said. "I don't know if it's because nobody was expecting us to win this year, it was a little bit less pressure for us."

Severino flashed ace potential during his time with the Yankees, but he battled multiple injuries and flamed out with the team in 2023, recording a 6.65 ERA over 89.1 innings.

"I gave everything that I have," Severino said of his Yankees years. "I was not looking to get injured. I was just trying to compete. And the thing is, I got hurt playing baseball. I was not out of sight, going on a motorcycle or freakin' diving out of a helicopter ... I was playing baseball, and I gave everything that I got to the Yankees. At the end, there is no hard feelings. I love the Yankees. I love the guys out there, and I'm here because they gave me an opportunity to be somebody."

Severino's first season with the Mets has gone well so far, as he's recorded a 3.29 ERA over 15 starts. He's yet to land on the injured list, and he's improved his eating habits. He's also been sleeping better after consulting with a doctor.

"It's little things like that that people think, 'Oh, that's silly,' but it goes a long way," Severino said.

GONZALEZ IN SCRANTON

The Yankees outrighted lefty reliever Victor González to Triple-A Scranton/Wilkes-Barre on Wednesday after he passed through waivers. The Yankees designated González for assignment last week.

THROWBACK FLIGHT

With the Yankees heading to Toronto after the Subway Series, players were told to wear throwback baseball jerseys on their team flight.

Gerrit Cole, who grew up near Angel Stadium, had a Garret Anderson jersey in his locker. Tommy Kahnle went with his favorite childhood player, Reds great Barry Larkin. Caleb Ferguson, a former Dodger, repped Jackie Robinson. Alex Verdugo honored the late Willie Mays with a Giants jersey, while Jose Trevino paid tribute to Pirates legend Roberto Clemente.

Nestor Cortes chose a Giancarlo Stanton Marlins jersey, as he grew up a fan of his current teammate's former team. Marcus Stroman picked a Black Yankees jersey. He purchased it when he visited the Negro Leagues Museum when the Bombers were recently in Kansas City. A few current Yankees chose the franchise's former greats. Jahmai Jones had a Mickey Mantle jersey, while DJ LeMahieu had a classic Babe Ruth uniform. Clay Holmes went with Mariano Rivera.

PURPLE REIGNS IN QUEENS

Mr. Met takes back seat as Grimace-mania grips Citi Field

BY PETER SBLENDORIO
NEW YORK DAILY NEWS

Grimace impersonators infiltrated the Subway Series.

The Mets' goofy Grimace phenomenon reached new heights Tuesday night when numerous fans showed up dressed as the purple McDonald's mascot for the first of two games against the Yankees at Citi Field.

The Mets have been on a roll ever since an actual Grimace mascot threw out the ceremonial first pitch before a game at Citi Field on June 12. They were 28-37 at the time, but immediately went on a seven-game win streak and, with Tuesday's 9-7 victory over their crosstown rivals, came into Wednesday night 38-39.

"Grimace is our god," Amanda Indart, who was one of multiple fans to wear a full Grimace suit Tuesday, told the Daily News. "He's our winning mascot. He had us on that winning streak, so I was hoping he could bring us some good luck for the Subway Series."

Citi Field erupted with cheers Tuesday when the jumbotron showed side-by-side videos of Indart and another fan in a Grimace suit – Tommy McDougall of Bethpage – dancing in different parts of the ballpark.

A closer investigation revealed more fans dressed in subtler Grimace garb, including T-shirts under their Mets jerseys.

And it happened organically.

Indart, 34, volunteered to wear her fleece suit after a friend bought it amid the Mets' Grimace hype. McDougall already owned his after dressing as the peculiar character for Halloween last year.

"Once the Grimace snowball started building up and the Mets kept getting wins and wins and wins, I said, 'What better place to come than Citi Field,' " McDougall, a 41-year-old retired firefighter, told The News.

"Baseball's a very unique sport in that you can use rallying cries," added McDougall, who brought two of his five kids to Tuesday's game. "They've used monkeys before and billy goats, and the Mets just stumbled upon Grimace. I just say, 'If you're a Mets fan, roll with it.'"

