

Somewhere to Sleep

Little Bear had been playing in the sun all year. He was happily watching the world go by when the first snowflake fell. It landed on his nose.

“Hmm,” he said to himself. “I think it’s time I found a special, snuggly, warm place to spend the winter.” So off he went to find one.

It snowed harder and the wind howled.
Little Bear found a hollow log.

“This would make a perfect home for me,”
he thought. “Dry and dark and out of the wind.”
And he wriggled his nose inside.

“It’s far too prickly in here for you,” said the hedgehogs. So Little Bear ran off in surprise.

Beside the river, Little Bear found a hole in the bank.

"This would make a perfect home for me," he said to himself. "Warm and snug with a lovely view!"

"It's already taken!" croaked the toads, "and it's much too slimy for you!" So Little Bear ran off again.

The snow fell thickly, and the wind blew colder.
Little Bear stomped up to a big cave.

“This cave would make a perfect winter home,”
he said. “There’s lots of space for me to sleep.”

“But it’s my home!” said the big bear who showed his big teeth. “And it’s much too scary for me!” gulped Little Bear, and scampered away to safety.

Little Bear was all alone.
There was only one more place for him to try.

“I’ll go and look, but there probably won’t be room
for me,” he thought sadly.

When Little Bear peeped inside, a lovely sight met his eyes! A friendly little bear, quite like himself, was smiling at him.

“Come inside, Little Bear. It’ll be warmer with two!” Little Bear forgot that he’d been sad and gratefully clambered in.

Outside, the snow fell, the wind blew, and the ground became harder. But inside their den two little bears slept warm and snug until springtime.

The first snowflakes are falling and it's time for Little Bear to settle down for winter.
But the other animals will not share their homes and Little Bear is left all alone. Will no one find him
somewhere to sleep?

This is a charming story of kindness and friendship with moving pictures on every page.
