Read and then choose the correct answer to questions 58-60.

The central Arctic is an ice mass formed from part of the ocean, whereas the Antarctic is continental. Surrounding the Arctic are land masses which, in most cases, extend southward to the tropics. The Antarctic, on the other hand, is the only continent entirely set off from the rest of the world by great oceans. Furthermore, at some point of man's history, all of the other continents, except Australia, were joined by land bridges. Even Australia had been easy to reach by canoe. However, the only place Antarctica even approaches another continent is the long finger of the Antarctic Peninsula, reaching within 600 miles of Cape Horn, the southernmost tip of South America. In addition to distance, ice and stormy seas kept anyone from seeing this continent until about 1820.

58. The difference between the Arctic and Antarctic is that

A) it is much easier to sail through the Arctic oceans than the ones around Antarctica
B) the Arctic is frozen water surrounded by land, while the

Antarctic is land surrounded by water
C) the climate in the Arctic is much more likely to be tropical than that in Antarctic regions
D) the Arctic continent is more easily accessible than the one in the Antarctic region

59. We can conclude that

A) Antarctica used to be connected to South America by a land bridge
B) throughout man's history, canoes have-been the most popular means of travelling to Australia
C) until the construction of a bridge connecting it to the mainland, Australia could only be reached by boat
D) with the exception of Australia and Antarctica, it used to be possible to walk between the other continents

60. The passage tells us that

A) South Americans were the first people to set foot on Antarctica
B) Antarctica was discovered in the early nineteenth century
C) at its nearest point, Antarctica is visible from the southernmost point of South America