Indeed, Mets fans were also quick this season to embrace the "Rally Pimp," a fan named Max Wiener whose arrival in colorful attire coincided with an April win streak.

With Guy Fieri, Mike Piazza, Donovan Mitchell and Kenny "the Jet" Smith among those in attendance at a sold-out Citi Field on Tuesday, it was the Grimaces who turned into the biggest stars.

"Little kids are coming up, taking pictures of me," Indart said. "It's so cute. They're hugging me. I'm giving them high-fives. I'm afraid to take it off because I don't want them to see me without the head on."

Even on a warm night with a first-pitch temperature of 84 degrees, McDougall and Indart said dressing up in the steamy suits was worth it.

"He's kind of an oddball," Indart, a Queens native now living in Lake Grove, N.Y., said of Grimace.

"The Mets are kind of an oddball. It's hit or miss with the Mets. Sometimes we win. Sometimes we lose. Sometimes we get these good streaks."

Pete Alonso is happy to run into Aaron Judge this week. GETTY

Pete glad to be part of slugger summit

BY PETER SBLENDORIO
NEW YORK DAILY NEWS

A few hours ahead of the start of this week's Subway Series, Pete Alonso had a succinct way of describing Aaron Judge's 2024 season.

"It's absolutely insane," the Mets slugger said.

That praise came before Judge slugged a grand slam in the Yankees' 9-7 loss on Tuesday at Citi Field for his MLB-leading 29th home run of the year.

It was Judge's 11th home run in his 22nd career Subway Series game.

"He's known for his power, but the thing that's most impressive is his plate discipline and his ability just to consistently hit line drives," Alonso said of Judge.

"I think that's one of the most underrated things about him. Obviously, he's one of the best in the world, but I think his ability of just controlling the strike zone gets overlooked. He's a line-drive hitter with tremendous strength."

Entering play Wednesday, Judge also led the majors with 75 RBI, a .700 slugging percentage and a 1.128 OPS. His 23 home runs over his previous 46 games were more than any other MLB outfielder had hit all season. His 57 RBI over that stretch matched teammate Juan Soto's total for 2024.

In many ways, Judge and Alonso are inextricably linked.

Judge's 52 home runs as a rookie in 2017 set an MLB record, until Alonso broke it with 53 two years later.

Alonso's 208 home runs since the start of the 2019 season lead all MLB hitters. Judge is second with 203, though he reached that amount in 141 fewer games.

"They've both kind of been the faces of their teams during this stretch," Aaron Boone said.

"Pete has established himself as one of the great home-run hitters in the game, period. And obviously Aaron Judge (is) one of, if not the, best players in the game over the last several years," he continued. "Two great players, playing in New York City, and obviously have handled the stage very well."

Alonso has also been productive during his Subway Series career. A sacrifice fly in Tuesday's win marked his 22nd RBI in 23 games against the Yankees, to go along with eight home runs.

With Tuesday's win, the Mets improved to 14-11 against the Yankees since 2019.

"You've got two of the best sluggers in the game going at it in New York," said Carlos Mendoza, who coached Judge with the Yankees before becoming the Mets' manager this season.

"I've seen both guys from different dugouts," he said. "Now, having the opportunity to watch Pete up close, he's a special hitter, too, and we all know what Judgey can do. It adds something special to the rivalry."

Alonso, 29, said he has crossed paths with Judge, 32, a bit during the offseasons in Tampa. Teammates such as Harrison Bader, who has played for both organizations, speaks highly of the Yankees' captain, Alonso said.

WISHING UPON A SARR

Knicks could benefit from French star falling to Wizards at No. 2

BY KRISTIAN WINFIELD
NEW YORK DAILY NEWS

The Knicks may have just won another draft day move.

The Washington Wizards selected standout French prospect Alex Sarr with the No. 2 overall pick of the 2024 NBA Draft on Wednesday.

Sarr was projected to go No. 1 overall before flat-out refusing to work out for the Atlanta Hawks, who ultimately selected Zaccharie Risacher at the top of the draft.

Which means the Wizards came up on a player who shouldn't have been available second, and as a result, the Knicks may receive an additional first-round pick in 2025 they weren't expecting to convey next season.

