

From:

Address:

To:

Date:

Notice of Removal of Presumed right of: Loco Parentis

(Latin - "in the place of a parent")

Notice to agent is notice to principal, notice to principal is notice to agent.

Dear

under the present criminal 'rules' and 'guidelines' of the present administration, of which by law I must not adhere to, I hereby remove all presumed authority from the system of education in whatever capacity or form it may be with regard to my child/ren under your care and protection.

According to our Common law Constitution, you have a 'Duty of Care' naturally over the well being of all of the children under your care and protection, which is the limit of the authority that you retain and can legally presume and or exercise.

If any action is taken by any individual whatsoever by presumed authority in anyway other than what has been asserted herein, without first obtaining the expressed consent of the parent(s), you shall be held personally liable for any/all harm or stress caused in anyway whatsoever.

No government, police, military nor health department agent has any lawful right to interfere in anyway with those under your care and protection, and especially without the parents expressed written consent.

I also have a duty by law to inform you that clause 61 (security clause) of Magna Carta 1215 was invoked by observing the correct protocols of English/British Constitutional law on the 23rd March 2001, by a quorum of 25 Lords, Viscounts, Dukes etc, after receiving an unsatifactory reply from Elizabeth II to the Petition which had been previously served. The reply the Committee of the Barons received gave them no other choice but to invoke clause 61. It remains in effect today.

On the 24th March 2001 the Daily Telegraph reported on clause 61 being invoked within an article entitled 'Peers Petition Queen on Europe'. This article is available online for your perusal. Clause 61 was invoked in order to counter the treason committed by the signing of the Treaty of Nice (France) in 2000 By Anthony Lynton Blair (PM).

Whereas I stand under the invocation of clause 61 I have a duty to "compel those unwilling" or unaware to swear an Oath to protect the Constitution via the Barons. You are hereby on Notice.

Without Malice nor ill will, served under duress on penalty of perjury.

Signed:

Witnessed by:

1.

2.

3.