That's because the Knicks own the Wizards' top-10 protected first-round pick in 2025.

The Wizards initially traded a lottery-protected 2023 first-round pick to the Houston Rockets in the Russell Westbrook deal of 2020. The pick had loosening protections following years it did not convey: top-12 protected in 2024, top-10 in 2025 and top-eight in 2026, otherwise becoming a pair of second-round picks in 2026 and 2027.

The Rockets traded the Wizards pick to the Oklahoma City Thunder for the rights to Alperen Sengun, and the Thunder then dealt three protected first-round picks from the Wizards, Detroit Pistons and Denver Nuggets to the Knicks for Ousmane Dieng, the No. 11 pick in the 2022 NBA Draft.

Dieng has logged minimal minutes on a Thunder team angling to compete for a championship.

The Pistons pick is top-13 protected in 2025, top-11 protected in 2026 and top-nine protected in 2027 before becoming a pair of second-round picks in 2027 and 2028.

The Knicks traded the Denver pick to the Charlotte Hornets as part of the three-team deal that helped offload Kemba Walker's salary in 2022.

The Pistons selected Ron Holland II fifth-overall in Wednesday's first round, but he is not expected to lift Detroit from its standing as the worst team in then NBA.

SARR COULD MOVE THE NEEDLE

The Wizards finished with the second-worst record in all of basketball last season with a 15-67 record, but Sarr's arrival could signal a turn in the tide for a team that fell way below expectations in a disappointing season last year.

Sarr joins two capable franchise cornerstones in Kyle Kuzma and Jordan Poole. Both Kuzma and Poole have won NBA titles, Kuzma with the 2020 Los Angeles Lakers, and Poole as a member of the 2022 Golden State Warriors.

The Wizards also made a coaching change, moving head coach Wes Unseld Jr. into a front office role and replacing him with former Nets assistant Brian Keefe.

Washington is now a potential threat to move ever-so slightly up the Eastern Conference standings, especially given the Nets are all-out tanking after trading Mikal Bridges to the Knicks.

It's not a given.

After all, the Wizards will want to prevent this pick from conveying and could easily do so by intentionally throwing games – tanking – toward the bottom of the standings.

Yet if Sarr – a seven-foot forward who can shoot the three, defend multiple positions and put the ball on the floor – is the generational talent some proclaim him to be, then he could lift the Wizards from the bottom of the standings into the middle.

Which is exactly where the Knicks want the Wizards for the 2025 first-round pick to convey.

Alex Sarr is greeted by NBA commissioner Adam Silver after he falls to the Hawks at No. 2 in the NBA draft, something that could benefit the Knicks next season. AP

Morgan, a three-time Olympian and two-time Women's World Cup winner, was the most notable absence on the 18-player list announced Wednesday by Hayes.

The roster, the youngest for the U.S. since 2008, signals a shift in the team as it looks toward the 2027 Women's World Cup under Hayes.

The 34-year-old Morgan missed more than a month with the San Diego Wave after she injured her left ankle on April 19, but she had since returned. She also was named to the squad Hayes assembled for a pair of U.S. friendlies against South Korea this month.

Morgan, who has 123 goals in 224 appearances with the national team, missed the latest Wave match last weekend as an excused absence.

"Today, I'm disappointed about not having the opportunity to represent our country on the Olympic stage," Morgan posted on X. "This will always be a tournament that is close to my heart and I take immense pride any time I put on the crest."

'SLATS' RETIRING

SPORTSwire

Hockey Hall of Famer Glen Sather, who built and coached the NHL's last great dynasty with the Oilers in the 1980s and helped resurrect the Rangers in the early 2000s, is retiring after six decades in the sport as a player, coach and executive.

The Rangers announced the retirement on Wednesday, two days after the NHL season ended with the Panthers beating the Oilers in Game 7 for the franchise's first Stanley Cup.

NHL commissioner Gary Bettman congratulated Sather on a remarkable career highlighted by five Cup wins in seven years by the Oilers.

"Whether with the dynastic Edmonton Oilers teams of the 1980s, the contending New York Rangers clubs of recent years or various iterations of Team Canada, Sather always showed a keen eye for elite talent and a deft touch for bringing out its best," Bettman said in a statement.

Sather, who was inducted into the Hall of Fame in 1997 in the builder category, won five Stanley Cups as the Oilers' general manager. He was also the head coach for the first four of them, with John Muckler in charge for the last one in 1990.

GARY ON IL FOR BREWERS

The Brewers placed catcher Gary Sánchez on the 10-day injured list and added Dallas Keuchel to the active roster to start Wednesday against the Rangers.

The move with Sánchez, who has a left calf strain, was retroactive to June 24. He is hitting .218 with seven home runs and 21 RBI.

Milwaukee sent cash to the Mariners on Tuesday to acquire Keuchel, a 36-year-old left-hander who had spent all of this season in the minors.

BAM TO STAY WITH HEAT

Bam Adebayo, one of the NBA's top defensive players and soon to become a two-time U.S. Olympian, intends to sign a three-year, $166 million extension with the Heat when the league's offseason moratorium on such moves is lifted next month, a person with knowledge of the decision said Wednesday.

Miami's captain and starting center has two years and $72 million remaining on his current deal with the Heat, the only team that he's played for since Miami drafted him in 2017.

ON THIS DATE

JUNE 27

1958: Billy Pierce of the Chicago White Sox retired 26 straight Washington batters before pinch-hitter Ed Fitzgerald hit a double just inside the right-field line for the only hit. Pierce then struck out Albie Pearson on three pitches and beat the Senators 3-0.

1973: David Clyde, a $125,000, 18-year-old bonus baby with the Rangers, pitched five innings, struck out eight and allowed one hit in his first major league start. Texas beat the Twins 4-3 before 35,698 fans--the Rangers' first home sellout at Arlington Stadium.

1980: The Los Angeles Dodgers' Jerry Reuss pitched a no-hitter against the San Francisco Giants in an 8-0 victory at Candlestick Park. The only player to reach base was Jack Clark in the first inning on a throwing error by shortstop Bill Russell.

1986: San Francisco rookie Robby Thompson set a major league record when he was caught stealing four times in the Giants' 7-6, 12-inning victory over the Cincinnati Reds.

1993: Anthony Young of the Mets set a major league record by losing his 24th straight decision, 5-3 to the Cardinals.

NBA DRAFT

RECAPPING THE FIRST ROUND IN BROOKLYN

Vive la France!

Historic draft for the French, joining US as only country with 3 players in top 10

By Teresa M. Walker
Associated Press

The NBA may have to rethink the timing of its annual draft. Not the month, but a tweak to the hour the picks start coming off the board.

Paris is six hours ahead of New York, so French basketball fans eager to see history had to stay up into the wee hours of Thursday morning to see France join the United States as the only countries with three players drafted in the top 10 picks of an NBA draft.

And as the first round was a coming to an end, a total of four Frenchmen had been drafted: Zaccharie Risacher. Alex Sarr. Tidjane Salaun. Pacome Dadiet.

The question going into Wednesday night's draft was whether Risacher or Sarr would hear their name called as the No. 1 pick overall by Commissioner Adam Silver, and become the second straight Frenchman to be take first overall on the heels of last season's eventual Rookie of the Year Victor Wembanyana.

Atlanta made Risacher that player.

Washington took 7-footer Sarr at No. 2, making a second straight draft the Wizards selected a player from France. Then the NBA draft really took on a decidedly French flavor with Charlotte helping France make history by selecting Salaun at No. 6 overall.

France made it a quartet when the New York Knicks drafted Dadiet as the 25th pick overall. Dadiet, who turns 19 in July, is a developing player at 6-8 who can finish at the rim. He is also a versatile defender who has been honing his game in Germany.

Risacher (pronounced Ree-zah-shay) said it means a lot for all of France and the country's booming basketball pipeline to the NBA.

"I know that a lot of France stayed up all night to watch this," Risacher said." That's amazing for French basketball, and I'm so happy to be a part of something special for my country. I think it's going to be more players who will be able to get to the NBA and do something great. I'm really proud to be a part of it."

This is the second straight year Washington went for a player from France. The Wizards traded up a spot a year ago, swapping lottery picks with Indiana to land Bilal Coulibaly.

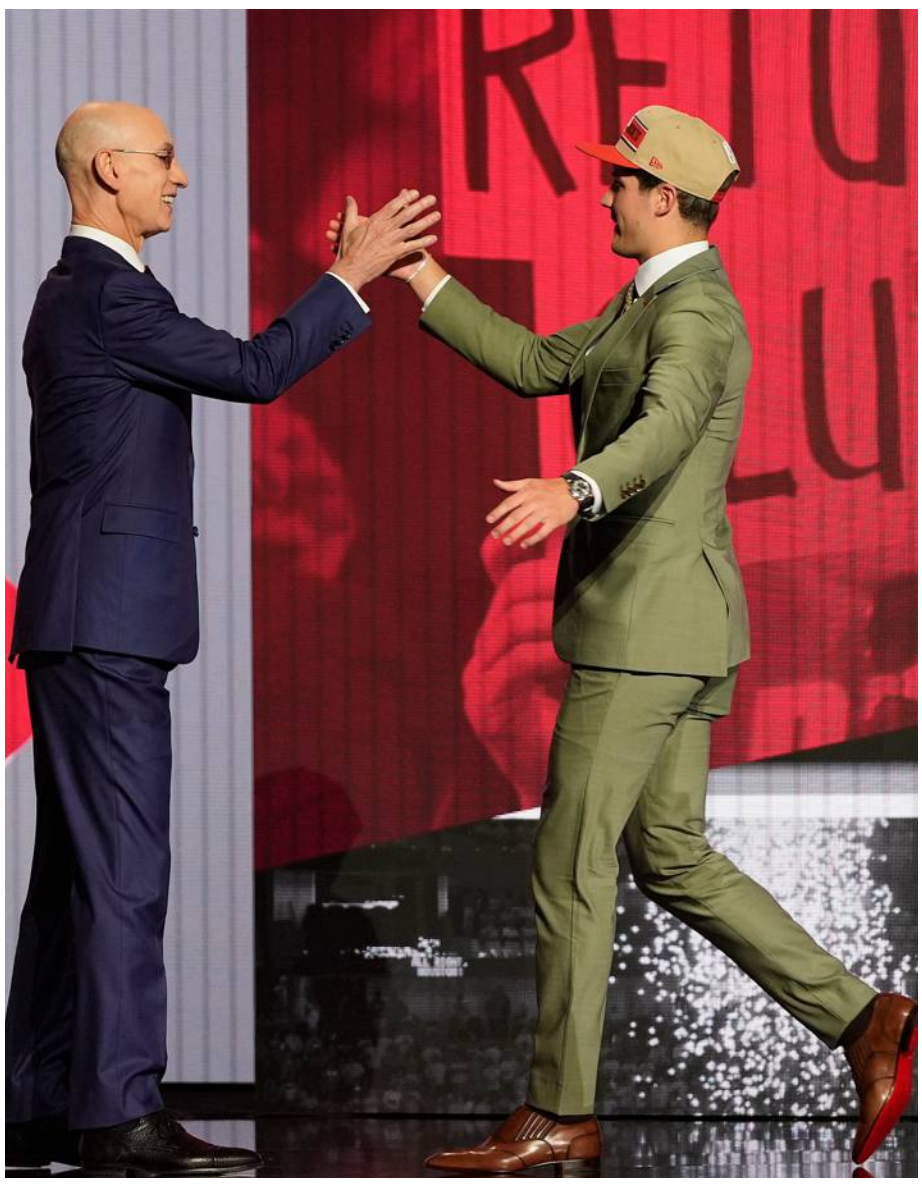

The timing couldn't be better for France, which is hosting the 2024 Summer Olympics.

The country Tony Parker win four NBA titles with the San Antonio Spurs are a true gold medal threat thanks in part to Minnesota center Rudy Gobert, this season's NBA Defensive Player of the Year.

Salaun said French players have improved with their impact now being felt in the world.

"It's just the beginning," Salaun said.

Sheppard, Castle picked right after Frenchmen

By Brian Mahoney
Associated Press

NEW YORK — While the NBA's French revolution was the highlight of Wednesday night, other big names made noise in the draft.

Houston made Kentucky freshman Reed Sheppard the No. 3 pick. A one-and-done college player had topped the draft for 13 straight years from 2010-22 before Victor Wembanyama ended that streak.

Now the draft is under French rule.

Stephon Castle of two-time reigning national champion UConn made it two straight college freshmen when San Antonio took him at No. 4, the Spurs' first of two picks in the top 10. They also held the No. 8 selection — though they dealt the rights to that pick, Kentucky guard Rob Dillingham, to Minnesota.

But the Spurs are holding onto Castle, who had a phone call with Wembanyama and can now throw passes to him to ease his transition from Dan Hurley in his old home to Gregg Popovich in his new one.

"I was just playing for the best coach in college basketball and now flipping to the NBA and going to play for a legendary coach like Coach Pop, it's a blessing," Castle said.

The Detroit Pistons took Ron Holland of the G League Ignite with the fifth pick before the Hornets took Tidjane Salaun, who played last year for Cholet Basket in France.

"I think the basketball in France is improved that's why we are here in this draft," Saluan said.

Clingan, who won titles in both seasons in Storrs, finally went to Portland at No. 7.

The draft moved to a two-night format this year, with the first round being held as usual at Barclays Center in Brooklyn and the second round to be held Thursday at ESPN's Seaport District studios.

The green room was filled with a number of unfamiliar faces who will head to the NBA from other leagues or other countries. A player who would have been one of the most recognizable was not in the arena: Zach Edey, the two-time AP Player of the Year from Purdue, was taken at No. 9 by Memphis.

Another All-American, Tennessee's Dalton Knecht, went lower than predicted, after dropping from an expected lottery pick to the Los Angeles Lakers at No. 17.

SCOUTING REPORTS ROUND 1, TOP TO BOTTOM

The players selected in the first round of the NBA draft Wednesday night in Brooklyn.
— Aaron Beard, Associated Press

1. Atlanta Hawks — Zaccharie Risacher, forward, 6-9, 215, JL Bourg-en-Bresse (France)
Scouting report: A developing player with two-way potential. Has guard skills and showed catch-and-shoot ability after making 39% of 3-pointers between league and Eurocup play. Turned 19 in April and must get stronger. Averaged 0.9 assists and 1.6 turnovers to highlight a need to improve as a playmaker.

2. Washington Wizards — Alex Sarr, center, 7-0, 224, Perth (Australia)
Scouting report: Has athleticism, mobility and length offering upside as a shot blocker, switchable defender and rim-running lob threat. Grew up in France but spent two seasons with Overtime Elite developmental program in Atlanta, then played in Australian-based National Basketball League. Ranked among NBL leaders in blocks (1.5) despite averaging just 17.3 minutes. Has 7-4 wingspan. Must add strength and improve outside shot (29% on 3-pointers).

3. Houston Rockets (from Brooklyn) — Reed Sheppard, guard, 6-2, 182, Kentucky
Scouting report: The shooting stroke stands out. He hit 52.1% of 3s last year and 83% of his free throws. Elite potential as a catch-and-shoot threat. Averaged 4.5 assists to show potential for both guards spots. Uncertain how he'll match up with bigger guards, particularly off the ball.

4. San Antonio Spurs — Stephon Castle, guard, 6-6, 210, UConn
Scouting report: A combo guard with size and ability to overpower smaller defenders. Big potential as a defender and playmaker. Accepted complementary role in Huskies' run to a second straight NCAA title despite his touted-recruit status. Must improve outside shot (26.7% on 3s).

5. Detroit Pistons — Ron Holland II, forward, 6-7, 197, G League Ignite
Scouting report: Offers versatility with floor-running ability to attack the rim. Has 6-11 wingspan and defensive upside. Made 24% of 3s. Had 42 turnovers against 45 assists in injury-shortened season. Turns 19 in July. McDonald's All-American who bypassed college basketball.

6. Charlotte Hornets — Tidjane Salaun, forward, 6-9, 217, Cholet (France)
Scouting report: A fluid athlete with a nearly 7-2 wingspan. Offers long-term potential to stretch defenses and harass smaller perimeter players. Still honing outside shot (32% on 3s last season). Turns 19 in August.

7. Portland Trail Blazers — Donovan Clingan, center, 7-2, 282, UConn
Scouting report: Imposing rim-protecting force (7-7 wingspan) and floor-running finisher for two-time reigning NCAA champs. Averaged 2.5 blocks in just 22.6 minutes. Value highlighted in Illinois going 0 for 19 in Clingan-challenged shots in NCAA Elite Eight. Unclear how well he'd handle switches to defend in space. Poor free-throw shooter (55.8% career).

8. San Antonio (from Toronto) — Rob Dillingham, guard, 6-1, 164, Kentucky
Scouting report: Shows potential as a scoring playmaker after one college season. Averaged 15.2 points and 3.9 assists. Shot 44.4% on 3s while attempting 4.5 per game. Turns 20 in January. Needs to add strength to undersized frame.

9. Memphis Grizzlies — Zach Edey, center, 7-4, 299, Purdue
Scouting report: Two-time AP men's national player of the year. Led Boilermakers to NCAA final in April after leading nation in scoring (25.2) and ranking second in rebounding (12.2). Massive presence with 7-11 wingspan. Defensive mobility a question.

10. Utah Jazz — Cody Williams, forward, 6-7, 178, Colorado
Scouting report: Versatile wing shot 55.2% overall and 41.5% from 3-point range in his lone season. Has 7-1 wingspan but needs to get stronger. Must improve as a rebounder (3.0), highlighted by grabbing three rebounds in 64 minutes across three NCAA Tournament games. McDonald's All-American and program's first five-star recruit in more than two decades.

11. Chicago Bulls — Matas Buzelis, forward, 6-9, 197 pounds, G League Ignite
Scouting report: Exploits matchups, scoring over smaller defenders and driving past bigger ones. Can attack off the dribble or score on stepbacks. Averaged 2.1 blocks with a 6-10 wingspan. Shot just 27.3% on 3s. McDonald's All-American who bypassed college basketball.

12. Oklahoma City Thunder (from Houston) — Nikola Topic, guard, 6-6, 203, KK Crvena Zvezda (Serbia)
Scouting report: Has size and playmaking ability at the point. Has vision to set up teammates with the capability of creating his own shot, attacking the paint and finishing at the rim. Outside shot needs work. Health concerns remain after two knee injuries.

13. Sacramento Kings — Devin Carter, guard, 6-2, 193, Providence
Scouting report: Boosted scoring (19.7) and 3-point shooting (.377) last season. Tied for best max vertical leap (42 inches) and standing vertical (35) at the combine. Spent two years with Providence after transferring from South Carolina.

14. Portland Trail Blazers (from Golden State via Boston and Memphis) — Carlton "Bub" Carrington, guard, 6-4, 195, Pittsburgh
Scouting report: Averaged 13.8 points, 5.2 rebounds and 4.1 assists as one-and-done floor leader with all-around potential. Had an opening-night triple-double. Must improve outside shot (32% on 3s).

15. Miami Heat — Kel'el Ware, center, 7-0, 230, Indiana
Scouting report: Oregon transfer averaged 15.9 points, 9.9 rebounds and 1.9 rebounds as an every-game starter for the Hoosiers. Made 17 of 40 3s (.425). Has 7-5 wingspan and tested well in agility at the combine. Must improve at the foul line (63.4% last year). Turned 20 in April.

16. Philadelphia 76ers — Jared McCain, guard, 6-2, 203, Duke
Scouting report: One-and-done player who rapidly became the Blue Devils' toughest competitor. Made 41% of 3s and 89% of free throws. Had two 30-point showings in the NCAA Tournament.

17. Los Angeles Lakers — Dalton Knecht, guard, 6-5, 212, Tennessee
Scouting report: Big scorer in off-the-bounce and catch-and-shoot scenarios. First-team AP All-American who averaged 21.7 points and shot 39.7% from behind the arc. Active player who tested well at the combine in agility. Uncertainty about his athleticism and mobility defensively. Turned 23 in April.

18. Orlando Magic — Tristan da Silva, forward, 6-8, 217, Colorado
Scouting report: Veteran scorer from Germany with 98 career starts. Averaged 15.9 points while shooting 39.5% on 3s in a leading role the past two years. Turned 23 last month.

19. Toronto Raptors (from Indiana) — Ja'Kobe Walter, guard, 6-4, 198, Baylor
Scouting report: One-and-done prospect who fearlessly launched from behind the arc. Took 57% of his shots there and had 13 games with at least three made 3s, but shot just 34% on those.

20. Cleveland Cavaliers — Jaylon Tyson, forward, 6-6, 218, California
Scouting report: Took a big leap offensively after going from Texas to Texas Tech and finally Cal last season. Averaged 19.6 points last season, up from 10.7 the previous year. Made 37.8% of 3s over the past two seasons.

21. New Orleans Pelicans (from Milwaukee) — Yves Missi, center, 6-11, 229, Baylor
Scouting report: Bouncy, raw prospect from Cameroon. Flashed athleticism as a lob threat (61.4% shooting) and shot blocker (1.5 per game) in lone college season. Turned 20 last month.

22. Phoenix Suns — DaRon Holmes II, forward/center, 6-9, 236, Dayton
Scouting report: Atlantic 10 co-player and defensive player of the year. Averaged 19.3 points and 8.3 rebounds over last two seasons. Expanded range last year (38.6% on 3s). Averaged 2.1 blocks over three-year career with 7-1 wingspan.

23. Milwaukee Bucks (from New Orleans) — AJ Johnson, guard, 6-4, 167, Illawara (Australia)
Scouting report: Former Texas recruit bypassed college to play in the Australian-based National Basketball League. Averaged 2.9 points in 7.7 minutes. Has length but a slight frame.

24. New York Knicks (from Dallas) — Kyshawn George, forward, 6-7, 209, Miami
Scouting report: Offers long-term potential as a shooter with size. Hit 40.8% of 3s in lone college season but did little inside the arc (28 of 81 made shots, 34.6%).

25. New York Knicks — Pacome Dadiet, forward, 6-8, 217, Ratiopharm Ulm (Germany)
Scouting report: A developing player from France with potential as a rim finisher with 3-point range. Projects as a versatile defender. Turns 19 in July.

26. Washington Wizards (from LA Clippers via Dallas and Oklahoma City) — Dillon Jones, guard, 6-5, 237, Weber State
Scouting report: A scorer with a strong frame. Averaged 20.8 points and 5.2 assists. An elite rebounder by averaging 10.5 boards over his last three seasons. Shot just 32% from 3-point range over his four-year career.

27. Minnesota Timberwolves — Terrence Shannon Jr., guard, 6-6, 219, Illinois
Scouting report: AP third-team All-American last year as nation's No. 3 scorer (23.0). Downhill attacker who shot 36% on 3s. Texas Tech transfer who blossomed as a scorer in two seasons with Illinois. Recently found not guilty on a rape charge to resolve a legal case closely watched by scouts.

28. Denver Nuggets — Ryan Dunn, forward, 6-6, 214, Virginia
Scouting report: Massive defensive potential with nearly 7-2 wingspan. Can protect the rim (2.3 blocks) or the perimeter. Offensive game is a question.

29. Utah Jazz (from Oklahoma City via Toronto and Indiana) — Isaiah Collier, guard, 6-3, 205, USC
Scouting report: Can attack the rim with strong frame and quickness. Averaged 16.3 points and 4.3 assists as a one-and-done floor leader. Averaged 3.3 turnovers for a 15-18 team.

30. Boston Celtics — Baylor Scheierman, guard/forward, 6-6, 202, Creighton
Scouting report: South Dakota State transfer averaged 15.5 points, made 197 3-pointers and shot 37.3% on 3s in two seasons with Bluejays. Lacks elite athleticism and must develop defensively.
